NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

In 2021, Eritrea is receiving an assessment of no advancement. Despite initiatives to address child labor, Eritrea is assessed as having made no advancement because it demonstrated complicity in the use of forced child labor. Government officials continued to force students in grade 12, some whom are under the age of 18, to participate in military training elements of the government's compulsory national service program. Otherwise, the government made efforts by maintaining its Child Wellbeing Committees. Children in Eritrea are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced military training associated with national service and forced agricultural labor. Moreover, Eritrea's minimum age protections do not apply to children working outside formal employment relationships, and therefore do not conform to international standards. In addition, the government does not have a mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Eritrea are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced military training associated with national service and forced agricultural labor. (1) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Eritrea. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		60.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (2)

Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2022. (3)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, activities unknown (4,5)
	Herding livestock (4-7)
Industry	Mining, including gold (8)
	Small-scale manufacturing (9)
Services	Domestic work, including fetching water and firewood (4,9)
	Working in auto mechanic shops, bicycle repair shops, tea and coffee shops, metal workshops, grocery stores, the Asmara bowling alley, and open markets (1,6,9,10)
	Street work, including vending, cleaning cars, and begging (1,4,9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Compulsory participation in national service or military training associated with national service prior to age 18, and in forced agricultural and domestic work (5,11-13)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (14)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

The Proclamation on National Service No. 82/1995 establishes compulsory military training and service, known as National Service, for all citizens ages 18 to 40. (5,12,15) To graduate from high school and meet the compulsory training component of national service, students are required to complete their final year of schooling (grade 12) at the Warsay Yika'alo Secondary School located at the Sawa military complex. Each year, 11,000 to 15,000 students enter grade 12 at Sawa, and while many of these students have typically reached age 18 by the time they participate in the military training component of 12th grade schooling, some are reportedly as young as age 16. (5,12,14,16) During the year at Sawa, 4 months are devoted to mandatory military training, which includes military discipline and procedures, weapons training, a survival exercise, and a 2-to-4 week war simulation. Some conscripts are forced to perform agricultural labor on government-owned farms. (13,15,17) In addition, conscientious objectors, including young Jehovah's Witnesses, are not given an alternative to military service and are prevented from receiving a high school diploma, a national ID card, a regional residence card and food subsidies, opening a bank account, or any kind of official employment unless they agree to military service. This leaves them vulnerable to becoming involved in illegal activity, including the worst forms of child labor. (18,19)

Without completion of (and official release from) national service assignments, Eritrean children face a future of indefinite national service. They endure notoriously harsh conditions at Sawa, including allegations of sexual harassment of female students. Many are later unable to earn higher wages in the private sector. (5,20) These factors underlie an ongoing exodus of unaccompanied minors from the country. (4,14,21,22) Adolescent children, some as young as age 14, who attempted to leave Eritrea were sometimes detained or forced to undergo military training, despite being younger than the minimum age of 18 for compulsory military recruitment. (4,14,23,24) It is unclear if age verification procedures are consistently applied prior to new Sawa graduates being sent to active military service. (5,25) In addition, the military periodically conducts roundups, known as giffas, to perform identity checks. There have been reports that giffas have resulted in the imprisonment of children alleged to be attempting to evade compulsory national service and recruitment into the military. (12,14,26) Furthermore, the government did not collect or publish data on child work, child labor, or the worst forms of child labor during the reporting period. (1,5)

Children, particularly in rural areas, lack access to teachers, classrooms, transportation, uniforms, and school supplies. (5,14,18,27) To address the shortfall, through the national service program the government has deployed teachers to less populated regions to educate rural and nomadic children. (1,5) The government's national development agenda prioritizes the expansion of schooling in rural areas. (5,28,29) However, teachers may flee the country to avoid open-ended conscription into Eritrea's national service system. The resulting staff shortages and high absenteeism rates compound these challenges. (14)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Eritrea has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓ ✓
 UN CRC UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓ ✓ ✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Eritrea's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Articles 3 and 68 of the Labor Proclamation (30)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No		Articles 3, 35, and 69 of the Labor Proclamation (30)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Article 69 of the Labor Proclamation (30)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 3 and 9 of the Labor Proclamation; Articles 108(c) and 297 of the Penal Code (21,30)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 297 and 315–318 of the Penal Code (21)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 313–318 of the Penal Code (21)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Articles 390 and 391 of the Penal Code (21)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	No
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Articles 7 and 8 of the Proclamation on National Service (12)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Articles 109(e) and 111(b) of the Penal Code (21)
Compulsory Education Age	No	14‡
Free Public Education	No		Article 21 of the Constitution (31)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (22-24)

The Labor Proclamation's minimum age protections do not apply to children working outside formal employment relationships, such as those who are self-employed. This does not conform to international standards requiring all children to be protected by the minimum age to work. (30) In addition, Article 69 of the Labor Proclamation authorizes the Minister of Labor to issue a list of activities prohibited to children under age 18; however, the government has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (25) Likewise, the Labor Proclamation's hazardous work protections do not apply to children working outside formal employment relationships. (30)

Laws governing the use of children in illicit activities are not sufficient because offering and procuring a child for the production of drugs is not criminally prohibited. (21) In addition, laws regarding the commercial sexual exploitation of children are insufficient because the use of a child for prostitution is not criminally prohibited, although there are criminal penalties associated with the procurement of children under age 14. (21) Furthermore, voluntary military service of children under age 18 is not authorized in Eritrea because the Proclamation on National Service No. 82/1995, which requires compulsory national service from all citizens ages 18 to 40, defines national service in such a way that it is limited to people in that age group. (12)

Eritrea does not appear to have any laws guaranteeing free basic education or setting the compulsory education age, increasing the risk of children's involvement in child labor. However, several government policies provide free and compulsory basic education to all children below the age of 14, including the Education Sector Development Plan, the National Education Policy, and the Comprehensive National Child Policy. (25,32,33)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MoLSW)	Enforces labor laws and investigates labor abuses, including child labor. (16) According to the government, child labor inspectors operate in every administrative zone. (27)
Eritrean Police	Enforce laws and investigate referred cases of child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. (9)
Citizen Militia	Performs night patrols and refers cases of commercial sexual exploitation of children or other exploitative practices to the Eritrean police. (9)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Eritrea took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MoLSW) that may hinder adequate enforcement, including lack of referral mechanisms.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2020	2021

Because child labor laws do not extend to private farms and homes, it is unlikely inspectors inspected private farms and homes. (1) Moreover, research indicates that the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Eritrea's workforce, which includes approximately 2.7 million workers. (28) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Eritrea would need to employ about 68 labor inspectors. (28,29)

Inspectors, in collaboration with the local administrations and police, are empowered to identify and prosecute child labor violations. Penalties for labor violations are assessed in coordination with inspectors, administrators, and the police, and are adjudicated by judicial authorities. (1)

Research was unable to determine whether reciprocal referral mechanisms exist between labor authorities and social services. (9,10) The government did not provide information on its labor inspectorate efforts for inclusion in this report. (1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Eritrea took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal enforcement, including a lack of criminal law enforcement data.

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Under the Proclamation on National Service (No. 82/1995), all Eritreans over the age of 18 must undergo 6 months of compulsory military training at the National Military Training Center. (12) Despite evidence that children younger than age 18 are forced to participate in military training, research did not identify measures taken by the government in 2021 to ensure children were not subjected to compulsory military training. (5,9,13,30) The government does not publicly release information on its criminal law enforcement efforts. (9,20)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor.

Eritrea has 43 Child Well-Being Committees that operate at the local level and coordinate representatives from the political, health, educational, legal, and civil society sectors. They are charged with ensuring that children in distress receive specialized care. (1) While the committees were active in 2021, research found that their mandates are focused on reducing female genital mutilation and child marriage and do not extend to efforts to address child labor. (5,9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 8). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of efficacy in carrying out policies.

Table 8. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Comprehensive National Child Policy	Addresses underlying causes of child labor through studies of and assessments on the nature and conditions of child labor; designs advocacy and public awareness campaigns to sensitize on the worst forms of child labor; and empowers communities and the public sector to monitor and prevent child labor from occurring. (34,32) The policy calls for the provision of free and compulsory basic education to all children irrespective of gender, sex, ethnicity, religion, or disability. (35) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the policy during the reporting period.
Education Sector Development Plan (2018–2021)	Established 8 years of free and compulsory education for all children. (36,37) Included a strategy to ensure equitable access to education for all children, including in nomadic communities, through the provision of portable classrooms. (34,36) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the policy during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (33)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

NO ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT COMPLICIT IN FORCED CHILD LABOR

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Complementary Elementary Education (CEE)†	Government program created under the Education Sector Development Plan that addresses the educational needs of out-of-school children ages 9 to 14 in remote and rural areas. Condenses 5 years of elementary education into a 3-year program to allow students to either mainstream into formal education at the secondary level or access vocational education. (4,17,36) UNICEF pledged to support continuity of education for over 600,000 children in 2020–2021. (38-40) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the program during the reporting period.
UNICEF Country Program (2017–2021)	$19.5 million ($31 million requested) UNICEF-funded program nested under the UN-Eritrea Strategic Partnership Cooperation Framework (2017–2021); in collaboration with the government, expanded access to quality basic education for all children, and protected children from violence, exploitation, and abuse. (41,42) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the program during the reporting period.
Better Migration Management	EU-led program encompassing 11 countries in North, Central, and East Africa; aims to address the international labor market, including trafficking of children. The Eritrean government joined the program on May 28, 2019. (9,43) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the policy during the reporting period.

Research found no evidence of programs that target children working in agriculture, domestic work, and street work, or that address all worst forms of child labor in the country.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Eritrea (Table 10).

In 2021, Eswatini made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Government of Eswatini launched a National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor and created an interagency task force to oversee its implementation. The Deputy Prime Minister (DPM)'s office, which oversees child welfare, launched a campaign to ensure that children in Eswatini are issued identity documents, which will help orphaned and vulnerable children gain a greater access to education. However, children in Eswatini are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work, forced livestock herding, and commercial sexual exploitation. Significant gaps in the legal framework remain, including gaps in minimum age protections, a lack of legislation regulating the labor conditions under Kuhlehla and other customary practices, and a de facto compulsory education age that does not meet international standards. In addition, minimum age protections only apply to children working in industrial undertakings, which does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected by the minimum age to work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Eswatini are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work and forced livestock herding. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Eswatini.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	11.7 (35,368)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	92.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	13.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		88.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (3)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 4 (MICS 4), 2010. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Raising and herding livestock, including cattle, buffalo, goats, swine, horses, donkeys, and sheep (2,5,6)
Services	Domestic work (2,6)
	Street work, including working as vendors, bus attendants, taxi conductors, porters, and car washers (1,6-8)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in livestock herding, domestic work, farming, and market vending (1,7-11)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,6-8,10-13)
	Use in illicit activities, including growing drugs such as marijuana (6,11,12)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children perform physically arduous tasks while herding in the grasslands and mountainous regions, and risk occupational injury and disease from exposure to dangerous tools, insecticides, and herbicides. Children's injuries sustained during livestock herding include open wounds, fractures, dislocations and sprains, fever, extreme fatigue, and snake bites. (5) In addition, there is evidence that children are increasingly involved in the production—but not the dealing or trafficking—of marijuana, which remains illegal. (2,6,11)

Eswatini

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Research suggests that in recent years, children from neighboring countries have been trafficked through Eswatini for purposes of sexual exploitation. There are also reports that Swati children, particularly orphaned and vulnerable girls from poor families, have been lured into sexual exploitation through promises of good jobs in neighboring countries, particularly South Africa. (2)

The government provides free primary education from grade one through grade seven and subsidizes secondary education for the approximately 70 percent of Eswatini's children who are orphaned or vulnerable. At the lower secondary and upper secondary levels, however, the cost of school fees was a barrier for students whose families lacked sufficient funds to sustain their enrollment. (2,6,14)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Eswatini has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Eswatini's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work at or above that required by international standards.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Articles 234 and 238 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Section 97 of the Employment Act (15,16)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 236 and 238 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Article 29 of the Constitution (15,17)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Articles 233, 236, and 237 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (15)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2, 13, 232, and 238 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Sections 144 and 145 of the Employment Act; Articles 2, 12, and 13 of the People Trafficking and People Smuggling (Prohibition) Act; Article 17 of the Constitution (15-18)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 2 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Articles 2, 3, 12, and 13 of the People Trafficking and People Smuggling (Prohibition) Act (15,18)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 42–46 of the Crimes Act; Sections 2, 13–15, 24, 25, and 38 of the Sexual Offences and Domestic Violence Act; Articles 2, 12, and 13 of the People Trafficking and People Smuggling (Prohibition) Act (18-20)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 16 and 49 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (15)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 17 of The Umbutfo Swaziland Defense Force Order (21)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Section 17 of The Umbutfo Swaziland Defense Force Order (21)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	No	12/13‡	Section 10 of the Free Primary Education Act (22)
Free Public Education	No		Section 3 of the Free Primary Education Act (22)

* Country has no conscription (21)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (22)

Both the Children's Protection and Welfare Act and the Employment Act apply minimum age protections to children working in industrial undertakings, but neither covers children working in domestic or agricultural work. (15,16) Children working in the agricultural and informal sectors often work long hours, carry heavy loads, work in remote areas, and risk exposure to harmful pesticides. (5) There is also no identification of hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children based on the current legislation. (15,16,23)

Although Section 10 of the Free Primary Education Act requires parents to send their children to school for the completion of primary education, this educational attainment is typically at ages 12 or 13. As a result, children who complete primary education at ages 12 to 14 are vulnerable to child labor, as they are not required to be in school but also cannot legally work because they are under age 15, the minimum age for work. (22,23) In addition, the Free Primary Education Act provides for free schooling for 7 years, although basic education is a total of 9 years and includes lower secondary education. The failure to provide complete free basic education may increase the risk of children's involvement in the worst forms of child labor. (22,24)

Previous reports indicated that local chiefs required residents, including children, to participate in non-communal tasks such as seasonal weeding. This work was performed through the customary practice of Kuhlehla, a practice in which people render services to the local chief or king. (14,25) There have been no recent reports that local chiefs forced residents or children to work, and research indicates that the practice is rare or non-existent. Still, the ILO has requested that the government issue legislation to regulate the nature and conditions of Kuhlehla and ensure that the law explicitly states the voluntary nature of participation in such work. (25)

A draft amendment to the Employment Act No. 5/1980 received initial feedback from Eswatini's Labor Advisory Board (LAB) in 2019 and is still awaiting a final review from the ILO and a second review by the LAB before being sent to the Cabinet and Parliament for approval. The draft bill would extend minimum age protections to children working in agriculture and domestic service, allow labor inspectors to enter private homes and farms to carry out inspections, and criminalize the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups. (6)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS)	Enforces child labor laws and promotes relations between labor, government, and business through tripartite dialogue. (14)
Royal Eswatini Police Services (REPS)	Investigates cases involving the worst forms of child labor. Informs victims of sexual offenses, including commercial sexual exploitation, of available counseling and other support services. (20,26)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Organization/Agency	Role
Trafficking in Persons Secretariat	Plays the lead role in coordinating anti-trafficking efforts. Coordinates some of the outreach programs along with the other elements of the prevention. (27)
Director of Public Prosecutions	Prosecutes cases involving the worst forms of child labor, and refers child survivors to social and legal support services. (2,20) Responsible for implementing survivor identification guidelines and referral mechanisms for victims of human trafficking and those at risk. (2)

The Department of Social Welfare offered support to victims of child labor, including orphans, and referred suspected cases of child labor to the Royal Eswatini Police Services (REPS) or to the Ministry of Labor and Social Services (MLSS). (6,14)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Eswatini took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the MLSS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial and human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (6)	Unknown (2)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (6)	Yes (2)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (6)	Yes (2)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (2)

Although the amount of funding for the labor inspectorate is unknown, research indicates that there was no funding for labor inspections during the reporting period. (2) In previous years, research indicated that labor inspectors lacked sufficient resources, such as vehicles, to conduct inspections. (2,6,12,26) In addition, based on the number of labor inspectors, there remains a lack of labor inspectors for the size of Eswatini's workforce, which includes approximately 427,900 workers. (28) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Eswatini would employ about 24 labor inspectors, and would require the hiring of 11 additional inspectors to meet this threshold. (29,30)

Due to civil unrest, spikes in COVID-19 cases, and restrictions in movement put in place by the government, there were limited inspections conducted by the labor inspectorate, although the total number is unknown. (2)

While a mechanism to assess civil penalties exists, inspectors are not allowed to assess penalties. They must refer the matter to the police, who in turn refer to the office of the Director of Public Prosecutions (DPP) for framing formal charges against a company or individual. (2) If the case is prosecuted and concluded against the employer, then the courts will determine the fines. (2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Eswatini took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (6)	Yes (2)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (6)	N/A (2)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (6)	Yes (2)
Number of Investigations	1 (6)	0 (2)
Number of Violations Found	1 (6)	N/A (2)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	1 (6)	N/A (2)

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (6)	N/A (2)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (2)

REPS lacked sufficient resources to fulfill its full mandate and carry out child labor investigations and likely will continue to lack sufficient resources due to the ongoing economic crisis and budget cuts in Eswatini. (2,6,14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Children's Services Department	Evaluates and reviews existing national legal instruments governing the treatment of children to ensure compliance with international child treatment standards, provisions, and practices. Also monitors and evaluates national policies, plans, and programs, and ensures that stakeholders collaborate and contribute toward a national child development agenda. (26) Research was unable to determine whether the Children's Services Department was active during the reporting period.
The Anti-Human Trafficking Task Force	Coordinates the implementation of the People Trafficking and People Smuggling (Prohibition) Act of 2009 with the support of the Trafficking in Persons Secretariat. Formulates policies and programs to prevent and suppress human trafficking and people smuggling, including programs to provide assistance to survivors and increase the public's awareness of the causes and consequences of human trafficking and smuggling, and exchanges information on cases of human trafficking among relevant stakeholders, including the police, immigration officers, social workers, and prosecutors. (18) In 2021, the Government of Eswatini assumed management of a new shelter for human trafficking survivors, which involved coordination across government and non-government entities; the shelter is expected to be fully operational in 2022. (2,31)

During the reporting period, a tripartite committee, consisting of REPS, the DPP, and the Trafficking in Persons Secretariat, met to report on cases and ensure appropriate interventions were being taken. (11)

Although the government has coordinating mechanisms that address human trafficking, the government does not have a coordinating mechanism to address all relevant child labor issues, including child labor in agriculture and domestic work. In addition, resource constraints, poor communication, and a lack of coordination between staff working on the Anti-Human Trafficking Task Force has resulted in confusion about its mandate, how to accomplish their mission, and the overall effectiveness of the task force. (12)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategic Framework and Action Plan to Combat People Trafficking (2019–2023)	Assigns responsibilities for addressing human trafficking to relevant government agencies and provides services to survivors. Aims to improve protection for survivors, prosecution for offenders, and continued prevention efforts. (32) Research was unable to determine whether actions were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor (2019–2025)†	An interagency task force was established to oversee the implementation of the new policy. A hard copy of the policy was not available for review. (2)
National Children's Policy (2009–Present)	Represents the policy framework of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act and aims to promote the rights of children, protect children from all types of abuse and exploitation, including child labor, and improve the quality of education. (33) Research was unable to determine whether actions were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

† Policy was adopted during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem.

Program	Description
Strengthen the Coordination Mechanism to Respond to Trafficking in Persons and Ensure Justice and Protection for All Victims of Trafficking in Eswatini (2019–2021)	IOM-funded, 2-year project that aimed to improve protection of human trafficking victims by developing regulations and guidelines, including for shelters, and training staff from the Anti-Human Trafficking Task Force. (6) In December 2021, the program trained law enforcement officials on countertrafficking to build their capacity to screen, identify, and refer victims to the appropriate services. (31)
Free Primary Education Program†	Provides funding to ensure free primary education to children for a period of 7 years, starting from age 6 and ending at grade seven. (26,34) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.

The offices of the Prime Minister and the Deputy Prime Minister continued to work with the Trafficking in Persons Secretariat and the Catholic Church to explore the establishment of a shelter to improve the quality of care available to victims of human trafficking. (8) In addition, the Deputy Prime Minister's office, which oversees child welfare, launched a campaign to register children to help them gain access to schools. (2) Although Eswatini has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. (8,35)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Eswatini (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

In 2021, Ethiopia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the government established a new National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2021–2025). The Ministry of Labor and Skills, together with the Confederation of Ethiopian Trade Unions and Confederation of Ethiopian Employers Federation also launched the Decent Work Country Program (2021–2025). In addition, the government significantly increased the operating budget of the labor inspectorate. However, children in Ethiopia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in domestic work and in commercial sexual exploitation. The law in Ethiopia does not include free basic education or a compulsory age for education, leaving children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Social programs to address child labor have also not sufficiently targeted sectors with high incidences of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Ethiopia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced labor in domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation. (1-3) According to the results of the 2015 Ethiopia National Child Labor Survey published in 2018, almost 16 million children from the ages of 5 to 17 were engaged in child labor. A majority of these children were found in the regions of Oromia, Amhara, and the Southern Nations, Nationalities, and Peoples' Region (SNNPR). (4) The Ethiopian Central Statistics Agency (CSA) did not collect data on child labor during the reporting period. However, the CSA, UNICEF Ethiopia, and the Center for Evaluation and Development published a report entitled "Child Labor Analysis in Ethiopia 2020." (5,6) The report supplemented CSA's 2015 Ethiopia National Child Labor Survey with new data on hard-to-reach children working in urban areas, including information about children engaged in domestic service and other work in the services sector. (5,6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Ethiopia.

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	7 to 14	41.5 (10,202,669)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Ethiopia is a source and destination country for child trafficking, both transnational and domestic. Ethiopian children voluntarily travel to Amhara, a region bordering a key irregular migration route to Europe, to harvest sesame. (12,13,19,23) This sector is allegedly linked to overland smuggling networks, with children earning enough to fund passage to Europe via North Africa. (12,13,23) Many others journey through Djibouti en route to Persian Gulf states, where they are often intercepted, repatriated, and later routed to a transition center in Addis Ababa. (12) Somaliland intercepts between 50 and 100 children a week, many under the age of 13, traveling from Amhara and Oromia to the Middle East. (12) Children who begin as voluntary migrants may be forced into commercial sexual exploitation or become victims of forced labor. (3,17,18)

Research on child trafficking victims from SNNPR and Oromia indicates that 85 percent were rescued from or escaped domestic work, while two-thirds of them suffered exploitation and abuse. While 55 percent of the surveyed children were sent to Addis Ababa by family, another 11 percent were actively exploited by brokers within their communities. (22) The children surveyed were mostly from families that continue to play a role in financing and coercing their children to go abroad or to urban areas to look for work. (17,21,24) Trusted community members, known as manamasas, recruit and groom vulnerable youth on behalf of local and international human trafficking syndicates. (18,25) Traffickers also exploit children from rural areas surrounding Addis Ababa and other regions of the country for forced labor in the weaving industry, street vending, construction, and domestic work. (18,21) In addition, traffickers exploit Ethiopian girls in commercial sex and domestic servitude in neighboring countries. (18) Moreover, children in Oromia and Amhara reportedly harvest and sell khat, a stimulant to which they may become addicted due to bodily contact with the plants' excretions during harvest. (3,10,12) The plant releases two highly addictive central nervous system stimulants (cathinone and cathine) whose acute and long-term neurological effects include khat-induced psychosis. (11,12)

In November 2020, a conflict erupted in northern Tigray between government forces and the Tigray People's Liberation Front (TPLF); the conflict is ongoing. (26) By early December, more than 45,000 Ethiopians fleeing the war had crossed into Sudan, up to one-half of whom were children. (26) Hundreds of children crossed the border alone, leaving them vulnerable to labor exploitation and human trafficking. Moreover, unconfirmed reporting indicates the TPLF has recruited children, most of them teenagers, during the conflict. (5,15,26,27) There is also one report of authorities in the Borana Zone in southern Oromia forcibly conscripting youth to join the Ethiopian National Defense Force. (3)

Some women and girls have reportedly been forced by military elements to have sex in exchange for basic commodities, though the specific military elements remain unknown. (28,29) In addition, military blockades have disrupted emergency humanitarian aid distribution networks in Tigray. (28-30) As a result of the ongoing violence, some 2.3 million children in the region lack access to humanitarian assistance, and 1.3 million were unable to attend school. (5,31,32) In addition, 12,000 children who fled to Sudan to escape the conflict in Tigray had no access to education other than makeshift classrooms set up by NGOs operating across the border. (15,33) Precise figures are in dispute, although the UN and other humanitarian organizations estimate that 1.1 million children were displaced in 2020, 66 percent due to armed conflict. (10,31,32,34) Ethnic unrest was also recorded in Oromia, Amhara, and SNNPR, and research suggests the Oromo Liberation Army-Shane may have recruited child soldiers. (5,35)

Ethiopian authorities closed all secondary schools for one week in December so that pupils could harvest crops; some of these harvested crops were for those on the frontline of the civil war. More than 2 million pupils were already out of school due to the war. (36) With infrastructure for remote learning effectively non-existent, many children remained out of school for many months, and some have still not returned. These children are acutely vulnerable to exploitation and abuse, including child labor. (15,37) Armed conflicts and resulting humanitarian crises have also disrupted education in other parts of the country. Children in rural areas face additional barriers to education, including the distance they must travel to reach school; a lack of sanitation, which especially affects adolescent girls; sexual harassment; the requirement to pay for uniforms and supplies; and a lack of teachers. The Somali and Afar regions had the lowest rates of school attendance, with only 38.6 percent of school-age children enrolled in the Somali region and 50.2 percent enrolled in the Afar region. (4,5,38) Armed elements, including the TPLF and the Ethiopian National Defense Force, targeted schools in Tigray with rocket and artillery fire. Non-state armed groups in Tigray and the western part of Oromia also occupied schools for military purposes. (10,39,40) These factors increased children's risk of entering the workforce at a young age. (9,10,32,38)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Ethiopia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Ethiopia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including free and compulsory education.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Not all Ethiopian laws related to child labor are in compliance with international standards. The types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover traditional weaving, an area of work in which there is evidence that children use dangerous machinery, equipment, and tools, and lift or transport heavy loads. (41,43) Moreover, Article 89.5 of the Labor Proclamation allows children ages 15 to 16 to engage in certain forms of hazardous work following the completion of a government-approved and inspected vocational training course. This contradicts ILO Convention 138, which prohibits hazardous work for all children under the age of 16. (41,47,48) The Government of Ethiopia notes that, in practice, children begin apprenticeships after the completion of 10th grade, typically at age 16 or 17. (49) The Ministry of Labor and Skills (MOLS) is currently revising the accompanying Directive on Prohibited Occupations for Young Workers; research has not determined whether this will extend further protections to young workers. (10,15) While Ethiopia has a policy encouraging public funding of primary education, its laws do not provide for free public education or a compulsory age for education. (5,45,50)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Skills (MOLS)	Conducts labor inspections of formal worksites through its regional Bureaus of Labor and Skills. (10) Through its National Referral Mechanism, coordinates referrals of survivors to social services providers. (24) During the reporting period, regional and city administration labor inspection offices in Addis Ababa, Amhara, Oromia, and Sidama were equipped with basic safety and health monitoring equipment, received eight motorbikes for labor inspection visits, and were provided with hundreds of packages of basic hygiene/sanitation materials to prevent COVID-19 transmission during inspection activities. (3)
Ethiopian Federal Police Commission	Enforces criminal laws against the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (10) Addresses child trafficking and assists vulnerable children through its Special Child Protection Units in Addis Ababa and other major cities. (10,19,20,51) Refers cases to the Ministry of Women and Social Affairs (MOWSA), which develops and implements programs to protect vulnerable children and monitor alleged violations of child protection laws, including the worst forms of child labor. (3) MOWSA also maintains rehabilitation centers and coordinates foster families for children rescued from the worst forms of child labor. (10)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes criminal violations of child labor laws, including through its Special Investigative Unit for Women and Children. (10)

The former Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MOLSA) was reconstituted as the Ministry of Labor and Skills (MOLS), and the former Ministry of Women, Children, and Youth (MOWCY) was also reconstituted as the Ministry of Women and Social Affairs (MOWSA). In addition, the Office of the Attorney General was reconstituted as the Ministry of Justice. (3)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Ethiopia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MOLS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including financial and human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2021, labor inspections were conducted in commercial agriculture, small and medium manufacturing industries, the services sector, and construction. However, labor inspections are often not conducted in the informal sector, and in some areas of the country, labor inspections were suspended due to conflict. (3) Data on violations are not aggregated at the national level, and the government did not publish the number of child labor violations identified as a result of these inspections. (2,3,7,10) Labor inspectors refer child labor violations to judicial authorities, who are able to assess penalties. (5,41) In addition, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Ethiopia's workforce, which includes 52.8 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Ethiopia would employ about 1,321 inspectors. (52)

Despite the increase in funding for the labor inspectorate in 2021, MOLS and other stakeholders report that a lack of resources and poor coordination among agencies hampered their ability to enforce child labor laws. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Ethiopia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including lack of collecting and publishing enforcement statistics.

While the government did provide some criminal law enforcement data for inclusion in this report, it is unclear whether the data included child labor-related cases. (2,10,18,23) Enforcement efforts continued to focus on transnational human trafficking for the purpose of forced labor, to the detriment of internal human trafficking, including trafficking of children for the purposes of commercial sexual exploitation. (18)

Ethiopian immigration and border patrol authorities refer human trafficking survivors to NGO-run shelters, in which victims are given first aid and assistance to return home. Although the shelters do not disaggregate data for children, NGOs reported that many of those receiving services were younger than age 18, some of whom may have been returning from the Persian Gulf States. (24)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including lack of coordination between agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committees	Includes the National Steering Committee on the Worst Forms of Child Labor, which coordinates activities on the worst forms of child labor. Members include MOLS, MOWSA, and the Ministry of Education. (2,17) Also includes the National Steering Committee Against Sexual Abuse and Exploitation of Children, which develops action plans and coordinates activities to address the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (17) During the reporting period, the Committee evaluated the 2019–2020 National Action Plan to eliminate child labor, and conducted visits and provided technical support to staff at project sites in the Amhara region for World Vision Ethiopia's Partnership Against Child Exploitation (PACE). The Committee also printed the National Action Plan so that it could be disseminated to stakeholders. (3)
MOLS National Forum to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Addresses the worst forms of child labor at the national level. (2,5) Research was unable to determine whether the Forum was active during the reporting period.
National Anti-Human Trafficking and Smuggling Mechanisms	Responsible for the creation of policies and strategies for the prevention of smuggling and trafficking in persons and issuing directives. (22) Chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister; and includes representatives from the Federal Attorney General's Office, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Ministry of Peace, MOLS, the Refugees and Returnees Affairs Agency, MOWSA, the Commission of Job Creation, the Ministry of Health, the Federal Police Commission, the National Bank, the Ethiopian Central Statistics Agency, the National Intelligence and Security Services, regional governments, the Civil Societies Agency, and religious institutions. Also oversees 10 working groups that specialize in multiple anti-trafficking in persons sectors, including a Women and Children Support and Protection Working Group. (5,22) Research was unable to determine whether the coordinating body was active during the reporting period.
National and Regional Task Forces on Orphans and Vulnerable Children	Promote children's rights; chaired by members of the federal government and state ministers and led by the MOWSA in all nine regional capitals and two city administrations. (53) Research was unable to determine whether task forces were active during the reporting period.

Limited committee budgets, overlapping mandates, and poor coordination between the committees and agencies hindered coordination efforts to address child labor at a national and regional level. (3,17,24)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation of policies to address child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Education and Children's Policies	Promotes children's rights and aims to improve access to education. In the case of the National Children's Policy, facilitates access to quality primary and secondary education for out-of-school youth, including in rural areas, and provides measures against exploitation and human trafficking. (54) Regarding the Ethiopian Education Development Roadmap (2018–2030), aims to make education free and compulsory, while the Education and Training Policy prioritizes government support for education through grade 10, and the Pastoralist Area Education Strategy provides for alternative education in pastoralist communities. The National Technical & Vocational Education & Training Strategy also aims to improve access to vocational education for girls and out-of-school children. (38,55–58) The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Education Sector Development Roadmap, the National Technical & Vocational Education & Training Strategy, or the National Children's Policy. (56–58)
National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2021–2025) †	Includes guidelines on child labor identification, withdrawal, reintegration, and education. Overseen by the National Steering Committee on the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (2) As part of its efforts to draft the new National Action Plan (NAP), the government convened a consultative workshop for stakeholders in April 2021 from government ministries, the ILO, the Confederation of Ethiopian Trade Unions (CETU), the Confederation of Ethiopian Employers Federation (CEEFF), and other NGOs; held a review meeting with a small MOLS team on the NAP design process in May 2021; and launched the NAP in June 2021 at a workshop attended by about 50 participants. (3)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (59,60)

In 2019, Ethiopia became a Pathfinder country under Alliance 8.7. This involves accelerating progress toward achieving commitments under Sustainable Development Goal (SDG) Target 8.7, which calls for the eradication of child labor by 2025, and the elimination of forced labor, modern slavery, and human trafficking by 2030. (61) Despite Ethiopia's voluntary engagement as a Pathfinder country and its early efforts to implement SDG 8.7 on child labor during the previous two reporting periods, Ethiopia did not participate in the first meeting for Pathfinder countries in December 2021. Ethiopia was also one of two Pathfinder countries that did not submit the requested progress report on child labor for 2021. (3) It is unclear whether Ethiopia attended the second meeting for Pathfinder countries in February 2022. (3)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2020, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Government of Ethiopia Programs	In 2021, the Ministry of Education continued the Comprehensive, Inclusive Learning and Development–School Feeding Project (CHILD-SFP), a school feeding project benefiting 163,021 pre-primary and primary school students in 499 schools in 5 regional states: Oromia, Amhara, Sidama, Somali, and Afar. (15,62) The Global Partnership for Education, a USAID partner, provided $21.4 million in funding for the school feeding project, which is implemented by Save the Children. During the reporting period, the project provided training to administrators at the districts' education offices, as well as to teachers in the target schools. (15,62) In addition, the government allocated $48,223,349 (1.9 billion birr) to the same regions to feed 1.4 million students. (15) Separately, the government established an initiative to provide temporary shelter for destitute urban children. At the direction of Ethiopian Prime Minister Abiy Ahmed, the government set aside two hectares of land in Akaki Kaliti Sub City; the Tewodros Ashenafi Foundation then provided $634,357 (25 million birr) for the construction of a transitional shelter with a holding capacity of 2,000 children. (5) The Foundation handed over management of the facility to the Addis Ababa Bureau of Labor and Social Affairs in May 2020. (15) The shelter provides basic services, including psychosocial support, life skills, education, and training, to enable children's reintegration into society. The initiative is part of Ethiopia's national reform agenda. (5,15)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Program	Description
Confederation of Ethiopian Trade Unions (CETU)†*	In 2021, CETU partnered with the Norwegian Confederation of Trade Unions to launch the "Combating Modern Slavery in Ethiopia" project that looks to reduce the prevalence of children in slavery through prevention, restoration, and capacity strengthening. (3,63) During the reporting period, the project launched its first workshop, which sought to build a broad network of stakeholders to address child slavery. (3,63)
World Vision Programs	Includes Effective Approaches in Ending the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2019–2022), an international program designed to test and measure innovative approaches to reduce the worst forms of child labor, and which targets approximately 500,000 at-risk youth in the Democratic Republic of Congo, Central African Republic, and Ethiopia, including victims of child commercial sexual exploitation and child soldiering, and children engaged in hazardous work. The program's efforts are coordinated by World Vision, with funding by a consortium of NGOs and multilaterals, including UN Global Compact, the Global Compact UK, War Child UK, Thompson Reuters, and the private sector. (12,64,65) This program has supported 1,350 children engaged in the worst forms of child labor in Dera, Libo Kemekem, and Gondar Zuria districts of Amhara since 2020. (3)
World Bank-Funded Projects†	The Ethiopia General Education Quality Improvement Program for Equity (GEQIP-E) (2017–2022)† is a $300 million program that works with the Ministry of Education to improve education quality and access. (66–68) GEQIP-E works with the Ministry of Education to create budget lines for school grants and textbooks. (69,70) During the reporting period, the project hired a support staff specialist to focus on key aspects of the project which include: increasing school enrollment; distributing textbooks and other learning materials; assisting with refugee assistance within schools; and improving existing facilities. (68)
UNICEF-Funded Programs	UNICEF-funded programs to improve social safety nets and access to education. These programs include Child-to-Child and Accelerated School Readiness programs, which extend educational opportunities to internally displaced children, and the Integrated Safety Nets Program (2017–2023). (10) UNICEF, the Swedish International Development Agency, and MOLS also jointly fund the Urban Productive Safety Net Program, which aims to build upon efforts to address nutritional and educational outcomes in Amhara and Addis Ababa through cash transfers and linking participants to basic social services. (10,71) UNICEF educational services reached one in five vulnerable children in Ethiopia, providing them with early learning as well as informal and non-formal educational services. (6,31)
USDOL-Funded Project	Includes She Thrives: Reducing Child Labor in Ethiopia's Agricultural Sector using a Gender-Focused Approach (2020–2025), a $5 million USDOL-funded, 4-year project implemented by Cooperative for Assistance and Relief Everywhere, Inc. to use a gender mainstreaming approach to address child labor in coffee production in Oromia and the Southern Nations, Nationalities, and Peoples' Region. (72) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is co-funded by the Government of Ethiopia. (15)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (3,73)

During the reporting period, MOLS, together with the Confederation of Ethiopian Trade Unions (CETU) and Confederation of Ethiopian Employers Federations (CEEFF), launched the Decent Work Country Program (DWCP, 2021–2025) for Ethiopia with support from the ILO in Addis Ababa. (3) Although the government participates in and implements several programs to address child labor, programs do not sufficiently target sectors with high incidences of child labor, such as agriculture and domestic work. (2) There is also a paucity throughout the country of rehabilitation and reintegration centers for victims of child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (1,17) Moreover, both government and NGO-run shelters were unable to accept referrals of vulnerable children during the first months of the COVID-19 pandemic because they had to create separate areas for newcomers to quarantine. (5)

Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas), in 2021, the government made minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the Safeguarding Children's Board met quarterly and hosted trainings on safeguarding children, including understanding child sexual exploitation. However, the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) are assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued to implement a practice that delays advancement to prevent child labor. There is no functioning labor inspectorate in the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) to enforce labor laws. Labor inspections are a key tool for identifying child labor violations, and their absence makes children more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. In addition, the minimum ages for work and for hazardous work do not meet international standards, and the law does not prohibit adults from using, procuring, and offering a child for the production and trafficking of drugs.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas). (1)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories recognize the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK) but are not constitutionally part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. (2) The Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) generally incorporate English Law Ordinances to the extent permitted by local circumstances and subject to modification by local laws. Under Article 35 (4) of the ILO Constitution, when the UK ratifies a Convention, the Territory must consider if it will accept the Convention. (2) If the Convention is accepted, it is considered applicable to that Territory. The following Conventions have been extended to and accepted by the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) (Table 1). (2)

Table 1. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government of the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 2). However, gaps exist in the Falkland Islands' (Islas Malvinas') legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the failure to criminalize the use of children in illicit activities.

Table 2. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation

Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	16	Section 3 of the Employment of Children Ordinance; Sections 2, 3 and 4A of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (3,4)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Section 3 of the Employment of Children Ordinance; Section 3 of the Employment of Women, Young Persons, and Children Act (3,4)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Section 117 of the Crimes Ordinance of 2014; Chapter 1, Section 4 of the Constitution Order (5,6)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 87 of the Crimes Ordinance of 2014; Part 1, Sections 57–60 of the Sexual Offenses Act (5,7)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 259–263 of the Crimes Ordinance of 2014; Part 1 of the Sexual Offenses Act (5,7)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Article 10 of the Falkland Islands Defense Ordinance (8)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Education Ordinance; Chapter 1, Section 12 of the Constitution Order (6,9)
Free Public Education	Yes		Education Amendment Ordinance; Chapter 1, Section 12 of the Constitution Order (6,9)

* Country has no conscription (10)

The minimum age of 14 for work and the minimum age of 16 for hazardous work are not in compliance with international standards. In addition, the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (4,11) The Government of the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, other than industrial undertakings. (3,4) The law also does not prohibit adults from using, procuring, or offering a child for the production or trafficking of drugs.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. The Government of the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) has established an institutional mechanism for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor. However, the absence of a labor inspectorate at the national level in the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) may impede the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 3).

Table 3. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Royal Falkland Islands Police	Enforce laws, including those protecting children against abuses. Participate in the Safeguarding Children Board and lead the Board's trainings on understanding child sexual exploitation. (12,13)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor. However, the Government of the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) has established a mechanism to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 4).

Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 4. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Falkland Islands Safeguarding Children Board	Develops child safety and welfare policies concerning intervention, training, recruitment, safety, investigation and communication, review of serious cases and child deaths, and monitoring of performance by agencies so that improvements may be made. Chaired by the Director of Health and Social Services, members include the Education Department, the Attorney General's Chambers, Social Services, Royal Falkland Islands Police, healthcare professionals, members of the Legislative Assembly, and a representative from the military community. (14) Met quarterly in 2021 and published a training prospectus outlining mandatory trainings for all government personnel working with vulnerable children and adults. The required courses include a training on understanding child sexual exploitation led by the Royal Falkland Islands Police. (13,15)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in the Falkland Islands (Islas Malvinas) (Table 5).

Table 5. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify international conventions on child labor.	2020 – 2021
	Raise the minimum age for work to at least age 15 and up to the age to which education is compulsory in all sectors.	2017 – 2021
	Ensure that the minimum age for hazardous work is age 18 and that national law determines prohibited work activities for children.	2015 – 2021
	Ensure that the law prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2013 – 2021
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2012 – 2021
Enforcement	Establish a labor inspectorate to enforce labor laws, including laws pertaining to child labor.	2021

In 2021, Fiji made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government ratified the United Nations' Convention on the Rights of the Child Optional Protocol on the Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict and the United Nations' Convention on the Rights of the Child Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography. In addition, the government launched the National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking and accompanying strategy and allocated financial and human resources to implement it. However, children in Fiji are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Fiji's light work provisions are not specific enough to prevent children from being involved in child labor. In addition, social programs undertaken by the government are insufficient to support children vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation, human trafficking, and forced domestic work. The government did not provide information on its labor law enforcement or criminal law enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Fiji are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1-3) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Fiji. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		108.9

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (4)

Data were unavailable from International Labor Organization's analysis, 2022. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cutting† and harvesting† sugarcane (2,3)
	Fishing† and deep-sea diving† (2,3)
Services	Street work, including vending, washing cars, begging, and selling fruit and other foods (2,6,7)
	Domestic work (2)
	Working in garages, retail shops, or roadside stalls (2,3)
	Collecting scrap metal† (2,3)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-3,8-13)
	Use in the production of pornography (2,3,11,12)
	Forced labor in agriculture, begging, retail, and domestic work (1)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking and organized robberies (2,3,14,15)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, the Government of Fiji announced that it will work with UNICEF to conduct a Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey (MICS), which includes a module on child labor. Although the Ministry of Employment, Productivity, and Industrial Relations (MEPIR) collected data on child labor, it did not publish the information. (2)

Children are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in Fiji, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, including by family members, taxi drivers, foreign tourists, businesspersons, and crew on foreign fishing vessels. (1,2,10,12,13,16) Research also shows that children in Fiji are subjected to online commercial sexual exploitation, including child pornography. (11,13,17) Parents sometimes send their children to live with families in cities or near schools to facilitate their continuing education and to perform light household work. Research found that some of these children are vulnerable to involuntary domestic work or are forced to engage in sexual activity in exchange for food, clothing, or shelter. (1,16,18) Street children in Fiji are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, selling illicit drugs, and forced labor. (1,2,8,13,15,19) These vulnerabilities are further exacerbated by the COVID-19 pandemic and natural disasters. (16)

The pandemic continued to profoundly impact students' access to education in Fiji, particularly affecting children from low-income families and single-parent families, as well as children with special education needs. School closures due to pandemic outbreaks and Tropical Cyclone Cody, which caused severe damages to critical structures for education, increased children's vulnerabilities to the worst forms of child labor and human trafficking. (2) Other barriers included access challenges for schools in remote areas, and telecommunication and internet connectivity issues that made it difficult for students to access online learning materials during the pandemic. (2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Fiji has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

During the reporting period, the Government of Fiji ratified the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography and the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Involvement of Children in Armed Conflict. (2,20-23)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Fiji's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including identification of light work activities permissible for children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 92 of the Employment Relations Promulgation (24)

Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Hazardous Occupations Prohibited to Children Under 18 Years of Age Order (26)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 6 and 91 of the Employment Relations Promulgation; Articles 20 and 21 of the Immigration Act; Articles 102, 103, 111, and 121 of the Crimes Decree (24,27,28)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 2, 91, and 256 of the Employment Relations Promulgation; Articles 2, 17–20, 22 and Schedule 2 of the Immigration Act; Articles 111–121 of the Crimes Decree (24,27,28)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 91 of the Employment Relations Promulgation; Articles 225–227 of the Crimes Decree; Article 62A of the Juveniles (Amendment) Act (24,28,29)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 91 of the Employment Relations Promulgation; Article 58 of the Juveniles Act (24,30)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 7 of the Royal Fiji Military Forces Act (31)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes*		Article 7 of the Royal Fiji Military Forces Act (31)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Compulsory Education Orders 1997 and 1998 (32,33)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 31 of the Constitution of Fiji (34)

* Country has no conscription (31)

The Employment Relations Promulgation specifies the conditions under which children ages 13 to 15 may engage in light work, but does not include a list of activities that are permissible. (24)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment, Productivity, and Industrial Relations (MEPIR)	Enforces laws related to child labor. Maintains a 24-hour phone line to accept reports of child labor and refers children to social services when appropriate. (2)
Employment Relations Tribunal	Adjudicates alleged violations of child labor provisions in the Employment Relations Promulgation. (2)
Fiji Police Force	Investigates criminal violations and enforces laws on the worst forms of child labor. (2) Maintains a Human Trafficking Unit and provides training to other police units focused on addressing human trafficking. (8)
Department of Immigration	Responsible for immigration services, refugee services, and efforts to address human trafficking. (2) Coordinates with the Fiji Police Force to investigate cases involving underage victims of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking, which are then tried in the criminal court system. (35)
Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions	Enforces laws on child trafficking. (36)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Fiji took actions to address child labor.

In Fiji, criminal authority agencies, including the Fiji Police Force, can refer children found in cases of the worst forms of child labor on a case-by-case basis to the Department of Social Welfare. The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Coordinating Committee on Children (NCCC)	Coordinates child labor and child safety enforcement efforts. Comprises the Fiji Police Force, the Public Prosecutor's Office, the Solicitor General's Office, the Department of Social Welfare, MEPIR, the Ministry of Health, the Ministry of Education, and NGOs that work on child labor issues. (35) During the reporting period, NCCC held two meetings for consultation on the National Child Safeguarding Policy Work Plan. (38)
Interagency Network	Focuses on child labor issues at the district and provincial level. Monitors and reports cases of non-compliance. (39) Comprises interagency committees in nine towns in Fiji. (39) Research was unable to determine whether the Interagency Network was active during the reporting period.
Interagency Committee on Child Abuse	Investigates child labor cases, refers children to school, and monitors cases when a referral is made to the Department of Social Welfare. Shares information on child labor cases, including the worst forms of child labor. (2) Research was unable to determine whether the Interagency Network was active during the reporting period.
Interagency Task Force on Beggars	Addresses issues concerning children who beg and other exploited children. The Ministry of Social Welfare, Women, and Poverty Alleviation and the police regularly conduct patrols to identify and assist children. (40) Research was unable to determine whether the Interagency Task Force was active during the reporting period.
Interagency Working Group on Human Trafficking	Oversees the human trafficking case management system by providing guidance on referral procedures when a potential human trafficking case, including child trafficking, is identified. (41,42) Led by the Ministry of Defense, National Security, and Policing and the Office of the Prime Minister; comprising technical working groups with senior government officials and assisted by international partners and civil society organizations. (43) The Interagency Working Group on Human Trafficking was active during the reporting period. (1)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	Addresses, develops, and implements strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. A multinational strategic framework program consisting of 14 South Pacific nations. (44) Activities during the reporting period were conducted under the UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program (2018–2022). (2,45)
National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking and National Anti-Human Trafficking Strategy (2021–2026) †	Establishes oversight of anti-trafficking in persons operations and enhances the capabilities of law enforcement, including police, immigration, border security, and other regulatory bodies, to address the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and the use of children in the production of pornography as a result of human trafficking. (35,41,46,47) During the reporting period, the Fijian Cabinet formally endorsed the revised national action plan and accompanying strategy. In addition, the government allocated financial and human resources for implementation of the National Action Plan. (1,16)

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (2)

Fiji is a Pathfinder country under Alliance 8.7, which involves a commitment to accelerate action toward achieving Sustainable Development Goal Target 8.7, which calls for the eradication of child labor by 2025, and forced labor, modern slavery, and human trafficking by 2030. (48)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program (2018–2022)	Prioritizes children's rights including the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. Multi-country program in 14 Pacific Island countries aligned with the UN Pacific Strategy 2018–2022. (45) During the reporting period, UNICEF worked with the Government of Fiji to conduct the Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey. (2) The Ministry of iTaukei Affairs also collaborated with UNICEF on a child protection program focusing on the rights for children of the indigenous iTaukei population. (38,49)
Education Assistance Programs†	The Free Education Grant provides 12 years of tuition-free education for children with Fijian citizenship in 904 eligible primary and secondary schools. Also provides bus passes to students, and boats and outboard motors for island communities with staff and students commuting to school. (17) The Food Voucher and Bus Fare Assistance program provides $24 in food vouchers and subsidized bus fares to families with combined annual income of less than $7,400 to offset the cost of education for children attending remote schools. (50) During the reporting period, the government continued to provide transport assistance to students, and allocated approximately $31 million for the Free Education Grant in fiscal year 2021–2022. (2,37)
Child Protection Program and Allowance‡	Ministry of Women, Children, and Poverty Alleviation (MWCPA) Child Protection Program that raises awareness of, and enacts recommendations from, the UN CRC. (17) MWCPA Child Protection Allowance assists single mothers, widows, and children. (51) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Child Protection Program and Allowance during the reporting period.
Trafficking Victims Rehabilitation Programs†	Homes of Hope is an NGO program that assists victims of sexual abuse and human trafficking. (17,51) During the reporting period, the government provided $185,000 to women-focused institutions through the MWCPA to help victims of gender-based violence, including human trafficking and sexual abuse. (2)
Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor (MAP16)	$105,000 USDOL-funded global project implemented by the ILO, which aims to strengthen policies and improve the capacity of governments and other stakeholders to address child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking through national, regional, and global initiatives. (52) In 2021, coordinated and facilitated trainings on child labor inspections, including in the informal sector and on the worst forms of child labor, in six divisions in Fiji with a total of 212 participants. (53) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (2,35)

During the reporting period, MEPIR, the MWPCA, the Ministry of Education, the Ministry of Health and Medical Services, the iTaukei Affairs Board, and the Fiji Police Force collaborated with the ILO to support a series of training and awareness seminars with a network of stakeholders to strengthen efforts to address child labor. The training programs were conducted in commemoration of the International Year for the Elimination of Child Labor. (54)

Although Fiji has a program that targets child labor, the scope of this program is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including children who may be sent to live with other families and subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, human trafficking, and forced domestic work. (1,17)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Fiji (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2021
	Ensure that the law's light work provisions are specific enough to prevent children from involvement in child labor.	2015 – 2021

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Publish labor law enforcement information, including the number of labor inspectors, initial training for new labor inspectors, whether refresher courses were provided for existing labor inspectors, number of labor inspections conducted, number of labor inspections conducted at the worksite, whether routine inspections were targeted, number of child labor violations found, number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed, number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected, whether routine inspections were conducted, and whether unannounced inspections were conducted.	2021
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by initiating targeted inspections based on analysis of data related to risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents.	2020 – 2021
	Publish criminal law enforcement information, including initial training for new criminal investigators, refresher courses for existing criminal investigators, number of investigations conducted, number of violations, number of prosecutions initiated, number of convictions, and imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor.	2020 – 2021
Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating bodies are active and can carry out their intended mandates.	2021
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2017 – 2021
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement the Child Protection Program and Allowance during the reporting period and make information about implementation measures publicly available.	2021
	Increase the availability of support services for children vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation, human trafficking, and forced domestic work, in order to prevent them from being sent to live with other families.	2010 – 2021

In 2021, Gabon made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, authorities removed more than 30 children from exploitive settings and provided them with government services. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Gabon is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it continued to implement a practice that delayed advancement to eliminate child labor. The government failed to provide evidence it conducted worksite inspections during the reporting period. Labor inspections are a key tool for identifying child labor violations, and their absence makes children more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Children in Gabon are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in domestic work. Gabonese law regarding minimum age for work provisions only applies to children in formal employment relationships, which does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected by the minimum age for work. In addition, labor inspectors lack the basic resources necessary to conduct investigations. Finally, Gabon does not have a policy that addresses all relevant forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Gabon are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in domestic work. (1-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Gabon. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	22.3 (83,073)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	23.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		78.4

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2021. (7)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Deuxième Enquête Démographique et de Santé au Gabon (EDSG-II), 2012. (8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Fishing, including the production and sale of smoked fish (6,9,10)
Industry	Working in sand quarries† (1,6,10)
	Working in brick factories (6,10)
Services	Domestic work (3-6,10)
	Street vending, including windshield cleaning, cleaning market spaces at night, and carrying heavy loads† (5,6,9)
	Garbage scavenging (6,10)
	Working in transportation, including minibuses,† and as mechanics (1,2,6)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in markets, restaurants, handicraft shops, sand quarries, gold mines, farming, animal husbandry, fishing, domestic work, and as mechanics (1,3,6,12)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4-6,10,13)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Gabon is primarily a destination and transit country for victims of child trafficking from other countries in Central and West Africa. (6,14) Some parents entrust their children to intermediaries who promise education and safe work opportunities; instead, these children are sometimes subjected to child trafficking for labor exploitation. (6,14,15) There are reports that child victims of forced labor mainly work in the informal sector as street vendors, often selling beauty products and fruits. Boys often work in fishing, microbus transportation, mechanics shops, and cleaning market spaces after they have closed. (6,9,13) Reports also indicate that West African human traffickers reportedly exploit children from their countries of origin to work in Libreville markets and in other urban centers, including Port-Gentil. (6,7,13)

Although the Law on General Education guarantees the right to free and compulsory education, in practice, students must pay for supplies and school fees, which may be prohibitive. (10,16) Due to a lack of teachers and poor school infrastructure, education beyond primary school is often unavailable. (6,17) In addition, children living in remote areas may not receive birth certificates, which are often required for school enrollment, and children who do not attend school are more vulnerable to child labor. (6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Gabon has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Gabon's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 177 of the Labor Code; Article 2 of the Decree on Establishing Individual Exceptions to the Minimum Age for Admission to Employment (18-20)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 1 of the Hazardous Work List (18,19,21)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 2, 3, and 5 of the Hazardous Work List (18,19,21)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 225 to 225-7 of Gabon's 2020 Revised Penal Code; Articles 3, 12, and 13 of Law N° 09/04 Preventing and Fighting Against Child Trafficking; Article 4 of the Labor Code (18,22,23)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 3, 11–14, and 20 of Law N° 09/04 Preventing and Fighting Against Child Trafficking; Article 278 bis of the Penal Code; Articles 225 to 225-7 of Gabon's 2020 Revised Penal Code (22,23)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 260, 261, and 263 of the Penal Code; Articles 225 to 225-7 and Articles 281-3 to 281-5 of Gabon's 2020 Revised Penal Code (23,24)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 281-1 of Gabon's 2020 Revised Penal Code (23)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 17 of the Law on the Organization of National Defense and Public Security (25)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes*		Article 17 of the Law on the Organization of National Defense and Public Security (25)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 1 of the Constitution; Article 2 of Act N° 21/2011 on General Education; Article 340-6 of the Revised 2020 Penal Code (23,16,26)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 1.18 and 1.19 of the Constitution; Article 2 of Act N° 21/2011 on General Education (16,26)

* Country has no conscription (27)

Although the Labor Code prohibits work by children under age 16, the minimum age protections do not apply to children outside of formal work relationships, which does not conform to international standards that require all children be protected under the law. (2,18,22,23) Article 2 of Decree N° 0651/PR/MTEPS Establishing Individual Exceptions to the Minimum Age for Admission to Employment permits children under age 16 to perform light work with parental permission. However, it does not set a minimum age, determine the activities in which light work may be permitted, prescribe the number of hours per week for light work, or specify the conditions in which light work may be undertaken. (20)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment, Public Function, Labor and Professional Training	Receives, investigates, and addresses child labor complaints through its inspectors. (17) Refers cases of child trafficking to the Ministry of the Interior's Police Force for investigation and the Ministry of Health, Social Protection and National Solidarity (MSPNS) for social services. (1,6)
Ministry of the Interior's Police Force	Enforces laws, investigates child labor violations, and refers cases to the Ministry of Justice for prosecution. (6,17) Refers cases of child labor to the MSPNS. The shelters for referred children are run by or work in close coordination with MSPNS. (6,13)
Ministry of Justice	Enforces child labor laws by prosecuting child labor cases. Coordinates activities of the agencies responsible for enforcing criminal laws against child forced labor/trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. (6) Assists in supporting victims of child trafficking while prosecutors and investigators prepare their cases. (1,6)

While active, the Ministry of Employment, Public Function, Labor and Professional Training did not carry out its mandated role during the reporting period, which includes addressing child labor complaints. (6)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, the absence of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Gabon may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws. (Table 6)

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

While the government did not provide information on labor inspectorate funding or the number of labor inspectors, research indicates inadequate resources, including an insufficient number of inspectors, may have hampered the labor inspectorate's capacity to adequately conduct inspections and enforce labor laws throughout the country. (2,6,13,17) In addition, labor inspectors in Gabon are responsible for reconciling labor disputes, which may detract from their primary duty of inspection. (18)

Although inspectors have the authority to propose penalties to the court in accordance with legal guidelines, they do not have the authority to impose penalties since this is the purview of the court. The police take note of violations of child labor law, carry out investigations when further information is necessary, and refer cases to the court system within the Ministry of Justice's jurisdiction. (6)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Gabon took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (10)	No (6)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (10)	N/A (6)
Refresher Courses Provided	N/A (10)	No (6)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (10)	Unknown (6)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (10)	Unknown (6)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	20 (28)	Unknown (6)
Number of Convictions	2 (28)	6 (6,29)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (10)	Yes (6,29)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (6)

The government did not provide information on the number of investigations conducted, the number of violations found, or the number of prosecutions initiated for inclusion in this report. However, during the reporting period, authorities removed more than 30 children from exploitive settings; all of the children removed received services from the government. (6) In addition, the Ministry of Justice convicted six individuals on trafficking related charges. (29)

Despite these efforts, research has shown that a lack of resources, which included transportation and access to fuel, insufficient training, infrequent convening of the Criminal Court, a backlog of cases, and weak coordination among enforcement agencies hampered criminal enforcement efforts. In addition, evidence indicates that some child trafficking perpetrators falsified documents to make victims appear older than age 18 to avoid punishment under Gabon's child trafficking laws. (5,10,13,29) Research also found that Gabonese authorities do not have a consistent mechanism to report human trafficking statistics to Post. (13)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry of Justice and Ministry of Interior	Coordinate national efforts against child trafficking and other worst forms of child labor. (6,17,29)
National Observatory for Children's Rights	Coordinates the implementation of the UN CRC, including the promotion of children's right to education and protection against all forms of exploitation and abuse. Establishes and oversees committees to protect children's rights in all provinces. (6,30)
Local Vigilance Committees	Identifies potential cases of child trafficking, intercept victims, and assist children at risk of child trafficking. (6,31)
Ministry of Social Affairs and Women's Rights & Ministry of Health, Social Protection and National Solidarity (MSPNS)	Provides social services and assistance to vulnerable children, assists in repatriation or resettlement processes for victims of child trafficking, and operates shelters for victims of child trafficking. (1,13) MSPNS can also refer cases to the Ministry of Justice, which may pursue criminal charges. (9,13)

Due to changes in the penal code criminalizing all forms of human trafficking, the Inter-Ministerial Committee for the Fight Against Child Trafficking became inactive pending corresponding changes to the 2004 law on child trafficking. Instead, the Ministries of Justice and Interior were charged with coordinating action against the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking. (6,9)

Research also indicates that the other coordinating committees lacked sufficient funding and members sometimes used their personal funds to support human trafficking victims. (1,10,32) All coordination committees were inactive during the reporting period. (6,10)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that the government has established policies to address child labor.

The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF) (2018–2022) (3,33,34)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that may contribute to preventing child labor (Table 9). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 9. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Shelters for Children in Need	Provides social services to victims of child labor and child trafficking. The government provides support to shelters run by civil society organizations. (1,3,13,35) Victims received medical care, literacy training, and reintegration support. (1,6)

Research found no evidence of a government program that directly addressed child labor. (1,10) Research also indicates that shelter space is insufficient to accommodate all victims of human trafficking and other vulnerable children due to the government repeatedly decreasing funding for shelters and NGOs in previous years. (1,3,6,10,13,31)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Gabon (Table 10).

Table 10. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that minimum age protections are extended to children working outside of formal employment relationships.	2017 – 2021
Enforcement	Ensure that the legal framework for light work establishes a minimum age no younger than age 13, determines activities that are considered light work, and specifies the conditions under which light work may be undertaken.	2013 – 2021
	Establish criminal prohibitions for the recruitment of children under age 18 for use in armed conflict by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2021
	Publish information on the funding level for the labor inspectorate, number of inspections, and number of labor inspectors, and ensure both inspectors and investigators receive adequate funding, training, and resources to carry out inspections and investigations.	2009 – 2021
	Strengthen the labor inspectorate by having inspectors conduct routine and unannounced inspections, including in the informal sector.	2014 – 2021
	Ensure that labor inspectors are not tasked with conciliation or arbitration duties so that they can carry out their primary duties of inspection and monitoring throughout the country.	2009 – 2021
	Ensure that the government conducts an adequate number of labor inspections and criminal investigations and publish criminal law enforcement information.	2018 – 2021
Coordination	Ensure that coordinating bodies are sufficiently funded to carry out their mandates, remain active, and report on their activities.	2013 – 2021
Government Policies	Adopt a policy that addresses all relevant forms of child labor, including in activities such as domestic work and work in transportation.	2015 – 2021
	Integrate child labor elimination and prevention strategies into existing relevant policies.	2014 – 2021
Social Programs	Collect and publish data on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs.	2014 – 2021
	Ensure that children have access to education by eliminating school fees, increasing the number of teachers and schools in rural areas, and make efforts to provide all children with birth registration.	2010 – 2021
	Expand programs to address the scope of the child labor problem and ensure that the government continues to provide adequate support to victims of child labor, including sufficient shelter space for victims.	2010 – 2021

In 2021, The Gambia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government adopted a new National Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons, and it launched the National Referral Mechanism for the Protection of Vulnerable Migrants, including the Victims of Trafficking. However, children in The Gambia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced begging. Gaps in the law remain, including that the minimum age for work is higher than the age of compulsory education. Although the government has adopted various policies addressing human trafficking, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor. In addition, labor inspectors do not inspect private homes or farms where children may be working.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in The Gambia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced begging. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in The Gambia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	22.6 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	78.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	21.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		85.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2021, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (3)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from the Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS6), 2018. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including protecting crops against animals (1,5)
Industry	Working in carpentry, masonry, sewing, plumbing, and in metal welding workshops† (1,5)
	Mining† and quarrying† (6)
Services	Domestic work (1)
	Street work, including begging and vending (1,6-9)
	Scavenging for scrap metal at dump sites, markets, garages, and car parks (5,10)
	Working as attendants for commercial vehicles in the transportation sector (1,9)
	Working as auto mechanics† (1,5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2,11,12)
	Forced begging by Koranic teachers (1,2,5,13)
	Forced labor in domestic work, farming, and street vending (2,5)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In The Gambia, children are exploited in human trafficking and subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, forced labor, and domestic work. Girls and boys from other West African countries are reportedly subjected to human trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation. (2,14) Research suggests that before the pandemic, foreign nationals subjected children to commercial sexual exploitation in the Tourism Development Area, which consists of the areas around major beaches, hotels, and nightclubs. (2,5,15-18) During the reporting year, the impact of the pandemic on the tourism industry likely reduced the prevalence of child exploitation in the tourism sector. (5) In The Gambia, it is a common practice to send boys to receive education from Koranic teachers, or marabouts, who sometimes force students to engage in begging, street vending, and agricultural work. (1,13,14)

The Constitution and Gambian law mandate free compulsory primary and lower-secondary education. Families, however, are often responsible for transportation, supplies and uniforms, exam fees, and contributions to school funds. (13,19,20) Children with disabilities face significant barriers in accessing education. (5,13) In addition, inadequate classroom infrastructure, low numbers of teachers in rural areas, and limited access to clean water and toilets in schools create barriers for children to access education. (1,5,6,13,21,22)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Gambia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in The Gambia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including that children may commence an apprenticeship in the informal sector at the age of 12, which is below the compulsory education age of 16.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	18	Articles 2, 41, 45, and 47 of the Children's Act (23)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 2 and 44 of the Children's Act; Articles 41, 46, and 47 of the Labor Act (23,24)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 42, 44, and 45 of the Children's Act (23)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 20 of the Constitution; Articles 2, 39-41, 47, and 58 of the Children's Act; Articles 2 and 28 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (19,23,25)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 2, 30, and 39 of the Children's Act; Articles 2, 28-29, 38(c), and 56 of the Trafficking in Persons Act; Article 13 of the Tourism Offenses Act (23,25,26)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 26, 27, 29-32, and 34 of the Children's Act; Articles 7-9 of the Tourism Offenses Act (23,26)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 31 and 37 of the Children's Act (23)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 59 of the Children's Act (23)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 59 of the Children's Act (23)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 31(c) of the Children's Act (23)
Compulsory Education Age	No	16‡	Article 18 of the Children's Act (23)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 30 of the Constitution; Article 18 of the Children's Act (19,23)

‡ Age calculated based on available information. (19,23,27)

In The Gambia, children may commence an apprenticeship in the informal sector at the age of 12, which makes them vulnerable to engaging in child labor and not completing basic education. (23) Children in The Gambia are required to attend school up to age 16, but this standard makes children ages 16 through 18 vulnerable to child labor, as they are not required to attend school but are not legally permitted to work. (23)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor	Receives complaints about child labor. Conducts labor inspections in the formal sector, mediates disputes between employers and labor representatives, and refers serious cases to the labor courts and the Industrial Tribunal. (5) Housed under the Ministry of Trade, Industry, and Regional Integration and Employment. (1,17)
Immigration Department Child Welfare Unit	Conducts unannounced inspections, including in marketplaces and restaurants. (5)
Children's Court	Adjudicates criminal, civil, and care and protection cases involving children. Coordinates with social welfare officers from the Department of Social Welfare (DSW) in the referral and care of children. (5,23,29)
National Agency Against Trafficking in Persons (NAATIP)	Under the purview of the Ministry of Justice, investigates suspected cases of human trafficking. Staff includes investigators, police, members of the National Intelligence Agency, and five prosecutors. (5,16,21,30,31) Gathers evidence for the NAATIP director, who can recommend that the NAATIP prosecutor file charges for human trafficking violations. (21) Conducts public awareness campaigns on human trafficking in tourist areas, schools, and border towns. (31) Trains law enforcement officers, judges, prosecutors, social workers, hoteliers, and civil society organizations on child labor, child trafficking, and trafficking in persons. (2,28,31) Oversees a National Referral Mechanism for the Protection of Vulnerable Migrants, including Victims of Trafficking (NRM) in The Gambia. (30,32)
The Gambia Police Force Child Welfare Unit	Receives reports of child labor complaints and coordinates with NAATIP on investigations and prosecutions. (21) Oversees all situations involving children's welfare. Collaborates with the Child Protection Alliance (CPA), DSW, NGOs, and other agencies. (6,18,33) Oversees Child Welfare Units staffed by trained child welfare officers at all major police stations. (28)
Tourism Security Unit	Prevents unaccompanied children from entering tourist areas and patrols tourist areas for child labor and criminal violations, such as commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. Has a dedicated child protection division comprising immigration, intelligence, police, and drug law enforcement officers. (2,18,34)
Local Enforcement Agencies	Monitor neighborhoods for child exploitation with support from DSW. Maintain Neighborhood Watch Groups established by DSW in urban areas near tourist resorts. (2,17,18,21) Serve as volunteer arbiters and mediators for community disputes involving children and other matters through Village Development Committees. (6) Raise awareness and report cases of labor issues, including child labor, to the authorities through 15 Community Child Protection Committees in operation throughout the country. (10,21,35)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Reports indicate that the Neighborhood Watch Groups remain largely inadequate, as they are not empowered to monitor or report cases, are untrained, and only 2 out of the original 11 groups are even occasionally active. (2,18) In addition, the work of Child Welfare Units within the police and immigration departments is hampered by turnover, lack of resources, and limited capacity. (2) While volunteer-run Community Child Protection Committees under the Department of Social Welfare (DSW) are theoretically empowered to report cases of child labor, research indicates that they are largely inactive. (5)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in The Gambia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, the exceptionally low number of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in The Gambia may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$15,576 (1)	$15,576 (5)

† Data are from January 1 to March 30, 2020. (1)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of The Gambia's workforce, which includes approximately 495,000 workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less-developed economies, The Gambia would need to employ about 12 labor inspectors. (36,37) While the labor inspectorates stopped conducting inspections in 2020 after the outbreak of the pandemic, inspections did resume in 2021. (1,5) Reports indicate that the labor inspectorate's funding was insufficient to implement its mandate and conduct a meaningful number of inspections. (5) In addition, although legally permitted to do so, inspectors do not inspect private homes or farms, where children may be working. (6,21,24)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in The Gambia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of enforcement of penalties.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (1)	Yes (1)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (1)	N/A (5)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (1)	Yes (5)

The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (5) Research indicates that penalties are not fully applied, possibly hindering enforcement and emboldening violators. (2,23,33,35) In August 2021, the government launched the National Referral Mechanism for the Protection of Vulnerable Migrants, including the Victims of Trafficking (NRM), which outlines a comprehensive procedure for responding to suspected cases of human trafficking. The NRM was developed in part with funding from the U.S. Department of State and in consultation with NGOs and the IOM. (31) The NRM defines standard operating procedures to identify human trafficking and ensure that survivors are protected, referred to social services, and provided access to justice. (31) In the reporting year, the National Agency Against Trafficking in Persons (NAATIP) held a 2-day training for officers in the Tourism Security Unit on identifying cases of human trafficking, including child trafficking. The officers learned about their responsibilities under the NRM and took part in mock screening interviews to identify victims of human trafficking. (5)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the inactivity of some coordinating bodies during the reporting period.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Coordination Committee on Child Labor	Coordinates child labor enforcement processes, including prosecutions of the worst forms of child labor. Led by DSW and supported by UNICEF, comprises representatives from Department of Labor, UNICEF, DSW, NAATIP, Action Aid, Ministry of Basic and Secondary Education, Gambia Teachers Union, Young People in the Media, and the Inspector General of Police. (1) Research was unable to determine whether this coordinating body was active in 2021.
National Trafficking in Persons Task Force	Coordinates the implementation of the Trafficking in Persons Action Plan and shares information among law enforcement agencies. (1) Includes NAATIP, Ministry of Justice, Department of Immigration, DSW, Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Women's Bureau, Gambia Radio and Television Services, The Gambian Tourism Board, Child Protection Alliance, Center for Street Children, The Gambian Armed Force, and The Gambia Police Force. (1) During the reporting period, met on a regular basis to discuss coordination, policy, and legislation on human trafficking issues. In addition, updated the National Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons. (5,38)
Child Protection Alliance (CPA)	Civil society organization that promotes children's rights and child protection services. Members include government departments, civil society organizations, UN agencies, NGOs, child and youth organizations, and bilateral institutions. (1,18,39) Conducts joint programs with DSW and the Police Child Welfare Unit to identify children engaged in child labor. (18) Maintains 15 child protection centers across the country to monitor, identify, and report potential cases of child abuse and human trafficking. (18,21) Research was unable to determine which activities were undertaken by this coordinating body in 2021.
Department of Social Welfare (DSW)	Coordinates interagency efforts to address violations of child's rights, including child labor and child trafficking. (5,28,32) Housed under the Ministry of Women, Children and Social Welfare. (5) Coordinates with the Department of Labor, the Police Child Welfare Unit, and other enforcement agencies to provide social services to child labor and child trafficking survivors. (5) During the reporting period, in collaboration with NAATIP, conducted awareness-raising activities on human trafficking. (31)
The Gambia Tourism Board	Coordinates efforts to prevent and address commercial sexual exploitation of children in tourist areas. (5) In the reporting year, coordinated with NAATIP and IOM to provide training on human trafficking to hospitality workers. (31)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a national child labor policy.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan against Trafficking in Persons (2021–2025)*	Directs governmental efforts to address human trafficking. Includes strategies to improve legal framework, training of law enforcement and social services, prevention and awareness, and protection for human trafficking survivors. (38) During the reporting period, was updated and renewed for 2021–2025. (31)
The Gambia and Senegal Trafficking Memorandum of Understanding	Coordinates the two countries' efforts to address human trafficking through meetings, information sharing, improved laws, and prevention, protection, and assistance activities. (5) During the reporting year, the government continued to support this policy. (5)
Code of Conduct of The Gambia Tourism Authority for the Protection of Children	Raises awareness of commercial sexual exploitation of children in the tourism industry and among tourists. (18,40) During the reporting period, the government continued to support this policy, but the pace of training and implementation has slowed due to the impact of the pandemic on the tourism industry. (5)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (21)

Although the government has adopted various policies addressing human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
DSW Child Welfare Drop-in Centers†	Drop-in centers run by DSW with support from international organizations, foreign NGOs, and local businesses. Provide care, educational support, and counseling to child trafficking survivors, children removed from forced labor, street children, and children exploited by Koranic schools for forced begging. (5,18) Drop in centers were in operation during the reporting period. (5)
Conditional Cash Transfers to Islamic Religious Schools ( Majaalis )†	Ministry of Education program in partnership with the Institute for Social Reformation, an Islamic NGO based in The Gambia, that gives Koranic teachers food rations and approximately $2 monthly for each student if the Koranic teachers do not force students to beg. (5,17,21) Provides curriculum standards to Islamic schools. (5,39) Each month, a joint team of ministry officials and Institute for Social Reformation and Action representatives travels to each Koranic school participating in the program. (5) During the reporting period, 17 schools participated in the program, which has reached about 1,500 children. (5)
School Improvement Grant†	Covers the cost of stationary, books, and school uniforms for children in lower basic, upper basic, and senior secondary education. (39) This program continued during the reporting period. (5)
Education Sector Support Program	World Bank project implemented through the Ministry of Basic and Secondary Education with the aim of improving access to and quality of basic education. (39,42) Provides professional development and training to teachers to improve education quality, and funds the construction of new classrooms and the purchase of textbooks to improve access. Active in 2021. (42)

† Program is funded by the Government of The Gambia.

Child trafficking survivors may receive care from the government-run drop-in centers, privately operated institutions, or in their own residence as appropriate, and still receive government-provided resources regardless of the chosen option. (30,31) Although The Gambia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. Programs do not reach all children working in agriculture and domestic work or those vulnerable to human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, forced begging, and street work. (5,21)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in The Gambia (Table 11).

In 2021, Georgia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government doubled the budget for the Labor Inspectorate, significantly increased its number of labor inspectors, and approved a new National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons (2021–2022). The Public Defender's Office also published a report on the status of child labor as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic, and a new mobile group was created to identify and assist children living and working on the streets in Adjara.

However, children in Georgia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced begging. Children also engage in agricultural labor. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, Georgia's minimum age for work does not meet international standards because it does not apply to the informal sector. In addition, the Criminal Code does not explicitly prohibit the use of children in illicit activities. Furthermore, the compulsory education age leaves children who are 15 years of age vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor, because they are not required to be in school but are not legally permitted to work full time.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Georgia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced begging. Children also engage in agricultural labor. (I-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Georgia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	2.9 (13,547)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	96.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	3.7

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming of potatoes, citrus, blueberries, tea, hazelnuts, and hay (1,2,5-7)
	Raising cattle, activities unknown (7)
Industry	Construction (7,8)
	Work in factories (7)
Services	Street work, including begging, vending, carrying cargo, and collecting scrap metal (1,2,5,7,9-12)
	Domestic work (1,7)
	Work in restaurants, hotels, supermarkets, small advertising services, and at beaches and resorts (1,7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (11,13,14)
	Forced begging and street vending (1,2,5,11-13,15)
	Coerced criminality, such as theft (1,14)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Roma and Azerbaijani Kurd ethnic minorities and refugee and internally displaced children from Georgia, Armenia, and Moldova are subjected to forced begging and coerced into criminality in Georgia. (9-15) Estimates suggest that 1,000 to 2,000 children earn a living by begging, primarily caused by poverty, homelessness, or domestic violence. (1,5,7,9,10,12) Many of the child beggars are from Roma communities. (9,11) Children also engage in seasonal labor migration, both within Georgia and to Turkey, where children as young as age 13 work during the summers to harvest tea and hazelnuts, as well as in construction. (7) There are instances in which Georgia is a source and transit country for child trafficking, especially of girls to Cyprus, Egypt, Turkey, and the United Arab Emirates for the purposes of commercial sexual exploitation. (9,14) Limited evidence indicates children may perform hazardous activities in construction. (8)

A lack of awareness among parents and employers is also cited as a barrier to the elimination of child labor in Georgia. Parents, especially in rural areas, do not perceive children's work as harmful to their development, even under conditions that are considered child labor by international standards. (7)

In the regions of Abkhazia and South Ossetia, which are occupied by Russian forces and not under control of the central government, lack of information limits an assessment of the types of work children perform and the sectors in which they work. (2,5,14,16)

Children who do not attend school in Georgia are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Some children systematically miss or drop out of school due to their involvement in seasonal work, household labor, or seasonal labor migration. (1,7) Migrant children who do not speak Georgian or Russian may also not attend school due to language barriers; however, there are some mixed language schools with Georgian and Azeri or Armenian. (1) School employees, such as teachers and administrative personnel, do not always record absenteeism by students or the reasons for it. As a result, many cases of child labor are not recorded or investigated. (1,7) Socially vulnerable children, children from impoverished families, children with disabilities, and those who live in rural areas may have difficulty accessing education, in part due to a lack of identity documents. (2,17,18) In addition, some children from Roma communities lack identity documents, and therefore have challenges accessing education. (17) UNICEF notes that some migrant and Roma families continue to destroy identification and other documents in an effort to avoid interaction with state officials. (10) Although the law provides a path for homeless and transient children to obtain identity documents, government outreach remains insufficient to address the issue. (17) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Justice's Public Service Development Agency issued 10 temporary identification documents for homeless children, 7 identity cards, and 2 biometric passports. (1) The identity cards ensure that children are provided with additional state-funded services, including social, medical, and educational programs. (2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Georgia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Georgia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 4 of the Labor Code of Georgia (19)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (27)

In December 2021, the Criminal Procedure Code of Georgia was amended to permit investigators to involve witness and victim coordinators in criminal proceedings, where previously this power rested solely with prosecutors. The new provisions in the law make witness and victim coordinators more accessible, preventing further traumatization and revictimization of survivors of human trafficking. (12,28) The Ministry of Internal Affairs (MoIA) also adopted an order approving the establishment of a national registry for persons convicted of sexual crimes, including child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation of children. The registry is intended to reduce recidivism and enhance law enforcement efforts to monitor offenders. (12)

Labor Code provisions related to the minimum age for work are not in compliance with international standards because they do not apply to the informal sector. (19) In Georgia, some employers hire children informally specifically because they are not covered by the Labor Code. (7) Georgia's law on education allows children to leave school at age 15. (27) During the 2020–2021 school year, 3,017 females (1,029 in grade 10; 407 in grade 11; and 256 in grade 12) and 4,033 males (1,783 in grade 10; 477 in grade 11; and 275 in grade 12) dropped out of school. (29) These children are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor because they are no longer required to be in school but are not old enough to be legally permitted to work full time. Article 4 of the Labor Code specifies conditions under which children ages 14 and 15 may perform light work, and Article 14 prescribes the hours, but the law does not specify the activities in which light work is permissible. (19) Article 4 of the Labor Code stipulates that children under age 14 are allowed to work only in sport, art, and culture, as well as some advertising activities. (19) Lastly, Georgia's laws do not criminally prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including the procuring and offering of children for the production or trafficking of drugs. (24)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Health, and Social Affairs (MoLHSA)	Oversees child welfare issues and pursues enforcement of labor laws, including forced labor, labor exploitation, and occupational safety and health norms as determined by the Organic Law of Georgia on Occupational Safety. (1,2,17,30) Through the Department of Labor and Employment Policy, revises laws and policies to be in accordance with international standards. (31) Through the Social Services Agency, administers social benefits such as targeted social assistance, health care, and vouchers for day care, and employs social workers who oversee child protection. (5) Receives complaints through the Child Protection and Social Programs sub-department, and refers complaints of child labor violations to law enforcement agencies for investigation. (31) In 2021, enforced occupational safety and health laws, including those related to hazardous child labor, and enforced prohibitions on forced labor and human trafficking through the Department of Labor Inspection. (1) In January 2021, MoLHSA's Department of Labor Inspection became a separate Labor Inspection Service within MoLHSA. (11) Operates a hotline in eight languages (Georgian, English, Russian, Turkish, Azeri, Armenian, Arabic, and Persian languages). (1)
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MoIA)	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking. (1,2,5) Through District Police Units, collects information on minors in each jurisdiction and visits minors' families to inform them of their rights. (31) Through the Human Rights Department, ensures prompt responses to human trafficking crimes and suggests recommendations for investigations. Operates a hotline that is available in Georgian, Russian, and English. (9)
Central Criminal Police Department within MoIA	Leads criminal investigations of human trafficking, including the trafficking of children, through the Division for Combating Human Trafficking and Illegal Migration. (1,2,9) Identifies human traffickers and collates data on traffickers across various agencies through the Information-Analytical Department. (32) Investigates possible human trafficking schemes by deploying teams of law enforcement officials in Mobile Units to investigate companies offering suspicious work opportunities abroad. (14,33)
Prosecutor's Office of Georgia	An independent entity, separate from the Ministry of Justice (MOJ), which prosecutes criminal cases involving child exploitation, forced labor, and human trafficking. (13,34) Includes the Prosecution Service of Georgia Working Group, which addresses child labor trafficking issues under the framework of the Prosecution Service Strategy for 2017–2021. (1,11,17)

The Government of Georgia regularly organizes meetings and trainings with relevant state agencies responsible for the enforcement of laws related to child exploitation. In November 2021, in close cooperation with the IOM and with the financial support of the State Department's Bureau of International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs, a joint training was held for investigators, prosecutors, victim and witness coordinators, and social workers and psychologists from the Agency for State Care. (1,12) The training sought to improve the efficacy of state institutions by sharing best practices in communication techniques to better understand the needs and challenges of child survivors of exploitation. (1,12) Additionally, in December 2021, the Prosecutor's Office convened a working group to discuss the pandemic's effects on child labor, including the difficulty of detecting child labor cases and new labor exploitation trends, challenges, and future steps. This working group has met regularly since its establishment in 2017 as part of a 5-year strategy to address the challenges of detecting and prosecuting child labor and forced labor. (1,2)

The Russia-occupied regions of Abkhazia and South Ossetia are not under the control of Georgian central authorities, who are prevented from carrying out inspections and law enforcement there. (2,12,16)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies appeared to function adequately in addressing child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Health, and Social Affairs (MoLHSA) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of information about inspections in all sectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The government reported a twofold budget increase for the Labor Inspectorate in 2021. (1) The Labor Inspectorate also increased its staffing to 109 labor inspectors and 10 additional supervisory positions for a workforce of more than 1.5 million, which now surpasses the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 20,000 workers in transition economies. (1,37,38) There are two inspectors specifically assigned to monitor forced labor and child labor issues, but all inspectors are trained on six technical and general topics and provided with continuing education to have the skills required to cover child labor cases. Inspections took place throughout the country and covered a range of economic sectors, including agriculture. (1)

Although the number of inspections increased significantly from 2020, the majority of inspections were conducted based on pandemic-related regulations. Out of the 58,607 inspections conducted, only 914 inspections were conducted on occupational safety and health issues, and 293 inspections were conducted on labor code violations, including child labor. (1) In 2021, labor inspectors received and responded to three complaints of possible child labor, and referred one case to the Agency for State Care. (1) The Labor Inspectorate also worked with the IOM during the reporting period to develop a guidance document on identifying and addressing labor trafficking and labor exploitation. (12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, the government's criminal law enforcement agencies appeared to function adequately in addressing child labor (Table 7).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In 2021, the MoIA's national police academy conducted trainings for specialized police officers and investigators on the juvenile justice process and the needs of homeless children, each of which attracted more than 200 attendees. Additionally, investigators and representatives of the MoIA participated in a number of training courses related to child trafficking and exploitation, including virtual courses on child trafficking, online commercial sexual exploitation of children, and working with Interpol's International Database on Child Sexual Exploitation. (1,12)

During the reporting period, two people were convicted in three cases of using physical and psychological duress and threats of physical violence to force children to beg and sell small items on the streets of Tbilisi. (1,12) Georgian law enforcement agencies also reported conducting investigations into incidents of child pornography. (1)

Criminal investigators were unable to investigate and prosecute any potential human trafficking cases, including of children, in Abkhazia and South Ossetia, because they remain occupied by Russian forces and outside of central government control. (2,12,15)

The MoIA continued to support the operation of mobile task force units dedicated to anti-trafficking activities. The task force units continued to proactively interview individuals in vulnerable occupations and demographics, including hospitality workers and children living and working on the streets, to identify possible cases of labor exploitation and to advise them of their legal rights and available government services. (1,39) In May 2021, the mobile task forces received expert training on identifying and assisting homeless children who were subjected to human trafficking, and a new mobile group was created in November 2021 to identify and assist children living and working on the streets in Adjara. (1,12) Between April and November 2021, the mobile groups identified 158 homeless children. (12)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of coordination among agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Agency Commission for the Implementation of the UN CRC	Supervises implementation of the Child Rights chapter of the National Human Rights Action Plan, which is based on provisions of the UN CRC. (2,5) In 2021, continued work toward the establishment of two psycho-social service centers for child survivors of sexual violence in Tbilisi and Kutaisi under the Agency for State Care. (1)
Inter-Agency Human Rights Council	Oversees law and policy on gender equality, children's rights, anti-discrimination, and the rights of people with disabilities. Chaired by the Prime Minister and includes government ministers and members of civil society. (2) Working groups convened during 2021 to address issues such as children's rights and sexual harassment. (1)
Inter-Agency Anti-Trafficking Coordination Council for the Implementation of Measures Against Human Trafficking	Coordinates government efforts against human trafficking, including efforts to protect and rehabilitate survivors. (13) Drafts national action plans and other strategic government programs to address human trafficking, and publishes biannual statistics on human trafficking, including sexual and labor exploitation of minors. Refers child survivors to shelters to receive social services. (1,2) Chaired by the Minister of Justice and comprises representatives from state agencies and non-state entities. (9,13) In 2021, approved a National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons (2021–2022). (1) In April, also implemented new legislation that grants survivors of human trafficking a 1-time compensatory payment without the need to go through the judicial process. (12)
Public Defender of Georgia	Monitors the observance of human rights and freedoms in Georgia. Advises the government on the nation's laws, policies, and practices on human rights issues. (40) Publishes an annual parliamentary report on human rights in Georgia with a chapter dedicated to children's rights. (1,2) In 2021, with the support of UNICEF, published a report on the administration of justice in crimes of sexual abuse and sexual exploitation of children, covering the period from July 2020 to March 2021. (1,12,41) Also published a report on the status of child labor as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic, which reviewed legislative regulations in the field of child labor and made specific, practical recommendations for other government agencies. (1,7,12)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Human Rights and Civil Integration Committee	Standing committee in Parliament that prepares new legislation and proposes amendments to existing laws relating to children's rights, human trafficking, and other human rights issues. Monitors and evaluates the government's compliance with and respect for national laws and international agreements. (42) In 2021, continued to operate the "Child Hotline" through the Agency for State Care to provide free assistance to children by connecting them to the relevant governmental and non-governmental agencies. The hotline provides both over-the-phone and in-person psychological support and counseling services for children and parents, and received 1,014 calls during the reporting period. (1)
Joint Child Referral Mechanism	Ensures interagency coordination of the enforcement of child labor laws and enumerates the procedures for referring children subject to any form of violence, including labor exploitation, to child protective services. (1,2,9,17) Through MoLA, registers cases of child exploitation identified by any government ministry. Through MoLHSA, assesses the child's condition, provides shelter and rehabilitation services to the child as needed, and monitors the child's case. (2) The referral mechanism continued to operate in 2021. (1)

In 2021, the Inter-Agency Anti-Trafficking Coordination Council for the Implementation of Measures Against Human Trafficking (A-TIP Council) drafted progress reports to evaluate the previous National Action Plans for 2017–2018 and 2019–2020. The A-TIP Council presented its findings publicly in May 2021, and incorporated lessons learned when finalizing the Governmental Strategy for 2021–2025 on Protection of Homeless Children from Violence, including Trafficking in Persons. (1) In addition, the Central Criminal Police Department and MoLHSA's Labor Inspectorate continued work on updating their Memorandum of Mutual Cooperation, with the goal of establishing joint investigatory mobile groups. However, a lack of transparency and clarity among the various coordinating bodies hinders cooperation between them, the Labor Inspectorate, and law enforcement. (1,2,14)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including the insufficient scope of existing policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Governmental Strategy on Protection of Homeless Children from Violence, including Trafficking in Persons (2021–2025) †	Aims to protect homeless children from violence and human trafficking. Formulated by the Actions against Trafficking in Human Beings (A-TIP Council), a working group which has representatives from the MOJ, MoLA, MoLHSA, and the Ministry of Education, Science, Culture, and Sport, among other government ministries, met virtually throughout the reporting period to finalize the Strategy and solicit comments from NGOs, international organizations, and other stakeholders. (1,12) Draft policy awaiting approval from the government. (1)
National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons (2021–2022) †	Aims for the social integration of children living or working on the streets, including through measures such as issuing identity documents and facilitating school enrollment. Supports the development of policy and the implementation of activities to address human trafficking. (1) In 2021, the National Action Plan committed the government to more effectively protect and promote social integration of children living or working on the streets, including those involved in begging. (1)
Code on the Rights of the Child	Seeks to establish and implement a range of measures to protect children from violence and hazardous child labor. (2,5,25) In 2021, the Public Defender's Office published a report recommending the development of a child labor policy document and relevant tools for its implementation. (1,7)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (17)

The 2018–2020 National Human Rights Action Plan expired at the end of 2020, and the government began drafting a new 3-year national human rights action plan during the reporting period. (1) Although the government has established policies to address child begging, child trafficking, child labor in street work, and hazardous child labor, it does not have a policy to address child labor associated with family farms.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Agency for State Care and for the (Statutory) Victims of Human Trafficking†	MoLHSA legal public entity under law that provides care and administers social benefits, including targeted social assistance, for survivors of child labor, human trafficking, domestic abuse, and sexual violence, as well as for elderly, disabled, and orphan populations. (1,2) Also operates six shelters and seven crisis centers for children living and working on the street. (12) Implements the government's Rehabilitation and Reintegration Strategy, which includes operating shelters for survivors of human trafficking. (17) In addition, operates a hotline for potential victims of human trafficking with assistance available in eight languages. (11) In 2021, received a budget of $17.5 million, opened a new crisis center in Batumi, and continued to operate crisis centers and shelters to help remove child beggars from the streets. (1,12) Assisted 261 street children during the reporting period, 171 of whom were directed to crisis centers and 90 of whom were directed to 24-hour shelters under MoLHSA management in 4 cities: Tbilisi, Kutaisi, Rustavi, and Batumi. (1)
Ministry of Education, Science, Culture, and Sport (MoES)†	Oversees national primary education curriculum and vocational training programs. (2) Funds programs that promote the inclusion of vulnerable children in education. (2,17) Initiatives include a program designed to increase the participation in school by street children, children forced into begging, and children who are seasonal agricultural workers; and a program to distribute free textbooks to public school students. (17) Conducts anti-trafficking activities in elementary schools, high schools, and institutions of higher education. (11) In 2021, the government continued to address the educational needs of vulnerable children by funding education for children living in MoLHSA shelters, vocational programs, and a program to increase the number of Georgian language teachers in communities with a high number of ethnic minorities. (1)
Targeted Social Assistance Program and Child Benefit Program†	Social Services Agency-administered social assistance programs designed to eliminate poverty, especially child poverty. In 2021, provided a variety of services, including shelters for homeless children, support for impoverished families, and daycare for vulnerable children. (1)
Social Rehabilitation and Childcare Program†	Places abandoned children in appropriate care and provides assistance to children at high risk of abandonment and children with disabilities. In 2021, received a budget of $12.8 million. (1)
Strengthening Labor Law Enforcement	$8.75 million USDOL-funded grant to enhance the Government of Georgia's capacity to create, implement, and monitor the application of labor laws by working with ministries of labor, labor judges, and other judicial labor authorities. Uses data collected from labor inspections to identify gaps that facilitate violations and to support legal reforms to address them. Additional information is available on the USDOL website. (43,44)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (2,9,17)

Although Georgia has programs that target child labor, including ones to address the problem of street children, their scope does not fully address the extent of the problem. (2,7,45)

In 2021, the National Statistics Office of Georgia implemented a real-time monitoring survey on the impact of the pandemic on the well-being of families and children. Data were collected through electronic tablets and telephone interviews on topics including children's school attendance. (1) According to the surveys, 98.7 percent of children between ages 6 and 17 attended school in person, virtually, or a hybrid of both. The MoES continued to operate platforms for distance learning such as the "TV School" educational project to broadcast the national curriculum's standard lessons in Georgian, minority languages, and sign language. (1) Despite these efforts, the Public Defender of Georgia noted that educational access remains inadequate for vulnerable children, including students with disabilities, street children, and children in state care. (2,46)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Georgia (Table 11).

In 2021, Ghana made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government developed a Public-Private Partnership framework to address child labor in the cocoa industry. The government also drafted a new national plan of action to eliminate human trafficking, and the Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Protection developed a communications strategy to guide outreach efforts on human trafficking issues for the years 2022–2026. However, children in Ghana are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in fishing and cocoa production and harvesting. Prohibitions related to the commercial sexual exploitation of children do not meet international standards because, while Ghana does criminally prohibit the use, procuring, and offering of a child for electronic performances, the law does not extend to live performances. The law also does not prohibit the use of children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs. In addition, the government has not acceded to the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child's Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography. Lastly, resource constraints severely limited the government's ability to adequately enforce labor laws and implement social programs during the reporting period.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Ghana are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in fishing and cocoa production. (1,2,3) In addition, NORC at the University of Chicago released a report detailing findings from a sectorally representative survey conducted in Ghana and Côte d'Ivoire during the cocoa harvesting season of 2018–2019. This report found an increase in child labor (and hazardous child labor) in cocoa production during the 10-year timeframe since the survey in 2008–2009. (4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Ghana. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	13.0 (927,591)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	89.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	13.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		93.8

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

	Herding livestock, including cattle, hunting, and work in slaughterhouses (12)
	Fishing, including for tilapia; preparing bait, nets, and fishing gear; launching, paddling, and draining canoes; diving for fish; casting and pulling fishing nets and untangling them underwater; sorting, picking, cleaning, smoking, transporting, and selling fish; cleaning and repairing nets; and building and repairing boats (1-3,8,11,13,14)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

A majority of children subjected to human trafficking in Ghana are exploited for labor in cocoa production, domestic work, commercial sexual exploitation, gold mining, and fishing. Children as young as age 4 are subjected to forced labor in fishing in the areas around Lake Volta, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (3,4,12,22-24) Children also use sharp tools and are exposed to agro-chemicals while working in the cocoa sector. (7) In addition, girls as young as age 13 from rural northern regions of Ghana travel to urban centers to work as kayaye, or female porters, carrying heavy loads on their heads in markets, are particularly vulnerable to sexual abuse and exploitation. (3,16,17)

According to the Constitution and the Education Act, primary education in Ghana is free from kindergarten through high school, though only compulsory through junior high school, and a birth certificate is not needed for enrollment. However, impoverished families often struggle to pay administrative fees and to purchase school supplies, as well as purchasing uniforms, though research found that students are not prevented from enrolling due to lack of a uniform. (25,26) The dual-track system, introduced in 2018, allows secondary school students, typically between the ages of 13 and 17, to attend school in alternating semesters and take advantage of opportunities such as vocational training when they are not in school. (16,27) Although this has significantly increased the overall number of children attending school, reports suggest that opportunities to attend vocational training are often not readily available or affordable. As a result, these children are vulnerable to exploitation in child labor during the times when they are not in school. (1,6,8,18,19,28) In addition, factors such as a shortage of classrooms, long distances to schools, absence of sanitation facilities, overcrowding in urban areas, sexual harassment of girls in schools, physical violence and verbal abuse in schools, and poor educational infrastructure, particularly in rural areas, severely limit access to education for many children. (1,3,6,8,21) In response, the government has made efforts to increase the accessibility of public education, including by building schools to reduce the distance students must travel, providing school uniforms, and lifting birth registration requirements for enrollment. (27,29) In addition, the government operates 14 national schools for visually and hearing impaired students. (26,28)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Ghana has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Ghana's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the use of children in commercial sexual exploitation.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation

‡ Age calculated based on available information (40)

While Ghana does criminally prohibit the use, procuring, and offering of a child for electronic pornographic performances, the law does not extend to live pornographic performances. Although Ghana has prohibited some hazardous work for children, the current hazardous work list does not cover all occupations or activities in which child labor is known to occur, including in cocoa production. (1,29,32,41) In addition, the law also does not prohibit the use of children for illicit activities, including for the production and trafficking of drugs.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations (MELR)	Enforces child labor laws. (16) Conducts national dialogue on Child Labor-Free Zones and a workshop on Child Labor-Free Zones to discuss child labor in the cocoa industry. (1)
Ministry of Local Government and Rural Development's District Assemblies	Through labor inspectors, investigate child labor violations, educate employers on compliance with child labor laws, and conduct inspections. (1,29) Through social services subcommittees, enforce child labor provisions in the informal sector. (1,30)
Ministry of the Interior	Through its Ghana Police Service, investigates, arrests, and prosecutes cases related to the worst forms of child labor and operates a 24/7 hotline for reporting crimes. (1) Within the Ghana Police Service, the Domestic Violence and Victim Support Unit and Anti-Human Trafficking Unit investigate cases and provide support to victims. (1,42) Through its Ghana Immigration Service, combats human trafficking through Anti-Human Smuggling and Trafficking Units. (1,43)
Ministry of Justice's Office of the Attorney General	Addresses child labor by prosecuting child labor and child trafficking crimes. (1) Within the Economic and Organized Crime Office, the Human Trafficking Unit shares responsibility with the Ministry of the Interior's Anti-Human Trafficking Unit for combating human trafficking, confiscating proceeds from human trafficking, and providing ongoing training for law enforcement on prevention measures. (44)
Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Protection (MOGCSP)	Addresses child labor and leads government efforts to prevent human trafficking. (1) Through its Department of Social Welfare, operates shelters for vulnerable and abused children, administers juvenile justice, and implements programs to combat child labor. (8) Through its Human Trafficking Secretariat, oversees the creation, implementation, and review of human trafficking policies and ensures proper monitoring, evaluation, and data collection. (1) Organized 6 stakeholder consultative meetings and engagements to review and develop the New National Plan of Action (NPA); developed a communications strategy for the years 2022–2026 on human trafficking issues; and organized 4 capacity building trainings for over 200 law enforcement officers on human trafficking and irregular migration. (23)

The Inter-Sectoral Standard Operating Procedure for child protection and family welfare provides a harmonized framework of agreed standards, principles, and procedures for all child protection and family welfare stakeholders to understand each other's roles and responsibilities. It identifies specific procedures for the use of forms, tools, and guides by social services and other key stakeholders, and it holds stakeholders accountable to each other. (2,3)

The Office of the Attorney General is responsible for prosecuting child trafficking violations; however, there were an insufficient number of state attorneys designated to prosecute human trafficking crimes. A majority of cases were handled by the Ghana Police Service's police prosecutors, whose lack of advanced legal training may impede their ability to prosecute complex criminal cases. (26,45,46) Research indicates that slow communication and challenges in evidence collection between the Ghana Police Service and the Attorney General's office may have further hampered efforts to prosecute cases of child trafficking. (1)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Ghana took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (2)	Unknown (3)

Number Conducted at Worksite	Unknown (2,47)	749 (3)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	8 (2,47)	0 (3)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	No (2,47)	N/A (3)
Number of Child Labor Penalties Imposed that Were Collected	No (2,47)	N/A (3)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (47)	Yes (3)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (47)	Yes (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (2,47)	Yes (3)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Ghana's workforce, which includes approximately 12,490,000 workers in both the formal and informal sectors. (1,3,26,48) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Ghana would employ about 833 inspectors. (49) Research found that inadequate resources, including funding, transportation, office space, and office supplies, hamper the labor inspectorate's capacity to enforce child labor laws, particularly in the informal sector in which child labor is most common. (1,2,29) In addition, a formal referral mechanism continued to be hindered by the lack of funding, shelter space, and transportation for victims. (1,2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Ghana took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (2,47)	Yes (3)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (2)	N/A (3)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (2)	Unknown (3)
Number of Investigations	119 (2)	Unknown (3)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (2,47)	265 (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (2,47)	16 (3)
Number of Convictions	8 (2)	3 (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (2)	Unknown (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (2)	Yes (3)

Criminal enforcement agencies lack the resources to properly monitor sectors in which the worst forms of child labor are known to occur. For example, on Lake Volta, the Ghana Police Service's Marine Police Unit only recently acquired boats for patrol for forced labor in fishing. (19,50)

During the reporting period, the Government of the Republic of Ghana sponsored multiple training events to help address trafficking in persons. There were also improvements to communication procedures between several agencies that allowed rescuers to adequately prepare for the arrival of victims. (23)

The IOM developed a Trafficking in Persons Information System to improve case tracking. While several ministries, including the Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations; the Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Protection; the Ministry of Justice; and the Ministry of the Interior, have committed to using this system, research shows limited use of the Trafficking in Persons Information System during the reporting period. (1)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including an absence of reporting on efforts to address child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Coordinates government efforts to address the worst forms of child labor and oversees implementation of the National Plan of Action Phase II on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor, which includes implementation of the Ghana Child Labor Monitoring System. (1,51) Led by MELR's Child Labor Unit, includes representatives from other ministries, employers' and workers' organizations, and civil society. (1,51-53) During the reporting period, the committee met on a quarterly basis and increased anti-trafficking prevention efforts. (23)
Inter-ministerial Committee to Combat Human Trafficking	Aims to prevent Ghanaian migrants from becoming victims of human trafficking. Comprises MELR, MOGCSF, the Ministry of Justice, and the Ministry of the Interior. (1,26) Research was unable to determine the activities undertaken by this coordinating body during the reporting period.
Ministry of Employment and Labor Relations Child Labor Unit	Facilitates the development of policies and laws to prevent child labor, coordinates interventions to address child labor, and oversees child protection committees at the district level. (51,54) Provides technical support to ministries, departments and agencies, employers' and workers' organizations, and international agencies such as ILO, IOM, and UNICEF, and is responsible for conducting labor inspections in all sectors except the security and intelligence agencies. (1) During the reporting period, the Ministry participated in the fifth global conference on the elimination of child labor. (55)
Human Trafficking Management Board	Advises the MOGCSF on anti-trafficking policy, promotes prevention efforts, facilitates the protection and reintegration of child trafficking victims, and administers the Human Trafficking Fund. Continued to meet quarterly to carry out these activities during the reporting period. (26,23)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan of Action Phase II on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2017–2020)	Aimed to address gaps identified in the first National Plan of Action (2009–2015), improve coordination, and reduce the worst forms of child labor to 10 percent by 2021, with a focus on the fishing, mining, and cocoa sectors. (7,45,52) A new National Plan of Action has been developed to cover the period between 2022 to 2026 to eliminate human trafficking in Ghana, but has yet to be finalized. (56)
National Plan of Action for the Elimination of Human Trafficking in Ghana (2017–2021)	Aimed to improve data collection, enhance victim protection, increase accountability for perpetrators, and conduct prevention and outreach, including an expansion of the Livelihood Empowerment Against Poverty Program. (57) A new National Plan of Action for 2022–2026 has been developed to eliminate human trafficking in Ghana, but has yet to be finalized. (23)
Hazardous Child Labor Activity Frameworks	Includes the Hazardous Child Labor Activity Framework and the Hazardous Child Labor Activity Framework for the Cocoa Sector. Developed in consultation with workers' and employers' organizations to identify hazardous activities that should be prohibited for children. (33,41) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement these policies during the reporting period.
2010 Declaration of Joint Action to Support the Implementation of the Harkin-Engel Protocol (2010 Declaration) and Its Accompanying Framework of Action	Joint Declaration by the Governments of Ghana, Côte d'Ivoire, and the United States, and the International Cocoa and Chocolate Industry. (58–60) Provides resources and coordinates with key stakeholders on efforts to reduce the worst forms of child labor in cocoa-producing areas. (58,59) Ensures that all project efforts implemented under the Declaration and Framework align with Ghana's national action plans to promote coherence and sustainability. (58–60) During the reporting period, a Public-Private Partnership framework was developed to address child labor in the cocoa industry. In addition, USDOL-funded projects and some industry-funded projects carried out activities in support of this policy during the reporting period. (3,26)
Minerals and Mining Policy of Ghana	Prohibits child labor in mining and stipulates children who visit mining sites must be supervised. (61) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (42,63)

Over the first six months of 2021, the EU multi-stakeholder dialogue for sustainable cocoa level have had a series of roundtables, so-called Cocoa Talks, which delved into significant dimensions of sustainability which include efforts to address child labor. (64)

Although the government made strides in the implementation of its National Plan of Action for the Elimination of Human Trafficking in Ghana, research indicates that the government relied heavily on NGOs to implement the mandates of this policy. (19)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate funding and the inadequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Industry-Funded Projects	Projects that aim to increase sustainability in the cocoa sector; improve farmer livelihoods, improve access to education, and address the worst forms of child labor in cocoa-growing areas. Some projects may be in support of the World Cocoa Foundation's CocoaAction (2014–2020) initiative and the spirit of the 2010 Declaration. (60) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement these social programs during the reporting period.
U.S. Government-Funded Projects	Projects that aim to improve child protection measures in partnership with the host government. These projects include: the Child Protection Compact Partnership (2015–2020), a $5 million USDOS-funded project implemented by IOM and local NGO Free the Slaves; Accelerating Care Reform (2016–2020), an $8 million USAID-funded project implemented by the Department of Social Welfare and UNICEF to strengthen the social welfare system; and the Sustainable Fisheries Management Project (2014–2020), a $24 million USAID-funded project implemented by University of Rhode Island's Coastal Resource Center; a $2.1 million USDOS funded project implemented by the International Justice Mission to Strengthening the Criminal Justice System's Response to Human Trafficking in Ghana (2019-2023). (16,56,65,66)
MOGCSP Programs†	Programs that aim to support vulnerable children. Includes: the Program to Assist Kayayei , which provides rehabilitation and reintegration support; the temporary program "Get Off the Street," which aims to remove children from the street and reintegrate them into family and educational settings; the Human Trafficking Fund, which aims to provide financial support to victims; and the conditional cash transfer program, which aims to provide monetary support to poor households with orphans and vulnerable children on the condition that these children attend school. (43,67) During the reporting period, technical and vocational skills trainings were provided by the Assist Kayayei program. (56)
Educational Programs‡	Ministry of Education-funded programs under the Free Compulsory Universal Basic Education aim to increase school attendance and enrollment. (68) MOGCSP's Ghana School Feeding Program aims to reduce malnutrition and improve attendance among students; its Capitation Grant Scheme helps defray the cost of basic education for students in public primary schools; and its Ghana Education Service—Girls' Education Unit places girls' education officers at the regional and district levels and mobilizes communities to enroll more girls in school. (67,69) During the reporting period, the program fed 3,448,065 pupils in 10,832 public basic schools. (56)
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects that aim to eliminate child labor. These projects include: MATE MASIE (2020-2024), a $4 million project being implemented by Winrock; Adwuma Pa (2018–2022), a $5 million project implemented by CARE; Combating Forced Labor and Labor Trafficking of Adults and Children in Ghana and Côte d'Ivoire (2017–2022), a $3.4 million project implemented by Verité; and Assessing Progress in Reducing Child Labor in Cocoa-Growing Areas of Côte d'Ivoire and Ghana (2015–2021), a $3.4 million project implemented by NORC at the University of Chicago, and the ILO Global Accelerator Project, a $10 million project implemented by the ILO. † Program is funded by the Government of Ghana.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (46,69,70,71)

Research indicates a lack of funding as one of the primary obstacles in implementing programs to address child labor. (1,3,43) In addition, government-run shelters for victims of the worst forms of child labor are few, and the government relies significantly on NGO-run shelters to which they can refer rescued children. (1,21,26)

During the reporting period, the EU contributed $27.1 million to the sustainability of cocoa in Côte d'Ivoire, Ghana, and Cameroon. The purpose of this project is to provide decent living income for farmers, reverse the effects of deforestation, and eliminate child labor. (72)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Although the government has worked closely with industry, NGOs, and international organizations to implement child labor programs in cocoa production, fishing, and mining, the breadth of these programs remains insufficient to address the scope of the problem. (3) In addition, other areas that required further government attention included provisioning shelters in more regions and districts and providing adequate funding and logistics for rescue operations and victim protection. (19)

In 2021, Grenada made no advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in Grenada, no official study of child labor has been done to confirm this. The government's ability to prevent children from being subjected to the worst forms of child labor is limited because existing laws do not comprehensively prohibit child trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. In addition, the government has not published data on labor inspectorate funding.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Grenada. (1) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Grenada. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2018, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Grenada has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 2).

Table 2. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 3). However, gaps exist in Grenada's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of using children in illicit activities.

Table 3. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 32 of the Employment Act (3)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No

NO ADVANCEMENT

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 25 of the Employment Act; Article 4 of the Constitution; Articles 9–11 of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act (3-5)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	No		Articles 9–11 of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act (5)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 137 and 188 of the Criminal Code; Article 12 of the Electronic Crimes Bill; Article 10 of the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act (5-7)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	N/A†
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A†
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles 2 and 15 of the Education Act (8)
Free Public Education	No		Article 16 of the Education Act (8)

† Country has no standing military (9)

Grenada's Employment and Education Act allows holiday employment for children under age 16 under the supervision of their parents, but this Act does not meet international standards as it does not specify the minimum age, types of work, or number of hours permitted for such work. (1,3,10) Despite establishing heightened penalties for traffickers of children, the Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act does not sufficiently prohibit the trafficking of children because it requires the use of force, threats, abuse of power, or other forms of coercion to classify an act as human trafficking. (5) The Criminal Code, Electronic Crimes Bill, and Prevention of Trafficking in Persons Act do not comprehensively prohibit the commercial sexual exploitation of all children. (5,7) The government also has not established laws that prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, including drug production. Moreover, laws providing for free basic education do not meet international standards because they permit schools to levy fees for students who reside in Grenada but are not citizens. (8)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor	Enforces laws related to child labor through its Labor Commission, which generates a list of workplaces to inspect and employs labor officers who make unannounced visits to all workplaces on the list. (1)
Royal Grenada Police Force (RGPF)	Investigates crimes and enforces laws related to child labor. If child labor is confirmed, RGPF is notified and works with the Child Protection Authority (CPA) and Ministry of Social Development, Housing & Community Empowerment to have the child removed from the home (if needed) and bring charges against the offenders. (11) Helps CPA and the Ministry of Social Development, Housing & Community Empowerment provide emergency services to children. (1)
Child Protection Authority (CPA)	Enforces laws related to child labor by receiving and investigating reports of child abuse, including child labor. Investigations are conducted with RGPF and the Ministry of Social Development, Housing & Community Empowerment. Provides social and protective services to child victims, including by requesting court emergency protection orders. (1,11-13)
Ministry of Social Development, Housing & Community Empowerment	Oversees the Child Abuse Hotline and investigates reports of child abuse, including child labor. Refers child abuse cases to CPA and criminal cases to RGPF. (11-13) Enforces laws related to school attendance and provides programs to support school attendance. (13)
Public Prosecutor's Office	Represents the State of Grenada and is responsible for prosecuting criminal cases in lower and high courts. Authorized to institute, overtake, or discontinue criminal prosecutions. (1) Functions independently, with overarching oversight of all public prosecutions. (1)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Grenada took actions to address child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource and human resource allocation.

The Labor Commission determines which inspections to conduct by generating a list of workplaces to inspect; labor officers then make unannounced visits to all workplaces on the list. (15) Although labor inspectors are not authorized to assess penalties, they inform the Royal Grenada Police Force (RGPF) if a child labor violation is found, and RGPF then conducts a criminal investigation. (14,16) The government did not provide complete data on its labor law enforcement efforts, including labor inspectorate funding and training. (14,17) Research indicates that labor inspection and enforcement agencies have limited financial and human resources. (14,16)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, the government's criminal law enforcement agencies appeared to function adequately in addressing child labor (Table 6).

Table 6. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (14)	Yes (1)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (14)	N/A (1)
Refresher Courses Provided	Unknown (14)	No (1)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (14)	0 (1)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (14)	N/A (1)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (14)	N/A (1)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (14)	N/A (1)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (14)	N/A (1)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (14)	Yes (1)

The government releases annual reports on its criminal law enforcement efforts and crime statistics. If the RGPF finds sufficient evidence of a criminal violation, then the police may submit findings for possible prosecution by the Public Prosecutor's Office. (1) During the reporting period, there were no known or reported cases of child labor; therefore, no actions were taken by criminal law enforcement agencies. (1)

In 2021, Guatemala made significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government established the Mobile Units for the Prevention of Sexual Violence, Exploitation, and Human Trafficking Program in order to provide services and raise awareness on human trafficking in rural and remote communities. The Public Ministry also opened two new regional prosecutor's offices that will prosecute cases related to trafficking in persons, expanding access to justice for victims. Furthermore, the government amended legislation to increase the reach and budget of the school feeding program by 57 percent, making it available to all students enrolled in public school. Together with United Nations Children's Fund and Survivors' Foundation, the government launched three new tools aimed at protecting children online. Moreover, Guatemala signed a cooperation agreement with the Governments of El Salvador and Honduras to strengthen efforts against trafficking in persons. However, children in Guatemala are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, including in the production of coffee. An insufficient number of labor inspectors and resources limit the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare's ability to combat child labor. In addition, existing social programs are insufficient to reach all children engaged in exploitative labor and, in particular, do not target children engaged in domestic work or agriculture.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Guatemala are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, including in the production of coffee. (1,2,3) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Guatemala.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Indigenous children account for more than half of child laborers in Guatemala, and children in rural areas are more likely to work than children in urban areas. Most of these children are engaged in agricultural activity. (21,29) In agriculture, working conditions for children involve using machetes and other dangerous tools, including in the cultivation of sugarcane. (15,30) Children as young as age 5 also work in coffee fields picking and carrying heavy loads of coffee beans and mixing and applying pesticides. (31) In addition, recently corroborated reports indicate that children are often sent into cities by their parents to work as street performers or beggars. Some of these children are sold to criminal organizations, work very long hours, and are at times forced to wear paint, which is often toxic, to attract more attention as they perform in the streets. (21)

Children, both Guatemalan-born and from other countries, are victims of commercial sexual exploitation, including in sex tourism. (19,27) Guatemala is a destination country for child sex tourists from Canada, the United States, and Western Europe. (2,3) Departments with high numbers of commercial sexual exploitation victims include Alta Verapaz, Escuintla, Guatemala, Huehuetenango, Quiché, and Quetzaltenango. (16) Girls, LGBTQI+ persons, and indigenous Guatemalans are particularly vulnerable to human trafficking. (27) Children are exploited for forced labor in Guatemala, particularly in agriculture and domestic work. (19) They are also forced to engage in street begging and vending in Guatemala City and along the border with Mexico. (3,28) Traffickers are increasingly using social media and online game applications to recruit children. (3,26) Multiple sources also indicate that children are recruited into gangs to serve as lookouts, couriers, and drug dealers, or to commit extortion. Moreover, criminal organizations, including gangs, exploit girls in sex trafficking. (1,19,21)

Guatemalan children often emigrate to escape violence, extortion, and forced recruitment by gangs, in addition to seeking economic opportunities and family reunification. Human trafficking is also a driver of child migration. (32,33) Gangs target adolescent girls for forced commercial sex, causing them and sometimes their entire families to flee Guatemala in fear. (33) Once en route, however, girls and other children from Guatemala remain vulnerable to human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (32,33)

Significant barriers to accessing education exist in Guatemala, particularly for girls, indigenous children, and children in rural areas. (1,15) Education is free in Guatemala, however, there is an insufficient number of primary and secondary schools. (21,34) A lack of teachers, schools, transportation, and sanitary facilities at public schools, all create barriers to education. (1,13,16,21) The Ministry of Education does not supply textbooks to most public schools. (16) Other barriers to education include sexual violence, insecurity, crime and violence in the school's surroundings, and the risk of suffering violence on their travel to school. (13) All these factors contribute to poor outcomes, high dropout rates, and high opportunity costs. (13,16) The education system is also unable to address the needs of students with disabilities, and the few existing education programs for children with disabilities rely mainly on non-profit support. (1,16,21,22) During the reporting period and as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic, an additional barrier to education was the students' lack of access to personal computers and Internet services. Some reports estimate that 106,000 children left school in 2020. (35) Research demonstrates that children who do not attend school are more vulnerable to child labor, including its worst forms. (36)

Reports indicate that there is a high degree of illiteracy among girls. (37,38) Due to the heightened security risks for girls traveling alone and cultural norms that prioritize boys' education over that of girls, girls in rural areas have lower enrollment rates in secondary school than boys. (16,21,22) Indigenous children in general have lower enrollment rates compared to other children. There are not enough qualified teachers to provide instruction in the predominant native languages, and classroom materials available in these languages are insufficient. (15,38) According to information from the Ministry of Education, there are over one million bilingual students who speak one of the 24 national languages enrolled in public schools. The Ministry of Education reported that it developed self-learning educational materials in different Mayan languages, which were distributed as part of the virtual teaching program during 2020 and 2021. (13) In 2021, the government hired 21,321 new permanent teachers in the country, including filling vacant positions. (13)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Guatemala has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓

UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Guatemala's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including in the provisions for light work for children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	14	Articles 31 and 148 of the Labor Code; Article 6 and 32 of Government Accord 112-2006; Ministerial Agreement Number 260-2019 (39-41)

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 74 of the Constitution; Article 33 of the National Education Law; Ministerial Agreement 1055-2009 (50-52)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 74 of the Constitution; Article 1 of Government Agreement 226-2008 (50,53)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (50,54)

Although Articles 32 and 150 of the Labor Code allow the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare (MTPS) to authorize children under age 14 to work under exceptional circumstances—including if MTPS determines that children must work to support their family due to poverty—the law does not define the total number of hours, kinds of tasks, or age range applicable for this exception. This is inconsistent with international standards on light work. (39) MTPS indicated that no such exceptions have been granted since 2016. (1,55)

MTPS previously approved Ministerial Agreement Number 260-2019, "Procedure for the effective application of Convention 138 of the International Labor Organization, regarding the Convention on the Minimum Age for Admission of Employment," which sets forth procedures for protecting adolescents between ages 15 and 18 and ensuring that they do not participate in the worst forms of child labor. (21,41) However, the agreement does not explicitly cover children age 14, who are allowed to work under Guatemala's Labor Code (or children under age 14 who are allowed to work in exceptional circumstances). Therefore, it is unclear if this mechanism effectively raises the minimum age for work to age 15.

In September 2021, Congress passed amendments to a piece of 2017 legislation, increasing the budget allocation for the school feeding program by 57 percent starting in 2022. This amendment also allows the expansion of the school feeding program to initial school students (ages 3 to 5) and to secondary school students (ages 12 to 17) starting in 2023. (13)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare's (MTPS) Inspection Division	Enforces child labor laws, including prohibitions on the worst forms of child labor, by inspecting businesses and responding to child labor complaints. (21) Refers children found in child labor to government social services and refers complaints to the MTPS Adolescent Workers Protection Unit. (56,57) Refers cases of worst forms of child labor to the Secretariat Against Sexual Violence, Exploitation, and Trafficking in Persons (SVET) and unresolved cases to labor courts for review and sanctions, as appropriate. (13)
National Civil Police	Investigates cases of child trafficking through the Trafficking in Persons and Forced Labor Unit located within the Special Investigation Police, and operates a hotline to receive reports of suspected child trafficking cases. Also conducts welfare inspections in child labor cases and refer cases to civil court. (13,21) In 2021, the National Civil Police (PNC) implemented the Specialized Unit Against Trafficking in Persons in Quetzaltenango which has jurisdiction in eight departments of the region, with the support of SVET and the technical-financial assistance of the U.S. Government, including the Bureau of International Narcotics and Law Enforcement and the Embassy of the United States in Guatemala. The PNC also developed and approved a Protocol for Police Action in the Investigation of Human Trafficking and Related Crimes, as a tool to improve its ability to investigate human trafficking crimes and support the work it carries out. (58)
Public Ministry, Special Prosecutor's Office	Receives case referrals involving the worst forms of child labor from labor inspectors. Investigates cases of human trafficking and forced labor through the Special Prosecutor's Office Against Trafficking in Persons. (13) On September 29, 2021 the Public Ministry opened two new regional prosecutor's offices, expanding access to justice. One of these offices is located in the Northeast Regional Agency based in Chiquimula, this being the first prosecutor office in this Agency, while the other office is located in the Northern Regional Agency, based in Alta Verapaz. (58,92) These new Regional Prosecution Agencies will prosecute crimes related to trafficking in persons in its different forms, as well as carry out the necessary actions to identify, rescue, and attend to survivors of these crimes. (58,92)
Solicitor General's Office	Receives complaints regarding the exploitation of children. Initiates legal proceedings, refers cases to the National Civil Police, and ensures the legal representation of children whose rights have been violated. (21)
Secretariat of Social Well-Being	Establishes procedural guidelines for government agencies and NGOs responsible for the protection and care of child and adolescent victims of commercial sexual exploitation via the Protocol for Identifying and Assisting Child and Adolescent Victims of Commercial Sexual Exploitation. Administrative unit under the Executive branch charged with formulating, coordinating, and executing public policies related to the protection of children and adolescents. (59,60)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Guatemala took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MTPS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient inspection planning.

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

The number of labor inspections conducted during the reporting period is unknown, as the MTPS did not disaggregate their data by worksite inspections, desk audits, and conciliations. Additionally, reports indicate that there are significant issues in the way conciliations are carried out in the country. (62) In carrying out conciliations, inspectors take all allegations as true and issue remediation orders for employers without ever verifying facts. Moreover, reports indicate that in this process workers are effectively encouraged to agree to only part of the benefits owed to them, essentially relinquishing their labor rights. (11,62) In some cases, inspectors receive bribes from employers to steer workers towards settling. (62) Furthermore, inspectors don't conduct inspections in many cases, even when required to do so by law, and instead substitute conciliations for site inspections. (11,62)

In 2021, the General Labor Inspectorate conducted 2,778 child labor-specific inspections. The inspections were designed to target sectors in which children are the most vulnerable for work or the worst forms of child labor, such as small convenience stores, corn tortilla making, agriculture, manufacturing and handling of explosive and pyrotechnic substances, marble shops, broccoli plantations, garbage extraction activities, manufacturing gravel (crushed stones), informal work, and other worst forms of child labor. (13) During the reporting period, 16 violations of child labor laws were found. As of November 2021, 18 children and adolescents had been removed from child labor as a result of inspections. (13)

Although laws governing the minimum age for work and hazardous work apply in both the formal and informal sectors, labor inspectors rarely inspect informal workplaces, in which child labor violations are most likely to occur. (1,16,21,22) Some reports question the quality of inspections for child labor violations, particularly the scope and coverage across industries. (15) Civil society organizations state that, during worksite inspections, labor inspectors often meet only with business owners or supervisors and bypass conducting worker interviews. (6) Research indicates that labor inspectors are not appropriately trained to perform inspections for child labor. (1,7,9) Furthermore, MTPS reported that inspectors conducted site visits in Spanish only, the language in use at worksites, but this may hinder inspections when encountering indigenous language speakers. (16)

In 2021, MTPS reported it purchased 28 vehicles for the labor inspectorate, as well as desks and filing cabinets for the different departmental delegations. (13) However, MTPS has indicated that the funding level is still insufficient to cover the inspectorate's needs, particularly for transportation, fuel, and per diem costs. (16) Furthermore, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Guatemala's workforce, which includes more than 7.2 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing countries, Guatemala would need to employ about 484 labor inspectors. (63,64) Even though Guatemala employs 178 labor inspectors, only about 80 labor inspectors were active during most of the reporting period. MTPS also indicated that while there are six inspectors designated to work on child labor cases in the Department of Guatemala, all labor inspectors throughout the country carry out specific child labor inspections. (13)

The government has a mechanism for filing complaints regarding child labor, but reports state that the mechanism is not efficient in responding to those complaints. (1,21,22) Furthermore, while Guatemala has established a referral mechanism between responsible agencies in cases of child labor, coordination between these agencies remains a challenge and requires the intervention of NGOs or international missions. (21) After the creation of the Inter-Institutional Coordinating Entity Against Labor Exploitation and Child Labor (CICELTI), complainants can now file concerns related to trafficking in persons (forced labor and labor exploitation modalities) and the worst forms of child labor through a WhatsApp number and an e-mail address. (16) However, it is still a challenge for the government to provide services to children that are removed from child labor situations because of a lack of coordination between government agencies. (11) In 2017, the General Labor Inspectorate regained the authority to impose penalties for labor law violations, and it began implementing this authority in 2018, including for child labor law violations. Even though inspectors can now impose fines for labor violations, many of these fines are successfully challenged in court due to inspectors not carrying out site inspections even when required to do so by law, ultimately making the government unable to collect those fines. (62)

A comprehensive training plan for inspectors on human and labor rights started in November 2020, with support from the ILO, and concluded in November 2021. (13) Additionally, the United Nations Higher Commissioner Office of Human Rights in Guatemala provided training on "International Standards in Matters of Contemporary Slavery with Emphasis on the Agricultural Sector" in September and October of the reporting year. Some of the participants in this training included the general labor inspector, a deputy labor inspector, the departmental labor inspector delegate from Escuintla, the supervisor of Guatemala's departmental delegation, and the legal advisor from the labor inspectorate. (13)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Guatemala took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the National Civil Police that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient training for criminal investigators.

In 2021, the Public Ministry's prosecution office responsible for human trafficking crimes reported that it investigated 201 new cases related to the modalities of commercial sexual exploitation, pornographic performances and pornography, and labor exploitation. These cases could include one or more victims. (13) The government reported prosecuting 19 cases involving the worst forms of child labor. The Public Ministry noted that there could be one or more defendants involved in those cases. (13) There were 38 convictions related to child labor crimes, such as human trafficking, employment of minors in activities harmful for their wellbeing, and child pornography. (13)

Guatemala made efforts to increase anti-trafficking in persons resources and capacity outside of Guatemala City, and the Public Ministry continued making social workers and psychologists available to human trafficking survivors to serve as liaisons as they navigated proceedings and sought medical care. (2) However, communities in the interior of the country, particularly rural areas, continue to suffer from a lack of government services when compared to urban areas, including government assistance for survivors of the worst forms of child labor. (93)

In 2021, criminal law enforcement investigators received training on different criminal laws, including those related to labor exploitation and child labor. The Public Ministry reported that due to the pandemic it provided virtual training to new employees. (13) The government also reported providing workshops for Guatemala City municipal government and courts personnel about crimes related to trafficking in persons with the objective of improving the identification of cases and achieving effective criminal prosecution. The Special Prosecutor's Office Against Trafficking in Persons, especially the units against crimes related to Online Child Sexual Exploitation, received training on the use of the International Center for Missing and Exploited Children technological tool, to better address crimes related to children and adolescents online. (58) Through programs that cover the prevention and detection of trafficking in persons, as well as support for survivors, the government carried out trainings for 966 government employees, including professional and political staff from the Public Ministry, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Sexual Violence, Exploitation, and Trafficking in Persons (SVET), the Human Rights Ombudsman's office, and the Solicitor General's office. SVET was the largest implementer of training, carrying out most of the training for the 966 officials through standard instructional formats. (58)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In order to increase the coordination of the Referral Network for victims of crime, the Public Ministry established a messaging system to support regular and direct communication between the different institutions that offer attention to survivors. (58) Additionally, the government has established specialized courts to hear cases of human trafficking of adults and children and gender-based violence. Despite this, judges are often unable to schedule hearings and trials in a timely manner and often lack sufficient training to properly identify trafficking in persons cases. (28)

In 2021, the Supreme Court of Justice instituted in the Department of Totonicapán a court for children and adolescents in conflict with the criminal law. This court is tasked with ensuring the superior well-being of children and adolescents subjected to criminal proceedings. (13,94) The Supreme Court of Justice also instituted a 24-hour first-instance criminal court with specific jurisdiction to hear offenses committed against children and adolescents that incorporates in its mission the Model for Comprehensive Care of Children and Adolescents (MAINA). (13)

Although SVET is the primary institution charged with raising awareness on human trafficking, it has no authority to bring cases to the justice system and its small budget limits its reach beyond urban areas. (28) Local NGO reports indicate that training is insufficient outside the capital. (1,22) Law enforcement agencies also lack sufficient vehicles, fuel, and criminal investigators, particularly outside Guatemala City. (15) MTPS has noted that resources are inadequate to carry out complex criminal investigations and to sufficiently address the different modalities of trafficking in persons crimes. (1,13) This concern is supported by the Public Ministry, which noted that due to the complexity of these investigations and crimes, more resources are necessary to conduct investigations. The Public Ministry also noted that the Special Prosecutor's Office Against Human Trafficking does not have an assigned budget and that it depends on the overall budget allocated to the Public Ministry. (16)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that may hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including lack of coordination between agencies and civil society.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Specific Cabinet on Social Development (GEDS)	Coordinates, articulates, and manages policies related to development, social protection, and violence prevention for vulnerable populations such as children, women, indigenous populations, the elderly, individuals with disabilities, and people from rural areas. Established via Agreement 2-2019, the Thematic Working Group for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor assumed the National Commission for the Eradication of Child Labor's (CONAPETI) duties of coordinating government policies and efforts to combat child labor. (21) During the reporting period, efforts included: launching the International Year for the Elimination of Child Labor; working in the construction of the National Strategy and Plan for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and Protection of Adolescent Workers; and working in the construction of strategic lines of the Road Map 2021–2025 within the framework of the Alliance 8.7 of the Regional Initiative Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor. (13)
Departmental Committees for the Eradication of Child Labor (CODEPETI)	Coordinate government efforts to combat child labor at the departmental or regional level. Comprising department-level representatives of member agencies of the Thematic Working Group for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor, and NGO and business representatives. (13) In 2021, carried out regional workshops with the Ministry of Labor, civil society, cooperation agencies, representatives from the private and labor sector, and representatives from several Mayan communities. (13)
Secretariat Against Sexual Violence, Exploitation, and Trafficking in Persons (SVET)	Coordinates all government efforts against human trafficking, including for commercial sexual exploitation of children and forced child labor, by responding to cases and providing support for victims. (13,65) Operates shelters to serve minor victims of human trafficking and a hotline to file child sex tourism complaints. Led by the Vice President's Office. (65) Launched the Inter-Institutional Commission Against Trafficking-in-Persons (CIT), which is co-chaired by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and includes 32 government and civil society institutions. CIT develops and manages initiatives to combat human trafficking. (28,66) On July 30, 2021, presented its semi-annual work report for the first half of the year. This report highlighted the achievements and advances made by the government in their work to address human trafficking. (67) Together with UNICEF and Survivors' Foundation ( Fundación Sobrevivientes ), a civil society organization, launched three new tools aimed at protecting children online. (68) They are aimed at providing information on how to safely navigate the web to parents, caregivers, and the children and adolescent themselves. The tools consist of a youth consultation hotline, accessible through Facebook Messenger and WhatsApp, a website, and a phone app. (68)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Institutional Coordinating Entity Against Labor Exploitation and Child Labor (CICELTI)*	Aims to identify victims of human trafficking, make anti-trafficking in persons institutions more effective, provide support to victims to prevent them from being targeted again, and encourage the strengthening of government mechanisms to prevent labor exploitation, forced labor, and other forms of human trafficking. It also coordinates efforts to combat labor exploitation, forced labor, and child labor. (16) Launched in 2020 by MTPS, the Solicitor General's Office, the Public Ministry, and SVET. Established as part of the amendments to the Agreement for Inter-Institutional Coordination for the Comprehensive Approach of Trafficking in Persons in the Modality of Labor Exploitation and Forced Labor that was signed on July 30, 2019. (16) In 2021, it continued to carry out coordinated work, and received 153 complaints through its platform, of which 34 were referred to Attorney General's Office and 60 to the Public Ministry; the remaining 59 were not related to labor exploitation or child labor. (13) The Attorney General's Office, Public Ministry, MTPS, and the Ministry of Health rescued 14 minors as of November 29, 2021 in the seven joint operations it carried out through the country. (13) Additionally, carried out activities to identify and combat labor exploitation in its different modalities. Some of the activities included meetings to support the fight against child labor in fireworks production with the mayors from San Juan Sacatepequez and San Raymundo of the department of Guatemala. (13) Met with the mayor from Coban, Alta Verapaz to support the encouragement of complaints to combat child labor in that municipality. (13)
National Platform for the Prevention and Protection of Children and Adolescents Against Sexual Exploitation in Travel and Tourism	Targets sexual exploitation of children and adolescents in the travel and tourism sector. (18) Oversees the Code of Conduct Against Sex Tourism, a mandatory code for trade group membership that forbids providing services to customers believed to be engaging in commercial sexual exploitation of children. Presided over by SVET and includes 10 government, private sector, and civil society institutions. (18) Worked on the creation of alerts of sexual offenders, including carrying out discussions on the operations and entities participating in the creation of the alert, as well as updated information on the creation of the sexual offender alert during the reporting period. (13) Strengthened the prevention mechanism for the identification of children and adolescents in sexual exploitation in travel and tourism. Additionally, established a communication strategy during the Easter period to inform people on prevention of sexual exploitation. (13) The strategy included social media messages, which reached 21,257 people. (13)

‡ The government had other mechanisms that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (43,69)

Despite improvements in inter-agency coordination to address human trafficking, there continues to be a lack of effective coordination among other government institutions and civil society actors who provide services and protection to victims of child labor. Some civil society organizations have indicated that despite being members of the Inter-Institutional Commission Against Trafficking in Persons, the commission is not fully inclusive of civil society perspectives and that they participate primarily as observers on the commission. (28) Furthermore, reporting indicates that SVET lacks political support from other parts of the government, even though it plays a significant role in combating human trafficking in Guatemala. (28)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that may hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation of key national policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Protocol for Providing Comprehensive Health Care to Children and Adolescents in the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Requires public health workers to enter information into a database about any child whose injuries may have been labor-related. Implemented by the Ministry of Public Health and Social Assistance. (71,72) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy in 2021.
Inter-Institutional Protocol for the Protection and Attention of Victims of Human Trafficking	Provides instruction on how to process sex crimes, including commercial sexual exploitation of children, and how to assist prospective victims of human trafficking. (18,43,72) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy in 2021.
Public Policy on Human Trafficking and the Comprehensive Protection of Victims (2014–2024)	Aims to guarantee protection for and comprehensive attention to human trafficking victims, and promote prevention, detection, prosecution, and sanction of this crime. Includes a National Plan of Strategic Action that directs the government's actions on preventing and combating human trafficking. (73) In 2021, MTPS, SVET, and the Ministry of Government with the endorsement of the Political Science School of the University of San Carlos coordinated with the Sub Directorate of Studies and Doctrine to carry out a training plan with the National Civil Police (PNC) on preventing and addressing exploitation, trafficking in persons, and the worst forms of child labor. (13) The training was on the prevention and elimination of exploitation, trafficking in persons, and the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, 60 PNC officers completed 12 eight-hour training sessions. (13)

Guatemala

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

In 2021, the government of Guatemala signed a cooperation agreement with the governments of El Salvador and Honduras to increase efforts against trafficking in persons. This cooperation agreement strengthens the existing coordination with prosecutors in the region on investigations, search and rescue of victims, repatriation or return of nationals or foreign victims, legal protection of victims, and collection of evidence. (74,75)

Guatemala is a member of the global platform Alliance 8.7. As such, Guatemala is committed to achieve goal 8.7 for a world free of forced labor, modern slavery, and human trafficking. (13) In 2021, as part of inter-institutional coordination and with a tripartite approach, employers, workers, and government representatives held virtual meetings to monitor Guatemala's commitments as a pioneer country and to coordinate the strategic planning workshop as a basis for the fulfillment of those commitments. Participants in these meetings also reviewed and validated the report "The Strategic Lines for the Construction of a Roadmap to make Guatemala a Country Free of Child Labor and its Worst Forms 2021–2025." (13,76)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Ministry of Development's Social Poverty Reducing Programs†	Conditional Cash Transfer for Education and Health Program ( Mi Bono Social ) provides cash assistance to families with school-age children, conditioned on children's school attendance. (22) Conditional Cash Transfers for Food Assistance Program ( Mi Bolsa Social ) provides food assistance to poor families, with the requirement that their children attend school. (22,77) Social Dining Hall ( Mi Comedor Social ) provides access to food for people in situations of poverty, crisis, and emergency, including children. (16,77) Reports indicate all these programs remained active in 2021. (13)
Care Strategy for School Success in First Grade ( Estrategia de Atención para el Éxito Escolar en Primer Grado de Primaria )†	Seeks to decrease school dropout rates and increase enrollment and advancement to the next grade at a national level. (22,78) Goals include generating conditions to achieve competency in reading and writing, providing teacher training, conducting diagnostic evaluations, and supplying educational materials and pedagogical support. (78,79) Aims to serve 35,000 first grade students. (79) Relaunched in 2019 through Ministerial Accord 2669-2019 with a focus on improving indicators of success and conditions for learning for first graders. (80) Research was unable to determine whether actions were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.
Mobile Units for the Prevention of Sexual Violence, Exploitation and Human Trafficking (UNIVET)*	Established in October 2021 by SVET, with support from UNHCR. Consists of a fleet of seven vehicles that travel to areas in the country with little national government presence, with the aim of preventing and creating awareness about crimes related to exploitation, trafficking in persons, and sexual violence. (58,81,93) Carries out detection and awareness trainings on trafficking in persons within rural and often remote communities. Provides referral services to survivors of crimes of trafficking in persons. (58) Funded through bilateral and multilateral donors. (58) In the last four months of 2021, a total of 1,470 local government officials received training through the mobile training units. (58)
Business Network for the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor in Guatemala ( Red Empresarial )	Aims to promote prevention and eradication of child labor. Members include the ministries of Education and Agriculture, MTPS, the Thematic Working Group for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor, ILO, UNICEF, the UN Food and Agriculture Organization, and representatives from the private sector. (82,83) Reports indicate this program was active in 2021, and continued to implement a variety of health, nutrition, education, and awareness programs in a variety of agricultural sectors, although operations were adjusted during the pandemic. (84) The nature of these adjustments is unknown. Held virtual meetings once a month during the reporting period. (84)

Program	Description
USDOL-Funded Projects	Projects that aim to reduce the incidence of child labor, including: Increasing Collective Action to Address Child Labor, Forced Labor, and Other Unacceptable Conditions of Work in El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras (2021–2026), a $8.4 million project implemented by Pan American Development Foundation in El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras; and Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor (MAP 16) (2016–2022), a $22.4 million global project implemented by ILO. The MAP 16 project has contributed to some efforts undertaken by Regional Initiative Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labour (RILAC), which has developed the Child Labor Risk Identification Model (MIRTI). As a result of this, in 2021 the Government of Guatemala announced the creation of Comprehensive Care Centers for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor (CAIPETI) in all the departments of the country. (85,86) In this announcement the government highlighted that the aim is to open at least one of these centers in each department, while focusing first in establishing centers in the municipalities identified as the ones with the highest risk of child labor according to MIRTI. These centers have the objective of keeping children in high-risk communities in school, as well as return working children and adolescents to school and to provide them with comprehensive care. (85,86) Parents will also be able to leave their children at these centers while they work in order to prevent child labor. (86) Reporting indicates that they have begun opening these care centers in several areas of the country already. (85,86,87) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Guatemala.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (13,26,28,58,71)

Despite cessation of in-person educational programs due to the pandemic, the Ministry of Education spent about $245.2 million to continue the school feeding program through the distribution of fresh and non-perishable food to 2.6 million public school students in 2021. It also continued funding for school textbooks and supplies, as well as the school health insurance program. (13) The Ministry of Education reported that the number of students enrolled in public schools increased from 2.5 million in 2020 to 2.6 million in 2021, due to the assistance of its support programs. However, given the scope and magnitude of the problem, the programs described are not sufficient to significantly reduce the incidence of child labor. (13) The Secretariat of Social Wellbeing continued strengthening existing social programs such as the specialized program for childhood and adolescence victims of sexual violence, exploitation, and human trafficking. (13)

Through SVET and the Office of the Human Rights Ombudsman, the government continuously carry out human trafficking awareness campaigns that aim to educate the public about trafficking in persons issues. (28) In 2021, as part of the Blue Heart (Corazón Azul) campaign new alliances were established with departmental governors, municipal mayors, and indigenous organizations and leaders, such as the President and Board of Directors of the Forty-Eight Cantons of Totonicapán. The campaign raises awareness about human trafficking and coordinates government and social responses to crimes related to trafficking in persons. (58)

Civil society organizations indicate that social programs are inadequately funded, are susceptible to local political influences, and fail to reach the rural interior of the country outside urban areas. (1,16,21) Although the government has implemented programs to assist children and families, research found no evidence of government programs specifically designed to assist children engaged in hazardous work, including those in agriculture and domestic work. Reporting also indicates that SVET and the Office of the Human Rights Ombudsman fail to regularly monitor the effectiveness of awareness campaigns beyond tracking the number of individuals reached. (28)

On June 21, 2021, a new law came into effect in Guatemala that requires NGOs to be registered, report their donations, and allow their financial accounts to be inspected. (88,89) Under certain circumstances, it would allow the government to control and monitor the NGOs, as well as dissolve them if their activities might "alter the public order". It also allows for the prosecution of the NGOs' directors. (88,89) Civil society organizations in Guatemala and international organizations have raised concerns about the significant negative impact this new law could have in the ability of civil society organizations, including those working on children's issues, to carry out their work. As such, this risk could also increase the vulnerability of children to exploitation. (88-90) Critics say the new law could serve as an opening to impose arbitrary limits on NGOs activities, and as a means to criminalize the activities of human rights defenders and civil society in general. (89)

Guatemala

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Conditions in government-run children's shelters are not adequate, and the government has not ensured the protection and safety of children under its care. (28,37) In addition, the environment for the implementation of social programs that address child labor remains unsafe, and the government has done little to investigate or prevent further instances of threats, intimidation, and violence—such as the murders of individuals working on social programs, including NGO officials, human rights workers, judges, and labor activists. (91)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Guatemala (Table 11).

	Ensure that students have access and equipment for remote education, when necessary.	2021
	Ensure that children removed from child labor and exploitation situations are provided with adequate social services.	2021
	Ensure that social programs are implemented, well-funded, able to carry out their objectives and reach populations outside urban centers, and report on yearly activities.	2018 – 2021

In 2021, Guinea made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. For the first time, it provided a dedicated budget for the National Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Similar Practices and set up a national hotline to report violations, including those related to labor and trafficking in persons. The government also issued an Emergency Action Plan, as a supplement to the 2020–2022 National Action Plan for Trafficking in Persons, to address the 11 priority recommendations highlighted in the 2021 U.S. Department of State Trafficking in Persons Report. However, children in Guinea are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in artisanal mining, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced begging. The government lacks a coordinating mechanism and national policy to address all relevant worst forms of child labor. Laws related to the minimum age for work also do not meet international standards because they do not include children working outside of a formal employment relationship and children who are self-employed. In addition, the government does not implement sufficient social programs to address the extent of the child labor problem. On September 5th, the military launched a coup, seized control of the state, and dissolved the Constitution. The coup and the resulting changes in government likely impacted the ability of the Government of Guinea to fully engage in addressing the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Guinea are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in artisanal mining, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced begging. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Guinea. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	31.2 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	54.2
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	17.3
Primary Completion Rate (%)		59.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2020, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (4)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from the Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5 (MICS5), 2016. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming cashews, cocoa, coffee, rubber, and palm oil (1,6,7)
	Herding livestock (1,2)
	Capturing and processing fish, sometimes with exposure to inclement weather, dangerous water surfaces, dangerous equipment, poor sanitation, and lack of fresh food and water (1,2,8)
Industry	Mining† granite, gold, and diamonds, including handling toxic chemicals, and quarrying gravel (1,2,9-14)
	Manufacturing, including soapmaking and dying, sometimes working with hazardous chemicals (2)
	Construction,† including carrying heavy loads, operating machinery, and fabricating construction materials, such as bricks (15-18)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Street work, including vending, begging, petty trading, shoe shining, and porting in the transportation sector (2,9,10,16,19,20)
	Working in restaurants (2)
	Domestic work (1,2,9,10,21)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Forced labor in market vending, domestic work, artisanal mining, herding, fishing, and farming (1,2,15)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-3)
	Forced begging (1,15,22)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Guinea is a source, destination, and transit country for child trafficking. Guinean girls are often subjected to domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation in various West African, Middle Eastern and European countries, while Guinean boys are subjected to forced labor in gold and diamond mines across West Africa. (1,23,24) Within Guinea, children are subjected to the worst forms of child labor in the artisanal gold and diamond mining sectors. (2,9,13,23,24) Children in the artisanal mining sector are subjected to forced labor and to hazardous conditions, including frequent collapses of open pit mines and use of dangerous chemicals. (2,19) Research indicated that during the COVID-19 pandemic, more children and families moved to the gold mining regions, and a rising number of children have been subjected to forced labor in gold mining. In addition, the commercial sexual exploitation of children is common in the capital city of Conakry and in the mining regions. (15,23) Through the system of confiage, parents who are unable to care for their children send them to relatives or strangers, who are expected to provide food, shelter, and schooling for the children in exchange for housework. In practice, some of these children receive care and an education, but many are subjected to abuse, forced labor in domestic work, and forced begging. (12,25)

Children in Guinea are sometimes subjected to forced begging, and research indicates that albino children are particularly vulnerable. In certain cases, traffickers promised to enroll the children in school, but instead they subjected the children to forced begging in Conakry. (2,15,20,23) Families send their children to Koranic schools, where they are to receive education from teachers known as marabouts. Often the marabouts force the boys to beg on the street. (1,2,23)

Significant factors hinder access to education and therefore leave children vulnerable to child labor. Two out of five children do not attend school. (22) Barriers to education include the limited number of public schools, poor school infrastructure and sanitation, lack of transportation, and the lack of teachers (particularly in rural areas). (2,15,26) Guinean families must pay school fees and other indirect costs, which can be prohibitively expensive. (2,19) Girls sometimes leave school early due to cultural barriers, pregnancy, and sexual harassment at school. (26) Finally, since children are required to have birth registration to attend school, some unregistered children are unable to access education. (27,28) Since the passage of the revised Children's Code in March 2020, the government has carried out multiple birth registration campaigns to provide documentation to children. (2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Guinea has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Guinea's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Articles 121.4 and 137.5 of the Labor Code; Article 919 of the Children's Code (29,30)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 2–4 of Order 2791 Working Conditions for Employees Aged Under 18 Years; Article 137.4 of the Labor Code; Articles 922 and 925 of the Children's Code (17,29,30)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 2 and 4 of Order 2791 Working Conditions for Employees Aged Under 18 Years; Article 135 of the Mining Code; Article 137.6 of the Labor Code; Articles 909–936 of the Children's Code (17,29,30,31)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 194, 195, and 323 of the Penal Code; Articles 4 and 137.6 of the Labor Code; Articles 912–915 and 922 of the Children's Code (29,30,32)

Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 346–348 and 355 of the Penal Code; Articles 820 and 852–856 of the Children's Code (29,32)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 137.6 of the Labor Code; Article 890 of the Children's Code; Article 344 of the Penal Code (29,30,32)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 941 of the Children's Code (29)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 792.7 of the Penal Code; Article 941 of the Children's Code (29,32)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 6, Title I of Education Decree 97 (33)
Free Public Education	No

The revised Children's Code and the Labor Code allow children between the ages of 12 and 14 to perform light work, which does not meet international standards as it applies to children under the age of 13. (29,30) In addition, these laws do not prescribe the number of hours per week permitted for light work, nor do they specify the conditions under which light work may be done. Moreover, these laws only apply to workers with written employment contracts, leaving self-employed children and children working outside of formal employment relationships vulnerable to exploitation. (29,30) The updated Constitution, enacted in 2020, stipulated free education up to the age of 16 under conditions provided by the law; however, the government did not enact legislation to institute free basic education standards within Guinea's legal framework. During the September 2021 coup, the transitional government dissolved the Constitution. (35,36) On September 27, Colonel Mamady Doumbouya released the Transition Charter, which supersedes the Constitution and law until a new Constitution is promulgated. Guinea's penal and civil codes remain in force. (34,36)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Public Services	Enforces all labor laws, including those related to child labor, through its General Labor Inspectorate. (2,19,30) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor and Social Laws was reorganized as the Ministry of Labor and Public Services. (2)
Ministry of Security	Investigates violations of criminal law. Through its Office for the Protection of Gender, Children, and Morals (OPROGEM), investigates criminal cases related to the protection of minors, including the worst forms of child labor. (1,2,16,23,34,37) There is 1 representative of OPROGEM in each of the 33 central police stations of the country who specializes in issues related to the trafficking of women and children. (23,38)
Gendarmes Special Brigade for the Protection of Vulnerable People	Investigates criminal cases related to the protection of minors, including the worst forms of child labor in rural areas where there is less police presence. Housed under the Ministry of Defense. Formed in January 2020 with the aim of reducing pressure on OPROGEM and allowing OPROGEM to focus on urban areas. (34)
Ministry of Justice	Delivers judgements through its Juvenile Court on all cases involving children, including child labor cases. (2) The Juvenile Court also collaborates and monitors cases with the National Directorate of Supervised Education and Youth Protection ( Direction Nationale de l'Éducation Surveillée et de la Protection de la Jeunesse ), which is under the Ministry of Justice, and is, by law, the supervising body of public social services centers. (2,15,16)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Guinea took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, the exceptionally low number of worksite inspections conducted at the national level in Guinea may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The labor inspectorate does not have a sufficient budget and maintains only a single vehicle, with a portion of each inspector's salary used to cover fuel costs for inspection trips, restricting the labor inspectorate's ability to conduct labor inspections. (15,16,40,41) In 2021, the labor inspectorate conducted inspections in Conakry, Boke in Lower Guinea, and Mandiana in Upper Guinea, and sectors inspected included mines, quarries, and manufacturing. (2) The government did not conduct inspections in the agriculture sector, in which child labor is known to be present. (2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Guinea took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In June 2021, Guinean criminal law enforcement authorities arrested a Sierra Leonean woman for trafficking in persons while she was attempting to travel to Nigeria with 11 children between the ages of 8 months and 11 years. The Office for the Protection of Gender, Children, and Morals Special Police Unit (OPROGEM) coordinated with INTERPOL's Sierra Leone office to return the children to Sierra Leone and begin prosecution of the woman arrested for trafficking in persons. (42) During the reporting period, the police academies trained 1,500 new cadets and the gendarmes academy trained 500 new cadets on anti-trafficking in persons enforcement as part of the standard curriculum. In addition, gendarmes and police officials also received refresher courses on trafficking in persons, including identifying and referring trafficking cases, providing support to survivors, and anti-trafficking coordination. (3) In October 2021, the Government of Guinea developed a standardized manual to guide government officials, including criminal law enforcement officials, in providing legal assistance and social welfare services to human trafficking survivors. (3) In addition, in December 2021, the gendarmes set up a national "Green line" hotline to receive calls concerning abuses, including labor violations and trafficking in persons. (3)

The Government of Guinea did not provide complete data on criminal law enforcement efforts for use in this report, including information on trainings for criminal law enforcement on new laws and data on the numbers of investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions, and penalties imposed. (2) Research indicated that the OPROGEM Special Police Unit was understaffed, underfunded, and without sufficient office supplies, transportation, or fuel to enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (1,2,16,19,25,37,43) While courts briefly closed following the September 5 coup d'état, they resumed their activities by September 19. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including inadequate allocation of financial resources.

Guinea

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Similar Practices (CNLTTPA)	Coordinates anti-trafficking efforts. Led by the Ministry of Social Action and Vulnerable People, includes representatives from OPROGEM, Ministry of Labor and Public Service, and other ministries. (1,43) Coordinates with civil society and foreign donors. Organized awareness campaigns for human trafficking prevention. (1) In the reporting year, CNLTTPA finalized a report evaluating and making recommendations on assistance and protection programs for trafficking victims. (2) CNLTTPA also organized a weeklong radio and television sensitization campaign on anti-trafficking work in Guinea, and in cooperation with OPROGEM, the Gendarmes, and the IOM, launched a bus campaign to educate bus riders about trafficking in persons. (2) During the reporting period, CNLTTPA organized a workshop with the IOM and Ministry of Justice to train judges and prosecutors on how to identify cases of trafficking in persons, including child trafficking. (2) In addition, in 2021, the Government of Guinea provided the CNLTTPA with dedicated funding for the first time, providing $35,000 to acquire computers, office equipment, and fuel, and to fund communications efforts. (3)
Ministry of Women's Promotion, Children, and Vulnerable People	Provides protection and social services for survivors of child labor and human trafficking and is the lead agency for child protection. (1,2,19) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Social Action and Vulnerable People changed its name to the Ministry of Women's Promotion, Children, and Vulnerable People. (2) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Women's Promotion, Children, and Vulnerable people provided protection kits including masks, handwashing solution, and food to reception centers that serve human trafficking survivors. (3)
Committee for Monitoring, Protection, and Defense of the Rights of the Child (CGSDE)	Implements, coordinates, and monitors government efforts on child protection issues, including child labor. Led by the Ministry of Social Action and Vulnerable People, with participation from the Ministry of Labor and Public Service. (37,39,44) Prepares periodic reports to treaty bodies in the UN (Committee on the Rights of Children), and the African Union (African Committee of Experts on the Rights and Welfare of Children). (45) Research was unable to determine whether specific activities were undertaken by the CGSDE during the reporting period.

Limited budgets for the National Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Similar Practices and the Committee for Monitoring, Protection, and Defense of the Rights of the Child affect their ability to operate and coordinate efforts to address child labor. (1,19,25,37,46) Although the government has established a coordination mechanism on human trafficking, research found no evidence of mechanisms to coordinate the government's efforts to address child labor. (23)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including covering all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for Trafficking in Persons (2020–2022)	Focuses on six strategies to address child trafficking, including strengthening the legal framework, reinforcing prevention devices, promoting assistance and support of survivors, strengthening cooperative partnerships, and improving monitoring and evaluation. (47,48) In 2021, the Government of Guinea conducted evaluations of existing protection and assistance programs, held trainings on trafficking in persons for judicial officials, and undertook public awareness campaigns. (2) In October, it also issued an Emergency Action Plan, as a supplement to the 2020–2022 National Action Plan, specifically to address the 11 priority recommendations highlighted in the 2021 U.S. Department of State Trafficking in Persons Report. (3)
Ten-Year National Education Plan for Guinea (2020–2029)	Launched under the third tier of the National Economic and Social Development Policy. Sets the goal of progressively providing free primary education in Guinea, and makes provisions to ensure vulnerable students such as orphans, disabled, and albino students have access to education. (49) Implemented by the Ministry of National Education and Literacy at the primary school level and published October 2019, covers the 10-year period from 2020–2029. (49) Research was unable to determine what activities were undertaken as part of this plan in the reporting year. (2)

The release of the 2021–2025 National Economic and Social Development Plan, to replace the prior plan that expired at the end of 2020, remains delayed due to the September 5th, 2021, coup. (2) Although the Government of Guinea has adopted a National Action Plan for Trafficking in Persons, research found no evidence of a policy on other worst forms of child labor. (8,16,41)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Guinea Project for Results in Early Childhood and Basic Education (2019–2024)	$50 million World Bank project in Guinea that aims to increase access to quality early childhood and basic education and strengthen the capacity of the education system. (50) In 2021, the World Bank paused this program in response to the September 5th coup d'état, and the funding was not reinstated during the reporting period. (2)
UNICEF Rapid Response to COVID-19 Pandemic (2020–2021)	Worked on expanding continuous learning during pandemic closures through print, radio, TV, and online, with a focus on vulnerable groups such as children in rural areas and those with disabilities; also mobilized a back-to-school campaign, assisted in the safe reopening of schools through water, sanitation, and hygiene programs, and provided guidance to parents on school health. (51) This program continued during the reporting year. (52)

Research found that the scope of programs implemented by the Government of Guinea is insufficient for the extent of the problem, including addressing children engaged in agriculture, domestic work, forced begging, mining, and street work. (2,53) In addition, reports indicate that social services available are not effective to meet the needs of the survivors, and, as a result, the government relied on NGOs to provide shelter and other basic services. Moreover, financial shortfalls still constrain services. (1,2,15,19,25,37)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

In 2021, Guinea-Bissau made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

The government finalized the Code of Integral Child Protection, which aims to harmonize child protection laws, including child labor laws, and serve as a comprehensive national regulation on the protection of children's rights. The National Institute for Women and Children collaborated with the International Organization for Migration, the United Nations Children's Fund, and other partners to develop a legal framework and policies necessary for the implementation of the Code of Integral Child Protection, and provided training and awareness raising related to the new code to community leaders. In addition, the Institute identified and assisted 92 child victims of forced begging and 33 suspected child victims of sexual exploitation. However, children in Guinea-Bissau are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. Guinea-Bissau's legal framework does not sufficiently prohibit the commercial sexual exploitation of children and the minimum age for work is not in compliance with international standards since the law's minimum age protections do not apply to children without a work contract. Furthermore, law enforcement officials do not receive sufficient training and resources to adequately conduct inspections and prosecute cases of child labor, and social programs do not fully address the extent of the problem in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Guinea-Bissau are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging. (1,2) Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. (1,3-5) According to a national child labor survey, more than 169,200 children ages 5 to 17 work; 85 percent of these children work in agriculture. (4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Guinea-Bissau. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	18.8 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	97.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	20.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (6)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS6), 2019. (7)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including the production of cashews (3-5,8)
	Fishing (4,5)
Industry	Construction (5)
Services	Domestic work (2-4,9,10)
	Street work, including shoe shining and vending (11)
	Working as mechanics, activities unknown (5)
	Working in nightclubs, including washing dishes and custodial work (5)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,12)
	Forced labor in domestic work, agriculture, and street work, including begging (1,2,10)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Guinea-Bissau

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In Guinea-Bissau, organized networks of human traffickers affiliated with Koranic schools force boys to beg within the country and in Senegal, and to a lesser extent in The Gambia, Guinea, and Mali. Although many Koranic school teachers provide religious education as traditionally intended, some force the students, known as talibés, to beg on the streets for money and food. (1,2,13,14) Most talibés originate from the areas of Bafatá and Gabú in the eastern region of the country. (1,13-15)

Bissau-Guinean boys are forced to work in street vending domestically; they are also transported by human traffickers to Senegal for forced labor in agriculture, mining, and street vending. Boys from Guinea-Bissau and boys from neighboring countries are forced to beg and harvest cashews domestically. (1,2,5,8) Girls are subjected to forced labor in street vending and domestic work in Guinea-Bissau. Girls are also subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, including in sex tourism, in the Bijagós Archipelago of Guinea-Bissau and on mainland Guinea-Bissau in bars and hotels. (1,10,14)

During the reporting period, school closures due to the COVID-19 pandemic and teacher strikes limited children's access to education. Reports also indicate that during the cashew harvesting season, children assist their families and are less likely to attend school. (16) Other educational barriers included inadequate school infrastructure and long distances to schools, particularly in rural areas. (5)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Guinea-Bissau has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Guinea-Bissau's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Articles 1, 2, 146, and 186 of the General Labor Law (17)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 148 and 186 of the General Labor Law (17)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Article 148 of the General Labor Law (17)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2-4, and 15 of the Law to Prevent and Combat Human Trafficking; Article 106 of the Penal Code (18,19)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 2-4, and 15 of the Law to Prevent and Combat Human Trafficking (19)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 3–5 and 15 of the Law to Prevent and Combat Human Trafficking; Articles 134 and 136 of the Penal Code (18,19)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 3 and 7 of the Decree on Narcotic Substances (20)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	17	Article 31 of Law No. 4/99 (21)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 2 of Law No. 4/99 (21)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Articles 12 and 13 of the Education System Law (22)
Free Public Education	No		Article 12(2) of the Education System Law (22)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (22,23)

In 2021, the government finalized the Code of Integral Child Protection, which aims to harmonize child protection laws, including child labor laws, and to serve as a coherent national regulation that comprehensively protects children's rights. (5,24)

The law does not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation because the use of children in prostitution is not criminally prohibited. The minimum age for work is not in compliance with international standards because the law's minimum age protections do not apply to children working without a work contract. Moreover, the government has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (17,23)

The Education System Law states that basic education is compulsory and lasts 9 years; however, it only makes basic education free through grade six, leaving children in grades seven through nine without access to free basic education. (22) Since the minimum age for work in Guinea-Bissau is currently lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (17,22)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Public Administration	Enforces child labor legislation in collaboration with the Ministries of the Interior and Justice, and the National Institute for Women and Children (IMC). (5)
Ministry of the Interior's Public Order Police and National Guard	Enforce child trafficking laws and refer cases to IMC and NGOs. (5)
Judicial Police's Women and Children Brigade	Investigates cases involving the worst forms of child labor and refers them to IMC and NGOs. Comprising six officers. (5)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Guinea-Bissau took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Public Administration that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of complaint and referral mechanisms.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (9)	Unknown
Number of Labor Inspectors	28 (9)	33 (5)

Refresher Courses Provided	Unknown	No (5)
Number of Labor Inspections Conducted	Unknown	156 (5)
Number Conducted at Worksite	Unknown	156 (5)
Number of Child Labor Violations Found	Unknown	0 (5)
Number of Child Labor Violations for Which Penalties Were Imposed	Unknown	N/A

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (9)	Yes (5)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	No (9)	No (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	No (9)	No (5)

Reports indicate that not only is the number of labor inspectors insufficient to target the scope of the problem in the country, but limited resources (such as one vehicle being shared among all labor inspectors, with no budget for fuel) severely hinders the Ministry of Labor and Public Administration's ability to enforce child labor laws. (5) In addition, reports indicate that due to a lack of funding, inspectors respond mainly to complaints rather than initiating targeted inspections based on risk-prone sectors and patterns of serious incidents, and rely on their own personal means to perform labor inspections. In 2021, labor inspections were not conducted in sectors in which child labor is known to occur. (5) Reports also indicate that it is unknown whether any of the 156 labor inspections conducted during the reporting period were child-labor specific. (16)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Guinea-Bissau took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (9)	No (5)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	No (5)
Refresher Courses Provided	No (26)	No (5)
Number of Investigations	8 (26)	0 (16)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown	0 (16)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown	0 (5)
Number of Convictions	Unknown	0 (16)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown	N/A (5)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	No (9)	Yes (5)

In 2021, there were no cases of commercial sexual exploitation of children reported in the country. (16)

During the reporting period, eight National Guard agents, one from each of the eight regional posts across Guinea-Bissau, received training on child protection issues, including child trafficking. (5) The National Guard and Judicial Police refer cases of the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking, to the National Institute for Women and Children for referral to social services providers. (5)

Reports indicate that criminal enforcement agencies lacked an operating budget and had very limited resources, hindering criminal law enforcement from investigating cases outside of the capital of Bissau, including in Gabú and Bafatá, where child labor is known to occur. (5,9,26)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that may hinder the adequate coordination of efforts to address child labor, including lack of efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Interministerial Commission to Fight Child Labor	Coordinates the government's efforts to prevent and eliminate child labor. Established in 2010. (27) Research was unable to determine whether the Interministerial Commission to Fight Child Labor was active during the reporting period.
Interministerial Committee to Prevent and Combat Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates government efforts to address human trafficking. Led by IMC. (27) During the reporting period, met regularly, but lack of funding limited its ability to accomplish its mandate. (16)
National Institute for Women and Children (IMC)	Coordinates with NGOs and other partner organizations to rehabilitate and reintegrate child victims of exploitation. (14) In 2021, collaborated with IOM, UNICEF, and other partners to develop the legal framework and policies necessary for the implementation of the Code of Integral Child Protection. In addition, the institute provided training and awareness raising related to the new code to community leaders. (5) During the reporting period, IMC also identified 92 child victims of forced begging and 33 suspected child victims of sexual exploitation, and assisted the victims with family identification, medical assistance, shelter and reintegration. (16)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy for the Protection of Children and Adolescents (2018–2030)	Guides the government's policies for addressing violence toward children, including child labor. (28)
National Emergency Plan for the Prevention and Combat of Trafficking in Persons (2020–2021)	Aimed to prevent and reduce human trafficking by strengthening legislation, coordinating actions and initiatives among government agencies, promoting the coordination and collaboration of relevant stakeholders, and improving protective services and assistance to victims. Led by IMC with the collaboration of national and international NGOs and relevant government entities. (29)
Code of Conduct Against Sexual Exploitation in Tourism	Seeks to raise awareness of commercial sexual exploitation of children and child trafficking in Guinea-Bissau, particularly in the Bijagós Archipelago. (30)

Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor in Guinea-Bissau during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating and preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Friends of the Child Shelters ( Associação dos Amigos da Criança )†	Donor-funded program, with government support, implemented by a national NGO that provides social services to vulnerable children, including victims of the worst forms of child labor. (32) During the reporting period, contributed toward the drafting of the Code of Integral Child Protection, and conducted awareness-raising activities on human trafficking and gender-based violence throughout the country. (5)

† Program is funded by the Government of Guinea-Bissau.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (33)

Guinea-Bissau

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Reports indicate that due to funding constraints, services provided by shelters do not meet quality of care standards. (32) In addition, although Guinea-Bissau has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Guinea-Bissau (Table 11).

In 2021, Guyana made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government increased its number of inspectors from 17 to 22, exceeding the International Labor Organization's recommendation of 19 inspectors. Guyana also added $250,000 to the country's national budget to fund a shelter that serves adults and children who are survivors of domestic violence and human trafficking. However, children in Guyana are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. Guyana does not meet the international standard for hazardous work for children because it allows children ages 16 to 17 to conduct night work in industrial activities. In addition, law enforcement agencies have insufficient resources to conduct inspections in remote areas, including a lack of transportation and accommodation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Guyana are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in mining. (1-6) The 2014 Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5 indicated that children living in Guyana's interior are more likely than other children to be engaged in child labor, with 37 percent of children ages 5 to 17 living in the interior engaged in child labor. The survey also indicated that 41 percent of children living in Amerindian households engage in child labor, with 34 percent of these children engaged in hazardous work. (1) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Guyana. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	10.1 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	96.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	18.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		97.4

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2019-20. (3)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming,† including the production of cabbage, cherries, limes, rice, squash, sugarcane, and charcoal (4,5,7-13)
	Forestry, including logging,† preservation of lumber, and work in sawmills† (1,5,7-9)
	Raising animals, including chickens (9)
	Fishing,† activities unknown (5,7-9,14)
Industry	Construction,† activities unknown (5,9,14)
	Mining,† including gold mining and bauxite mining (1,5,9)
Services	Domestic work (4,5,9)
	Welding† and working in scrap iron yards (4,5,9)
	Working in stores, bars, and restaurants (4,5,9)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Street work, including selling fruit, washing cars, and begging (4,5,9)
	Cleaning boats and ferries, and helping load luggage and goods (9)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (7-9,11,13-16)
	Use in illicit activities, including planting marijuana and smuggling drugs, weapons, and goods (4,9)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Guyana are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in Georgetown and in the country's interior. There are reports of young girls in mining communities being subjected to commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking. (6,9) In addition, children are engaged in informal, small-scale mining in which they wash gold, operate dangerous machinery, and are exposed to hazardous chemicals. (8-10)

Guyana has compulsory education for children ages 6 to 15 years. (5,17) During the reporting period, UNICEF reported that it worked with the Government of Guyana to collect data and review legislative measures for a child labor report. (5) However, children in Guyana's interior and rural areas have limited access to education due to poor infrastructure, long distances to schools, transportation costs, and a shortage of qualified teachers. This leads to decreasing enrollment and high dropout rates among students, particularly in secondary school. (4,8,10,18) The lack of information technology and the limited availability of electricity in rural and riverine communities also hindered access to education during the COVID-19 pandemic. (5)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Guyana has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Guyana's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including insufficient prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 2–3 of the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act; Articles 17–22 of the Education Act (17,19)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	No	18	Part 1, Article 2, and Part 2, Article 2 of the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act; Articles 17, 41, 46, and 75 of the Occupational Safety and Health Act (19,20)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		List of Hazardous Occupations and Processes in Guyana; Part I, Article 2 of the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act; Articles 17, 41, and 75 of the Occupational Safety and Health Act (19-21)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 2–3 and 8 of the Combating of Trafficking in Persons Act; Article 40 of the Constitution (22,23)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 3 of the Combating of Trafficking in Persons Act (23)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 2(e) and 3(2) of the Combating of Trafficking in Persons Act; Article 50(3) of the Protection of Children Act (23,24)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Article 50(1) of the Protection of Children Act (24)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 18 of the Defense Act and Defense Amendment Act (25,26)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Articles 13 and 22 of the Education Act (17)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 27 of the Constitution (22)

* Country has no conscription (7,27,28)

Guyana prohibits the employment of children under age 15, with an exception for work in family businesses, under the Employment of Young Persons and Children Act. Guyana allows work starting at age 15, such as office work, cashier, call center services, and labeling assistant positions at supermarkets. (19) However, Guyana does not meet the international standard for hazardous work for children because it allows children ages 16 to 17 to perform night work in industrial activities and does not adequately protect children from hazardous work that may jeopardize their health, safety, or morals. (19)

Although Article 50(1) of the Protection of Children Act and the Narcotic Drugs and Psychotropic Substance Act both prohibit selling or giving drugs to children, the law does not specifically prohibit the use, procuring, or offering of a child for the production and trafficking of drugs. (16,24,29,30) In addition, Guyanese law does not sufficiently prohibit all commercial sexual exploitation of children because it does not prohibit the use of children for prostitution. (23)

A revision to the Combatting Trafficking in Persons Bill was drafted by the Government of Guyana in 2019, but as of the time that this report was written, it has still not been introduced into the National Assembly. (28)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor	Investigates reports of child labor; conducts routine labor inspections, and refers children identified during labor inspections to Ministry of Human Services and Social Security's (MHSSS) Countering Trafficking in Persons Unit (C-TIP) and the Childcare and Protection Agency. (8,31) C-TIP, under the supervision of the Director of Public Prosecutions, prosecutes trafficking in persons cases. (8) Promotes public messaging on child labor. (27) During the reporting period, held an event with public stakeholders for World Day Against Child Labor. (32)
MHSSS	Monitors and enforces child labor laws in collaboration with the Ministry of Education, Forestry Commission, Geology and Mines Commission, National Insurance Scheme, and Guyana Police Force. The Chief Labor Officer handles special investigations stemming from child labor complaints and oversees routine labor inspections. (10) Includes a Trafficking in Persons Unit (staffed by five personnel) and the Childcare and Protection Agency, to which children identified during labor inspections are referred. (10,33) During the reporting period, held a training workshop in partnership with C-TIP on identifying cases of trafficking in persons. (14,34)
Guyana Police Force	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. Works in consultation with the Director of Public Prosecutions, Ministry of Home Affairs (MOHA), Ministry of Human Services and Social Security, Ministry of Education, and Ministry of Indigenous Peoples' Affairs, depending on the circumstances of each case. (10)
MOHA	Leads enforcement of human trafficking laws, including the Guyana Police Force and Immigration Support Services. (6,35)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Guyana took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including lack of authorization for inspectors to assess civil penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

During the reporting period, the government conducted routine inspections that were targeted at high-risk sectors. (5) In addition, the number of labor inspectors increased from 17 to 22, which exceeds the ILO technical recommendation of 19 inspectors for a country of Guyana's size. (5,9) Although not publicly available, research indicated that funding for the labor inspectorate was sufficient; however, inspectors have insufficient resources to conduct inspections in remote areas, including transportation and accommodation, which was exacerbated by the pandemic. (5,8) Moreover, the government has acknowledged challenges in monitoring and enforcing the provisions established in Articles 41 (relating to child labor in factories) and 46 (relating to employer duties) of the Occupational Safety and Health Act, which aim to protect children from work that may harm their physical health or emotional development. (37)

Inspectors are permitted to conduct unannounced inspections in all sectors, but they are not authorized by law to assess penalties for labor law violations. When general labor violations are found, the employer is informed of the labor violation(s) and is given a period to rectify the violation. (5) If inspectors find child labor violations, they may report the employer to the Chief Labor Officer or police for investigation. (5,19) The Chief Labor Officer can file a case against an offending employer with a magistrate judge, who may impose a civil penalty. The welfare and social service officers of the Ministry of Human Services and Social Security have the right to access private premises if there is a child labor investigation. (5)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Guyana took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including lack of data on violations and prosecutions of criminal law.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (8)	Yes (5)

In 2021, authorities reported 9 instances of children in forced labor and 14 instances of young girls in commercial sexual exploitation. Guyana law enforcement agencies also reported five violations related to child labor, three of which were forced child labor violations and two commercial sexual exploitations. (5) The Guyana Police Force reported that 15 child survivors were removed from exploitation conditions and were referred to the Ministry of Human Services and Social Security. (5) In addition, in the first half of 2021, the Guyana Police Force reported 14 cases of trafficking in persons involving 49 survivors, the majority of whom were subject to commercial sexual exploitation. Of this group, 8 survivors were under the age of 18. (38)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including coordination among agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Works with various government agencies to enforce laws on child labor. Chaired by the ministerial advisor for the Ministry of Labor. (5) Participating member agencies include the Guyana Forestry Commission and Guyana Geology and Mines Commission, which focus on child labor and human trafficking in the rural and hinterland regions. Re-instated in 2020. (5) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period. (5,33)
Ministerial Task Force on Trafficking in Persons	Reports on the nature and magnitude of human trafficking in Guyana and documents the government's response. Divided into a ministerial arm and a technical arm, with six subcommittees. (39) Carries out public education campaigns and trainings, and promotes prevention measures. (7,10) Addresses commercial sexual exploitation of children and the use of children in illicit activities. (5,40) Co-chaired by MOHA and MHSS. (5,6) Also serves as the coordinating body for efforts to address the worst forms of child labor, and the management body for child labor referrals. (5) During the reporting period, the committee met monthly and drafted the 2021-2025 National Action Plan. (28,33) The committee also conducted additional consultation on the proposed Trafficking in Persons (TIP) bill, which was initially drafted in 2019. (28)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Commission on the Rights of the Child	Protects and promotes children's rights in accordance with the UN Committee on the Rights of the Child, which includes addressing the worst forms of child labor. (8,44,45) Active during the reporting period, though it has not yet finalized its strategic plan. (5)

Guyana's Commission on the Rights of the Child is not represented on the Inter-Ministerial Taskforce on Combatting Trafficking in Persons. (5)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation of the National Child Labor Policy and National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Child Labor Policy and National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor (2019–2025)	Aims to prevent and eliminate child labor in all its forms by 2025 by reconciling gaps and inconsistencies between existing national policies and ratified international conventions. Establishes a national framework to coordinate, enforce, monitor, and evaluate all efforts to address child labor; and increases protections for vulnerable indigenous children in the hinterland. (8,46,47) However, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the plan during the reporting period.
Inter-Ministerial Task Force on Combatting Trafficking in Persons Action Plan (2021–2025)	Seeks to prevent and raise awareness about human trafficking, provide direct assistance to survivors, improve law enforcement's capacity to identify and respond to human trafficking, and strengthen inter-agency coordination and referral mechanisms. (7,48) With a budget of $329,944, the plan also provides for the review and amendment of the Combatting Trafficking in Persons Act. (15,33) During the reporting year, drafted and began implementation of the plan, undertook inspections of brothels and bars, launched an information campaign, and held a consultation workshop with key stakeholders to discuss the national action plan for addressing human trafficking, noting the increase in exploitation of Venezuelan immigrants. (28,49)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (50)

The National Education Policy does not include child labor elimination and prevention strategies. The Commission on the Rights of the Child began drafting a new strategic plan to replace the previous 5-Year Strategic Plan; however, research was unable to determine whether the new strategy includes child labor elimination and prevention strategies. (10,37,50)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Guyana Decent Work Country Program (2017–2021)†	Aimed to improve working conditions and increase respect for international standards, social protection, economic opportunities, and social dialogue. Included conducting research and raising awareness on child labor; developing a national child labor policy, and establishing coordination mechanisms to prevent and respond to child labor and forced labor. (51) In 2021, launched a study of the socio-economic impact of the closure of four large sugar estates on workers. (52)
Shelter for Domestic Violence Victims‡	Two government-funded, NGO-run shelters. One shelter houses survivors of domestic violence and human trafficking, including children. (10) Provides services, including psychological counseling and practical skills training. The second shelter accommodates teenage girls under age 16 who are placed at the shelter at the request of the government's Childcare and Protection Agency. (10) During the reporting year, the government of Guyana added $250,000 to the national budget to fund the shelters. (5)

Program	Description
Government-Funded School Programs†	School Meals and Uniforms provides hot meals to 16,000 students at schools in the interior and transportation for students in several remote areas. The Public Education and Transportation Service, previously known as the 5Bs Program, provides boats, buses, bicycles, books, and breakfast to school children to improve access to education. (7,8,13,53-55) Government-funded programs aim to deter early school dropouts by providing job skills to at-risk youth between ages 15 and 17 who may not otherwise be able to complete their formal education. (10) During the reporting period, all students in public and private schools from nursery to secondary school were eligible to receive government-based vouchers valued at $88 to purchase school uniforms, shoes, and backpacks when schools reopened in September. (5,33,55)
Child Advocacy Centers	Funded by private sector donations and UNICEF, and implemented by MHSSS, the United Nations Population Fund, and NGOs to provide services for abused children. (56) The MHSSS Childcare and Protection Agency oversees the centers and makes referrals. (56,57) Three additional centers were opened in 2021, increasing the number of centers to 12. (58)
Regional Initiative Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor	Initiated by an intergovernmental cooperation platform made up of 30 countries, with active participation of employers and workers organizations, which seeks to declare Latin America and the Caribbean as the first developing region free of child labor by 2025. (59) Research was unable to determine whether program activities were implemented during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (5)

The scope of government programs targeting the worst forms of child labor is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including child labor in the mining industry and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. (13)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

In 2021, Haiti made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government adopted standard operating procedures that aim to coordinate the identification, aid, and reintegration of survivors of human trafficking, including children. However, children in Haiti are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and domestic work. Minimum age protections for work apply only to children with a formal employment contract, which does not comply with international standards requiring all children to be protected. In addition, Haiti lacks a clear minimum age for domestic work and a list of hazardous occupations prohibited to children. Likewise, social programs to address child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Haiti are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and domestic work. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Haiti. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

A 2015 study found that there were approximately 286,000 child domestic workers younger than 15 years old in Haiti. (2,6,12) Moreover, many of Haiti's human trafficking cases involve children subjected to forced labor as domestic workers. These children, exploited in what is commonly referred to as the restavèk system, are often physically abused, sexually exploited, and uncompensated for their services. (2,13) Human traffickers use church, sport, or family networks to locate children from poor families and traffic them to families who subject them to a form of indentured servitude. (13) Many of these children flee and end up living on the streets, where they face the risk of being trafficked again. (2) Some parents who are unable to care for their children send them to residential care centers or to relatives or strangers who are expected to provide the children with food, shelter, and schooling in exchange for household work. In practice, some of these children receive care and access to education, while many others become victims of labor exploitation and abuse. (7,14,15)

In addition, Haiti has over 750 orphanages that house over 30,000 children who may be vulnerable to human trafficking and child labor. (9) Only 129 of the 754 orphanages in the country are licensed. (75) According to a study by the Institute of Social Welfare and Research (IBESR), an arm of the Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor (MAST), a majority of Haiti's orphanages fail to comply with the government's care standards. There is evidence that some children in orphanages engage in child labor as domestic workers and are prevented from attending school. (12,17,18,19) Reports indicate that human traffickers also target children in private and NGO-sponsored residential care centers. (2) In the past few years, the government closed 160 unaccredited orphanages and focused on promoting child fostering as an alternative to prevent child labor in residential institutions. (17,18) However, due to the instability and insecurity in the country in the past year, closures and enforcement of closures of non-compliant institutions became very difficult. Therefore, the government has focused on the regularization of the orphanage system, which led to an increase in the number of licensed institutions during the reporting period. (75)

According to some reports, children are often forced into commercial or transactional sex to fund basic needs such as school-related expenses. Impoverished children are often subjected to sexual exploitation and abuse. (20) Criminal gangs recruit children as young as age 10 and subject them to sexual exploitation and pornography. (20) Children displaced by the gang violence that took place in June 2021 and the August 14 earthquake were vulnerable to sexual exploitation, as many of them stayed in formal or informal internally displaced people camps while their parents went to work. (16) Haitian children are victims of human trafficking not only internally, but also externally, primarily to the Dominican Republic, other Caribbean countries, South America, and the United States. (7,13) NGOs have reported that children illegally crossing the Haiti-Dominican Republic border are often accompanied by adults paid to pose as the children's parents or guardians until they reach the Dominican Republic. (7) Some of the children illegally crossing the border are reunited with relatives in the Dominican Republic, while others are forced into commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, agriculture, street vending, and begging. (1,6,21,22) In addition, Haiti is a destination country for child sex tourists, primarily from the United States and Europe. (13)

The Haitian Constitution guarantees a right to free primary education, which is also compulsory under the law. (30,31) Yet, because approximately 80 percent of all existing schools are private, most Haitian children are enrolled in private schools that charge tuition and other fees, making education prohibitively expensive to many families. (9,32,33) In addition, many children in Haiti are not registered at birth, and unregistered children are not able to access social services and educational programs provided by the government. (5) According to reports, approximately 30 percent of children ages 1 to 5 lack birth certificates or any other official documentation. Children born in rural communities are less likely to be documented than children in urban areas. (16)

There are significant barriers to education in Haiti, including the country's extreme poverty, security risks, teacher qualification levels, as well as dilapidated school premises and missing canteens. (32) Reports indicate that children, especially in rural areas, do not attend school due to the lack of school infrastructure and limited availability of teachers. (9) Children working in domestic labor have significantly lower school enrollment rates. (20) Additionally, estimates show that approximately 10 percent of students drop out of school before grade six and 40 percent before the end of grade nine. (32) Out-of-school children are more vulnerable to child labor, including its worst forms. (34) Another factor limiting access to education is the Ministry of Education's recommendation that a child be between ages 11 and 13 when transitioning to secondary school. Overage children must integrate into a special group that attends school during the evening. (30,35,36,37,38) However, research did not find evidence that schools provide instruction during the evening for special groups. Research also indicates that less than 14 percent of children with disabilities attend school, with only 3.5 percent of an estimated 120,000 children with disabilities attending school in Port-au-Prince. (16,20) Students with disabilities have less access to secondary education, with a majority of students with disabilities being integrated into general classes. (16)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Haiti has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Haiti's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work that does not meet international standards.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Articles 2, 340, 513, and 515 of the Labor Code; Article 10 of the Law Organizing and Regulating Labor (39,40)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 10, 333–335, 513, and 515 of the Labor Code; Article 2 of the Act on the Prohibition and Elimination of All Forms of Abuse, Violence, Ill Treatment, or Inhumane Treatment Against Children (Act of 2003) (39,41)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	No		Articles 333–336 of the Labor Code (39)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	No		Articles 4, 513, and 515 of the Labor Code; Article 2 of the Act of 2003; Articles 1.1, 11, and 21 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law (39,41,42)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 2 of the Act of 2003; Articles 1.1, 11, 12, 15, and 21 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law (41,42)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 2 of the Act of 2003; Article 281 of the Penal Code; Article 1.1, 11, 12, and 21 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law (36,41,42)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 47–51 and 72 of the Law on the Control and Suppression of Illicit Drug Trafficking; Article 2 of the Act of 2003 (41,43)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	No
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 268 of the Constitution (30)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 70 of the Penal Code; Article 2 of the Act of 2003 (36,41)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 23 of the Decree on the Reorganization of the Haitian Education System (31)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 32.I and 33 of the Constitution (30)

The Labor Code, which establishes the penalty for violations of the minimum age for work, applies only to workers who perform work under a formal employment agreement, a stipulation that does not conform to international standards requiring all children to be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (39,44) Furthermore, as the minimum age for work is 16, children age 15 are vulnerable to exploitative child labor because they are not required to attend school but also are not yet legally permitted to work. (31,39)

In addition, it is unclear whether there is a minimum age for domestic work because the Act on the Prohibition and Elimination of All Forms of Abuse, Violence, Ill Treatment, or Inhumane Treatment Against Children of 2003 (Act of 2003) annulled Chapter 9 of the Labor Code, which set the minimum age for domestic work at age 12. (39,41,44)

The Labor Code prohibits children under age 18 from working in establishments that sell alcohol and from working at night in industrial enterprises. (40,45) However, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not cover agriculture, an economic sector in which children are exposed to hazardous substances and agents and to temperatures that can damage their health. (1,10,43-46) In 2021, Haiti's National Tripartite Commission for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor updated the draft hazardous work list to include agriculture and livestock, mines and quarries, construction, transportation, and domestic work, but the draft list remains unapproved by Parliament for the seventh consecutive year. (5) Haiti's failure to hold legislative elections in 2019 caused the parliament to lapse in January 2020; since then, in part due to repeated crises, the country has continued delaying carrying out elections, and without a functioning parliament, the Haitian Government is not fully operational and is not able to pursue legal reforms. (7,47)

Laws related to forced labor are not sufficient, as slavery is not criminally prohibited. The Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law criminalizes trafficking for forced labor, servitude, and debt bondage, but makes no mention of slavery. (42) Research could not find evidence of any other legal provision criminally prohibiting slavery.

Although Haiti's Constitution establishes the age for compulsory military recruitment at age 18 and sources suggest recruitment materials set the minimum age for voluntary recruitment at that age, research could not find evidence of a law that establishes the age for voluntary recruitment. (5,30,48,49)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Social Affairs and Labor (MAST)	Enforces laws related to child labor by issuing employment permits to approve certain forms of minor labor for children between ages 15 and 18, receiving complaints, conducting investigations, and referring cases to juvenile courts. (7,40,50) Develops and implements programs to raise awareness of child labor and provide social services to child victims of labor exploitation. Its agents at the Institute of Social Welfare and Research (IBESR) perform child protection inspections, which include following up on reported incidents of child labor, and are responsible for accrediting residential care centers. (7)
Brigade for the Protection of Minors (BPM)	Investigates crimes involving the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. Submits investigations to judicial authorities for criminal prosecution and refers child victims to IBESR. (7) Housed within the Haitian National Police, maintains 22 offices around the country, including 2 offices along the Haiti-Dominican Republic border. (7)
POLIFRONT	Enforces Haiti's Customs Code and investigates transnational crimes, including child trafficking. (7) Is also responsible for referring cases of vulnerable migrants, including minors, to IBESR. Serves as the Border Police Unit of the Haitian National Police. (7) Cooperates with the Dominican Republic Border Police. (51,52) Operates at the border crossings of Ouanaminthe and Anse-à-Pitres, and reportedly plans to establish a permanent presence in Malpasse and Belladère (the other two official border-crossing points) by 2021. (51,53,54)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Haiti took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, the government did not provide sufficient data on its labor law enforcement efforts, which limits the ability to assess its efforts.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The government provided limited information on its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

In 2021, in addition to operational challenges due to the COVID-19 pandemic, research indicates that the lack of sufficient resources, such as the means of transportation, fuel, and appropriately equipped workplaces, hampered MAST's enforcement efforts. This included IBESR's capacity to enforce child labor laws by conducting an adequate number of labor inspections. (1,5,7,9,10,55) IBESR reported that it was unable to conduct a single child protection inspection in 2021, including following up on reported incidents of child labor, in part due to the negative impact the pandemic had on the government's ability to operate. (9,75)

According to IBESR, inspectors received insufficient training on child labor issues overall. (9) While the number of labor inspectors in the country is unknown, according to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching

Haiti

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed countries, Haiti would need to employ roughly 127 labor inspectors as its workforce consists of over 5 million workers. (56,57)

IBESR manages the “1-3-3” hotline that receives complaints about situations requiring child protection. (58) However, the hotline functions exclusively in Port-au-Prince, leaving rural areas without a mechanism to receive child labor complaints. The number of calls related to child labor received during 2021 is unknown. (75)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Haiti took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial and human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	N/A (7,59)	Yes (75)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (7)	N/A (9)
Refresher Courses Provided	Unknown (7)	Unknown (9)
Number of Investigations	585 (7)	466 (9)
Number of Violations Found	424 (7)	190 (9)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	35 (7)	24 (9)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (7)	Unknown (9)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (59)	Unknown (9)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (7)	Yes (9)

In 2021, reports indicate that BPM continues to lack an adequate number of agents and that its training, equipment, transportation, and funding are deficient, all of which has hampered the brigade's ability to enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (1,6,7,9,53,60) BPM reported that only a few investigators received training, and that of new employees only around 12 percent received initial training. BPM indicated it assisted more than 190 children, following its inspections, through legal assistance and medical and psychological referrals. (9)

A referral mechanism between BPM, IBESR, and NGOs is in place to provide reintegration services to victims of the worst forms of child labor. (5-7,9,60,75) BPM also manages the “1-8-8” hotline, which receives notifications of alleged violations related to the worst forms of child labor. (5) However, in common with the IBESR “1-3-3” hotline, the “1-8-8” hotline functions exclusively in Port-au-Prince, which makes reporting cases involving the worst forms of child labor more difficult in rural areas. (6,12)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Tripartite Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Develops policies, approves programs, and coordinates, monitors, and evaluates efforts to address child labor in Haiti. (9,61,75) Chaired by MAST, includes representatives from the government, private sector, and unions. (9) Receives technical support from the ILO. (9,61) In June 2021, it raised awareness about child labor on the occasion of the World Day Against Child Labor. (9,75)
National Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons (CNLTP)	Coordinates actions against human trafficking and provides protection and rehabilitation services to victims. Chaired by IBESR, includes representatives from MAST, other ministries, and BPM. (7,12,42) Consists of task forces and sub-committees to address trafficking in persons. These are established in three provinces: South-East, North-East, and the Central Departments. (7) The sub-committees include provincial and other governmental representatives, police officers, investigating judges, and representatives of IBESR, BPM, and the Office of Citizen Protection, among others, and are charged with leading and coordinating counter-trafficking in persons activities undertaken by civil society and local authorities. The sub-committees document and follow up on cases and coordinate prevention work in accordance with the Strategic Action Plan Against Trafficking in Persons in their respective regions. (7) In July 2021, the CNLTP, with the support of IOM and LUMOS Foundation, adopted the “Standard Operating Procedures for the Identification and Accompaniment of Victims of Trafficking in Persons”, to coordinate the identification, aid, and reintegration of survivors of human trafficking in the country. It established identification mechanisms for children, children in domestic servitude, children in orphanages, and labor trafficking. (9,75) It also discusses support for and reintegration of survivors while specifying the procedures that should be used for minors. IBESR was consulted extensively during its drafting and under the framework holds primary protection responsibilities whenever the victim is a child, including in all instances of child labor. (9)
Child Protection Working Group	Implements, coordinates, and monitors efforts related to child protection, including protection for child domestic workers. Chaired by IBESR, comprises international and national non-governmental stakeholders and officials from various ministries. (62) It is intended to improve the coordination of issues related to child protection by providing a regular meeting forum. (9) Holds multi-stakeholder meetings attended by IBESR, BPM, and MAST, with additional participation by and technical support from UNICEF and other child protection partners. (5) In 2021, it continued to be used as a mechanism for collaborative dialogue. (9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established a policy related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation of the key national policy.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Social Protection and Promotion Policy	Initiated under a safety net program called Kore Lavi and funded by USAID. Aims to build institutional resilience for social protection and promotion against economic shocks and health crises such as the current pandemic. (7,59) Consists of four major pillars, including both childhood social care and efforts to support employment and employability. Lines of effort under these two pillars include identification and removal of children from work and vocational training for youth, among other activities. (7) Efforts include the World Bank partnering with MAST and WFP to deliver cash transfers to targeted households, and IDB partnering with WFP and the Economic and Social Assistance Fund to deliver food and cash to vulnerable households in several departments of the country. (7,59) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Government Child Shelter, Census, and National Child Protection Database†	Government program to support child protection. Through IBESR, implements the government’s regulatory framework for residential care centers, such as orphanages and shelters, collects information on vulnerable children, and tracks them through the National Child Protection Database. (64) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.
Special Program of Free Education (PROSGATE)†	Replaced the National Free Education Program. (65) Aims to increase poor children’s access to education. Includes school grants intended to eliminate school fees and for accelerated learning programs for students who are lagging in school. (66-68) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Program	Description
UNICEF Country Program (2017–2021)	UNICEF-funded program supporting the government's efforts to improve education, health, social inclusion, and protection for children in Haiti. (64,69,70,71,72) In 2021, distributed school materials to 82,582 students in eight departments of the country, as well as materials to 5,155 students who completed remedial activities in preparation for state exams. (76) It also rehabilitated work and school furniture in seven schools, and began construction of 66 semi-permanent classrooms in 11 schools in three of the departments affected by the 2021 earthquake. Lastly, it provided a tutoring and remedial program to prevent children and adolescents from dropping out of school that benefited 1,109 displaced students. (76)
Providing an Education of Quality in Haiti (2016–2022)	$30 million World Bank-implemented program that aims to strengthen public management of the education sector, improve learning conditions, and increase enrollment of students in selected public and non-public primary schools. (73) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this program during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Haiti.

Despite IBESR's efforts to collect information for the National Child Protection Database, the database does not fully capture all relevant information, including the number of displaced street children and children engaged in domestic work. Moreover, reports indicate the database is not operating and that no tangible progress has been made following its initial presentation in 2019. (59) Although Haiti has programs that target the worst forms of child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in domestic work, agriculture, and child trafficking. (6,7,74)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

In 2021, Honduras made significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

The government established a new legal protocol to improve local community coordination on child labor issues and increased penalties for forced labor under the Penal Code from 5 to 8 years' imprisonment to 10 to 15 years. The government also established the Roadmap for the Elimination of Child Labor in Honduras (2021–2025), which seeks to identify risk factors for vulnerability to child labor, raise awareness of child labor laws, and establish a protocol for responding to child labor violations. Furthermore, government agencies conducted multiple joint inspections targeting child labor throughout the country, and the Ministry of Education launched a new learning management system to address gaps in education caused by the pandemic. However, children in Honduras are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. They are also used to carry out illicit activities, including selling and trafficking drugs. Children also engage in child labor in the production of coffee, melons, and lobsters. Labor law enforcement agencies lack the financial and human resources necessary to fulfill their mandate. Additionally, social programs that address child labor in agriculture have not addressed the problem nationwide. The government also lacks similar programs to eliminate child labor in other sectors, including fishing, mining, domestic work, and forced begging.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Honduras are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. They are also used to carry out illicit activities, including selling and trafficking drugs. Children also engage in child labor in the production of coffee, melons, and lobsters. (1–4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Honduras.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	9.0 (168,348)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	87.9

	Use in illicit activities, including by gangs in committing extortion, and selling and trafficking drugs, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,3,4,12-14)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Honduras are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes by family members and friends. (4,12,14) Children are also forced to work as street vendors and domestic servants. Gangs force children to commit extortion, engage in prostitution, transport weapons, traffic drugs, and serve as lookouts. (4,12,14) In addition, Honduras is a destination country for child sex tourists from the United States and Canada. (4)

According to Honduras' National Institute of Statistics, 364,765 children between the ages of 5 and 17 were working in 2019, with 67 percent working in rural areas and more than half engaged in labor in agriculture. (12-14) These numbers do not incorporate estimates for children used by gangs. The Ministry of Labor and Social Security (SETRASS) noted that due to the COVID-19 pandemic and subsequent job losses, child labor has likely increased as adults have been unable to support their families, but has not updated official statistics. (13) Reports indicate that children from indigenous and Afro-descendant groups are particularly vulnerable to child labor, including its worst forms. (1,21,23) In particular, boys from the Miskito Afro-descendant community are vulnerable to forced labor in fishing, mining, construction, and hospitality industries. (4) Children who lack economic and educational opportunities are the most vulnerable to child labor and are among the most likely to migrate to other countries. Once en route, migrant children are vulnerable to human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (21,22,24)

In 2021, barriers to education in the country continued due to pandemic-related school closures and children's lack of access to the Internet, cellphone coverage, or technical equipment required to attend virtual classes. (12,13) After a significant number of children left school in 2020, high rates of school dropouts persisted in 2021 as most schools continued to only provide distance education. (13) Poverty and lack of access to education increase the vulnerability of children to child labor and exploitation. (25) To help address gaps in access to education, USAID provided technical assistance and materials to launch the Ministry of Education's new learning management system, Learning Passport, benefitting over 1.6 million students in 2021. Additionally, USAID assisted in the distribution of education kits, which included printed textbooks, teacher guides, school supplies, and in some cases, connectivity packages, to support over 800,000 children and youth in 11 departments. (13)

Access to education is often limited, especially for children living in rural areas, where there is a lack of funding for schools, and in many cases, a limited number of secondary schools. (1,26) Reports indicate that in some regions of the country, especially in La Mosquitia, language barriers exist as the teachers do not speak local languages or dialects. (12,27) Violence originating from gang activity, including recruitment and territorial disputes, also presents barriers to access for both children and educators, causing some schools to drastically reduce their enrollment. (1,12-14) Additionally, children from indigenous and Afro-descendant groups face persistent difficulties in obtaining access to education. (27,28) Schools that serve their communities have deteriorating conditions, such as shortages of materials, personnel, and infrastructure. There is also a particularly high dropout rate among children of indigenous and African descent. (27,28) Finally, children with disabilities attend schools at a lower rate than the general population, and the National Center for Social Sector Information states that 43 percent of persons with disabilities received no formal education. (29) Other barriers to education access in the country include deteriorating school infrastructure, a lack of sanitation and electricity in schools, a lack of transportation to school, and the cost of school fees, uniforms, and supplies. (12-14)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Honduras has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Honduras' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work being lower than the compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

On October 7, 2021, the National Congress increased penalties for forced labor under the trafficking in persons article of the Penal Code from 5 to 8 years' imprisonment to 10 to 15 years, bringing the penalties in line with the penalties for other serious crimes, such as kidnapping. The reform, which reinstated the penalties that existed prior to 2020, entered into effect on November 1, 2021, after publication in the national register. (63) In addition, at the end of 2020, SETRASS issued Executive Order STSS 578-2020 Regulation of Protected Adolescent Work. (64) The Executive Order governs issuance of work permits to adolescents between the ages of 14 and 18, including determination of hours, conditions, and activities of work. (64)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (SETRASS)	Conducts labor inspections and enforces child labor laws through the General Directorate of Social Welfare and the General Directorate of Labor Inspections. Created by the Labor Inspection Law enacted in 2017 through Decree Num. 178-2016. (12,39,40)
Public Ministry	Carries out criminal prosecutions and directs the investigation of crimes in the country, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. (14,41) Through its Office of the Special Prosecutor for Children, prosecutes crimes with child victims, including crimes related to child trafficking, forced labor, and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Also coordinates with the National Police to investigate crimes and protect survivors. (14,41) Through its Technical Agency for Criminal Investigations, investigates and provides technical support for criminal prosecutions, including by the Office of the Special Prosecutor for Children, such as those related to human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and child pornography. (14) Through its Unit Against Trafficking in Persons, Commercial Sexual Exploitation and Illicit Human Smuggling (UTESCTP), coordinates with domestic and international enforcement agencies to carry out anti-trafficking in persons operations and prosecutions. (20,42)
National Police	Investigates crimes related to the worst forms of child labor, through its Police Investigation Directorate. Also works with the Public Ministry and the Directorate of Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (DINAF), as well as other government entities on operations to remove children from child labor. (12)
Directorate of Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (DINAF)	Formulates, coordinates, and implements national plans concerning children, adolescents, and their families; monitors children's rights, including by investigating complaints of child labor and ensuring that survivors receive government services; and coordinates state efforts with civil society institutions to protect children. It is overseen by the Social Cabinet, a cabinet-level government entity that coordinates 17 governmental institutions. (12,13,43-45) DINAF also carries out inspections throughout the country through its six regional offices, in conjunction with other Government of Honduras (GOH) agencies. (13)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Honduras took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the SETRASS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of labor inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

During the reporting period, SETRASS conducted 14,299 labor inspections, including 32 related directly to child labor. SETRASS conducted inspections in businesses in the commercial, service, and agricultural sectors. SETRASS reported it conducted inspections throughout the country in the language spoken by most workers in the workplace. (13,65) SETRASS uncovered one violation of child labor laws in 2021, however it could not provide additional details as the violation was still under review. SETRASS also uncovered one child working in a commercial business without the appropriate authorization. (13) While SETRASS confirmed there are children working in the agricultural sector, they did not find any when conducting their inspections during the reporting period. (13)

SETRASS and civil society partners have all indicated that the number of inspections conducted is insufficient to address the scope of labor violations in the country, including child labor violations. (1,12,13,26) Reports indicate that SETRASS conducts most inspections in the urban areas of Tegucigalpa and San Pedro Sula. Moreover, rural areas and indigenous communities, in which hazardous activities in agriculture, fishing, and diving are concentrated, have insufficient inspections to address the scope of the problem. (4,46) Inspectors do not conduct inspections in the informal sector unless there is a formal complaint, even though child labor is often encountered in this sector in Honduras. (12,13)

Labor union confederations, employer organizations, and human rights organizations have indicated that the level of funding and resources for the General Directorate for Labor Inspections is insufficient to enforce child labor laws nationwide. (1,12,26) In 2021 the government allocated $3.3 million to the labor inspectorate, which was a 3.1 percent increase over the budget of 2020. However, inspectors did not have enough access to transportation and travel funding to carry out inspections. (13,65) Furthermore, reports indicate that the Directorate of Childhood, Adolescence, and Family (DINAF) lacks sufficient resources to adequately carry out its mandate. (26)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Honduras' workforce, which includes more than 4.1 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Honduras would employ about 274 labor inspectors. (47,48) SETRASS also noted that the number of labor inspectors is insufficient. (12) New inspectors receive an initial training of six months, including training on child labor issues. During the reporting period, inspectors received virtual training on inspection protocols. (13) However, reports indicate that additional training on child labor issues is still needed for labor inspectors. (65)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Honduras took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

In 2021, the Public Ministry reported the Special Prosecutor's Office for Children opened an investigation into forced child begging, carrying out 156 operations on a national level. (13) Related to these investigations, the office identified one perpetrator who has been linked to sexual assault against three children, aggravated rape against two children, and production of child pornography involving at least three child victims. The office continues to investigate to see if other victims can be identified. (13) The Unit Against Trafficking in Persons, Commercial Sexual Exploitation and Illicit Human Smuggling (UTESCTP) investigated six child trafficking cases linked to forced begging, three cases linked to child labor exploitation, and one case of forced labor involving three children as of December 2021. The government did not have final numbers on the number of violations related to forced child begging. (13) The Public Ministry reported three violations of child commercial sexual exploitation (child pornography) and one violation of child labor exploitation. (13) However, reports indicate that criminal law enforcement agencies in the country have a limited capacity to investigate trafficking in persons cases in most regions of Honduras due to staffing limitations. (49)

The Public Ministry reported the Special Prosecutor's Office for Children prosecuted two defendants for alleged child labor crimes. (13) In addition, UTESCTP prosecuted one defendant for child sexual exploitation, forced servitude, and slavery; two defendants for child labor exploitation; one defendant for forced begging; one defendant for forced labor, child abuse, and sexual assault; two defendants for child labor exploitation, aggravated sexual assault, aggravated rape, and aggravated child abuse; two defendants for aggravated rape and trafficking in persons resulting in forced servitude and slavery; and one defendant for trafficking in persons resulting in forced begging. (13) The Public Ministry reported the Special Prosecutor for Children rescued seven children who were victims of various crimes and removed 96 children from situations of begging. The Public Ministry transferred the children to DINAF to receive social support and services. (13)

During the reporting period, the Public Ministry's Special Prosecutor's Office for Children trained prosecutors and criminal investigators on child labor. (13) Additionally, UTESCTP conducted several trainings on prevention of trafficking in persons. These trainings benefitted police, prosecutors, judges, labor inspectors, teachers, students, health officials, victims services professionals, and migration officials. (49)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission for the Gradual and Progressive Eradication of Child Labor	Coordinates government policies and efforts on child labor issues. Chaired by SETRASS and includes officials from eight government ministries, DINAF, the Supreme Court, and other government entities. (39,50) Oversees regional sub-commissions, led by SETRASS and DINAF officials, which implement national efforts at the local level. (39,50) The Commission met on June 17, 2021. The meeting focused on the creation of a strategic and operational plan for 2022–2026. On August 23, 2021, the Commission approved the 2021–2025 roadmap for the elimination of child labor. (13) During the reporting year, SETRASS coordinated joint actions for the prevention of child labor through the Technical Council for the Gradual and Progressive Eradication of Child Labor, which is made up of state institutions, workers' unions, private enterprise, and civil society. (13)
Inter-Institutional Commission Against Sexual, Commercial, and Trafficking Exploitation (CICESCT)	Works to prevent trafficking in persons and sexual exploitation, as well as providing services to protect and support survivors and their families. (13) Coordinates at the national level the actions carried out by public and private institutions to sensitize, prevent, and provide services to survivors, as well as implement actions to address sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (51) CICESCT is made up of 20 government institutions and 12 civil society organizations. It supports local committees in each of the country's 18 departments. (13) Implements the Strategic Plan to Combat Commercial Sexual Exploitation and Human Trafficking, as well as manages a dedicated trafficking in persons hotline. (13,49) In 2021, CICESCT identified 35 child victims of exploitation, 10 of them were children used to produce pornographic material and 25 were girls used for sexual exploitation. CICESCT coordinated with DINAF to provide protection, food, health care, and psychological support to survivors. (13) CICESCT also conducted a series of trainings both online and in-person for government officials and representatives of non-governmental organizations. These trainings focused on prevention of trafficking in persons. (49) It also carried out information and raising awareness campaigns on human trafficking. (49)
Migration Task Force	Convenes several government ministries to collaborate on addressing irregular migration, including addressing the risks associated with trafficking in persons. (2) In 2021, it held various meetings to support and coordinate dignified returns of migrants and to provide services to them. (65)
Ministry of Social Development and Inclusion	Coordinates social protection policies and the provision of services to vulnerable populations. (52) Reports indicate it was active during 2021. (13,45)

On July 9, 2021, SETRASS published agreement STSS 177-2021 Protocol of Organization, Training, and Legalization of Child Labor Prevention Committees. This protocol aims to improve local community coordination on child labor issues. SETRASS will lead the initiative with the support of its regional offices and municipal councils. (13,66)

During the reporting period, the government also developed and approved a victim's assistance manual, which includes new standard operating procedures for preventing, detecting, and providing assistance to survivors of trafficking. It provided information on identifying trafficking risk factors and vulnerable groups, as well as outlining interagency coordination to support survivors. (49) Additionally, the government created an assistance plan outlining the basic and urgent needs of survivors, including assistance to support recovery from trauma. (49)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Roadmap for the Elimination of Child Labor in Honduras (2021–2025)†	Aims to eliminate all forms of child labor by 2025. Established on August 23, 2021, by the National Commission for the Gradual and Progressive Eradication of Child Labor. (13) It replaces the previous roadmap for the elimination of child labor that expired in 2020. (65) The lines of action include increased efforts to identify risk factors for vulnerability to child labor; the establishment of a common, integrated protocol for responding to child labor situations; and increased awareness of child labor laws and labor rights. Works at the national, regional, and sub-regional levels and addresses poverty, health, education, and social development. (13,53)
Strategic Plan to Combat Commercial Sexual Exploitation and Human Trafficking in Honduras (2016–2022)	Establishes national priorities to address commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking in four principal areas: (1) prevention and awareness; (2) investigation, prosecution, and punishment of violations; (3) detection, assistance, and protection of victims; and (4) coordination and cooperation. (54,65) During the reporting period, CICESCT continued implementing the Strategic Plan to Combat Commercial Sexual Exploitation and Human Trafficking in Honduras by undertaking activities such as: identifying child victims of commercial and sexual exploitation, as well as coordinating with DINAF to provide them with support. (13)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

Policy	Description
Interinstitutional Strategy for Homeless Families and Children	Defines coordinating actions to confront the problem of family and child homelessness, including child begging. Finalized in 2020, it was developed partly in response to the pandemic and other factors contributing to increasing rates of homelessness. (12) In 2021, it supported activities carried out by the Program to Combat Child Forced Begging. (65)
U.S.-Honduras Labor Rights Monitoring and Action Plan	Aims to improve the enforcement of labor laws, including laws related to child labor, by implementing legal and policy reforms, strengthening SETRASS, enhancing enforcement activities, and increasing outreach efforts. (55) During the reporting period, USDOL and SETRASS continued activities and coordination under the plan. (13)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (56-59)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Better Life Voucher ( Bono Vida Mejor )†	Conditional cash transfer program that aims to reduce poverty by providing financial assistance to households after parents ensure that their children participate in health, education, nutrition, and other programs. (24,60) Reports indicate this program was active in 2021, and continued to provide cash transfers to reduce poverty. (65)
Program to Combat Child Forced Begging†	DINAF program that identifies and rescues children who are subjected to forced begging and raises awareness of child forced begging through the media. (46,61) In 2021, as part of this program the government conducted 106 operations as part of an investigation into forced child begging. These led to interactions with 112 family units through six DINAF regional offices, and resulted in the application of 13 protective measures, and the referral of seven cases for prosecution. (65)
Program for the Reintegration of Returned Unaccompanied Migrant Children†	Government program that assists unaccompanied migrant children who have been returned to Honduras. (12,13) Implemented by DINAF in collaboration with the National Institute for Migration, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, UNICEF, the Network of Institutions for Children's Rights (COIPRODEN), the International Organization for Migration (IOM), and NGO Aldeas SOS. UNICEF and USAID, through IOM, provide financial support for the program. (13,65) Reports indicate it was still active and operational in 2021, especially in the Belen Child and Family Reception. (65)
Program to Prevent Sex Tourism Involving Children and Adolescents†	Government program that aims to raise awareness and provide training on preventing sex tourism for the tourism industry. Implemented by the Honduran Tourist Board, the Ministry of Tourism, and the Honduras Tourism Institute. (1) In 2021, the Honduran Institute of Tourism virtually participated in a workshop on preventing exploitation and trafficking in persons. Additionally, as part of the Implementation of the Integrated Central American System of Quality and Sustainability (SICCS) the theme of preventing child sex tourism was covered as part of the required modules for socially responsible business certifications. (67)
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects that aim to eliminate child labor through direct services to Honduran children and youth, capacity building with the Government of Honduras, and technical assistance to the private sector and civil society organizations. These projects include: $8.4 million Increasing Collective Action to Address Child Labor, Forced Labor, and Other Unacceptable Conditions of Work in El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras (2021–2026); $2 million Addressing Child Labor and Forced Labor in the Coffee Supply Chain in Honduras (2017–2022); $17.2 million Youth Pathways Central America (2015–2021); and $11.6 million Bright Futures (2014–2023). In 2021, Bright Futures provided several trainings to Child Labor Committees around the country on topics related to child labor, human trafficking, and labor rights. It also assisted in the elaboration of the Roadmap for the Elimination of Child Labor in Honduras (2021–2025), by helping to identify the main strategic lines of action. (62) In June 2021, launched the awareness campaign "Work over School", focused on raising awareness on the causes of child labor, the effects of the pandemic on children's access to education, the number of children working by gender and by geographic area in the country, and on the worst forms of child labor. It managed to reach a total of 44,431 people through social media. (62) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

† Program is funded by the Government of Honduras.

Although the Government of Honduras funds or participates in social programs to address child labor, research did not identify programs that specifically target children working in sectors such as fishing, mining, domestic work, and forced begging or that address the illegal recruitment of children into gang-related activities. In addition, social programs that address child labor in agriculture do not appear to be sufficient to address the scope of the problem nationwide. (65)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Honduras (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the age up to which education is compulsory is the same as the minimum age for work.	2021
Enforcement	Carry out labor inspections in areas in which child labor is prevalent, such as rural areas, the informal sector, and indigenous communities in which children engage in hazardous activities.	2017 – 2021
	Ensure that labor and criminal law enforcement agencies have sufficient funding and resources to carry out their mandates nationwide.	2010 – 2021
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 162 to 274 to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2010 – 2021
	Ensure that all labor inspectors receive sufficient training on child labor issues.	2014 – 2021
	Publish labor law and criminal law enforcement information on the number of labor inspections conducted at worksites, the number of convictions obtained, and penalties imposed related to the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2021
Social Programs	Increase access to education by increasing funding to schools; ensuring that teachers speak local languages or dialects; building more schools, particularly secondary schools, and schools in rural areas; enhancing efforts to protect students from gang recruitment and violence; and removing barriers such as school fees, costs for uniforms, and lack of transportation.	2014 – 2021
	Ensure that social programs reach the children who are most vulnerable to child labor, including children of African descent and indigenous children.	2017 – 2021
	Expand social programs that address child labor in agriculture and create programs to assist children engaged in child labor in fishing, mining, domestic service, and illicit gang activity.	2009 – 2021

In 2021, India made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The State Government of Bihar issued the biggest recorded payout to survivors of the Muzaffarpur shelter home case, which involved the victimization of 44 girls between the ages of 7 and 17 for the purposes of commercial sexual exploitation. In addition, Indian authorities rescued 58,289 children from child labor during 2020-2021, an increase from previous years. In July 2021, the Anti-Human Trafficking Units in Telangana also rescued more than 2,500 children from child labor and streamlined the state's human trafficking prevention and rehabilitation processes. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, the government did not publicly release information on its labor law enforcement or criminal law enforcement efforts. Children in India are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in garment production, stone quarrying, and brickmaking. Hazardous work prohibitions do not include all occupations in which children work for long periods in unsafe and unhealthy environments, and penalties for employing children are insufficient to deter violations. There are also serious concerns about widespread corruption among police and other government officials related to the enforcement of child labor crimes, actively impeding the investigation and prosecution of such offenses, and mistreating victims. In addition, children continue to be abused in shelter homes that operate without sufficient government oversight or accountability.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in India are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1) Children also perform dangerous tasks in garment production, stone quarrying, and brickmaking. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in India.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

India is a source and destination country for child trafficking, especially of girls and child sex tourism. (35) Human traffickers fraudulently recruit Nepali and Bangladeshi women and girls in significant numbers to India. Some Indian and Nepali girls are forced to work as "orchestra dancers" until girls are able to pay off debts that are usually fabricated. (35) Human traffickers also exploit European, Central Asian, and African girls in commercial sex. (35) Within India, children are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor in agriculture and domestic service. (1,2) Girls as young as 14 are trafficked from states such as Jharkhand and Chhattisgarh for commercial sexual exploitation. Human traffickers charter buses from the states of Andhra Pradesh, Rajasthan, and Karnataka to transport migrant laborers, including children, from Bihar. (41,42) To avoid suspicion, human traffickers often ask parents to accompany children to their destination. NGO's intercepted several human trafficking operations in 2021, during which they found many children carrying false identification cards as proof of being the legal working age. (41)

Most labor trafficking is internal to the country, with the states of Bihar, Jharkhand, Chhattisgarh, and Odisha being major sources of trafficked children. (1,21) Children from India's rural areas migrate to urban centers or are trafficked for employment in industries such as spinning mills and cottonseed production, in which they are forced to work in hazardous environments for little or no pay. (25,35,43) Trafficked children are also employed on cotton farms and in home-based embroidery businesses, roadside restaurants, and brick kilns. (1) In addition, children are forced to work as bonded laborers in brick kilns and stone quarries to pay off family debts owed to moneylenders and employers. Children typically enter debt bondage along with their entire families. (1,2,21) Indian children are also used in forced labor, such as in mining and portering, by organized criminal groups and by their own families. (7)

Child survivors of commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor are more likely to be from marginalized groups, such as low-caste Hindus, members of tribal communities, and religious minorities. (1,2,44,45) Though banned in 1988, the jogini system, in which girls as young as age 12 and from the lower castes are married to a local deity and used as sex slaves, is still prevalent in some parts of India. (1,46) Prevalence data for the jogini system are lacking in India, though authorities believe that many hidden cases exist throughout the country. (46) Human traffickers sometimes kidnap children from public places, such as railway stations, entice them with drugs, and force girls as young as age 5 engaged in sex trafficking to take hormone injections to appear older. Both registered and unregistered spas exploit girls in sex trafficking, and the government lacks sufficient oversight of such establishments. (2,47,48)

Non-state armed groups reportedly recruit children as young as age 14 for use in direct hostilities against the security forces of Jammu and Kashmir. (2,38,49) Children are also forced by non-state armed groups in the states of Chhattisgarh and Jharkhand to handle weapons, improvised explosive devices, and serve as spies, couriers, and soldiers. (2,50,51) Maoist groups sometimes used children as human shields in confrontations with security forces. (2,50) Recent reports have indicated that at least 70 percent of Maoist cadres are forcibly recruited as children, with 20 percent of these children being forcibly sterilized. (52) In addition, some female child soldiers reported that commanders of non-state armed groups recruited and used them in part for sexual exploitation, including practices indicative of sexual slavery. (2)

Despite the enactment by Parliament in 2009 of a Right to Education Act that provides free and compulsory education for children below the age of 14, there are several barriers to educational access in India. Budgetary constraints contribute to the lack of schools, well-trained teachers, separate and sanitary washrooms for girls, adequate infrastructure, and transportation options, creating barriers and limiting access to education, particularly in overcrowded urban slums or bastis. (1,21) Furthermore, children from marginalized groups face additional barriers to accessing education. (1,21) Teachers sometimes subjected these children to discrimination and harassment. (1,53) Research has found that lower caste children in some schools are reportedly segregated in classrooms, sometimes resulting in higher dropout rates. (21,51) In addition, refugees who are not granted visas or provided identity cards by UNHCR often are not able to access education services. (21,25) Children up to the age of 14, rescued from child labor, can attend school, including the option to take vocational training. (32)

Restrictions to contain the COVID-19 pandemic required schools to remain closed until September 2021. Schools gradually reopened after an 18-month hiatus, but the damage to children's learning and educational experience has been significant and on par with global trends. (54,51) During the reporting period, classes were held online and the Government of India incorporated community radio stations and government-owned television to broadcast classes to children with connectivity issues to help increase accessibility to learning. (1,51) However, children from economically disadvantaged families and children in some rural areas were unable to attend classes due to a lack of Internet connectivity or lack of accessible devices. (1,55) Child advocates in India indicate an increase in child labor and child trafficking during the reporting period due to economic contractions related to the pandemic, with children dropping out of school to work in hazardous occupations. (34,56,51)

Between April 1 and May 25, 2021, at least 577 children lost both parents to the pandemic. (57,58) Children orphaned by the pandemic are vulnerable to exploitation for cheap labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Children are also at risk of being transported to smaller towns and rural areas, put up for scam adoption schemes, and recruited to work in factories, sometimes leading to situations of child labor or sex trafficking. (57)

The Government of India does not collect or publish data specifically on child labor, nor does it make available the raw data from the national census. (21,25)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

India has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in India's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.

The Parliament enacted the Occupational Safety, Health, and Working Conditions Code in September 2020. After delaying implementation through the reporting year, the new labor code was slated to take effect in 2022. (61) While the labor code stipulates that the central government will declare standards on a variety of matters, including the prohibition of employment of children near cotton openers and the employment of children ages 14 to 18 on dangerous machines, the code only covers establishments with 10 or more employees, factories with 20 or more employees, and manufacturing facilities with 40 or more employees, leaving workers in smaller workplaces unprotected. (61) However, this code does not replace the Child Labor Act (CLA), which continues to remain a separate, enforced legislation that clearly prohibits employment of children. (51,60)

In June 2021, the Ministry of Women and Child Development (MWCD) released a draft of the Trafficking in Persons (Prevention, Care, and Rehabilitation) Bill 2021 for public comment. (51,73) A previous bill under the same name was initially drafted in 2018 and passed the House, but was never introduced in the Senate. The 2021 version of the bill expands the scope of the 2018 bill and provides care and rehabilitation to women and children, including Indian citizens outside of India and trans persons, and it addresses gaps in the previous version of the bill. (73,74) The 2021 bill would also establish a National Anti-Trafficking Committee, a body responsible for enforcing the provisions of this legislation at the federal level, as well as a rule requiring reported human trafficking crimes to be fully investigated within 90 days. (73,74) The bill was originally slated to be brought to parliament for a vote during the July- August 2021 session, but was delayed. (51,75)

While India's existing legal framework governing child labor meets international standards on the minimum age for work, it is lower than the compulsory education age and children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (59,71) Despite evidence that children work for long periods in unsafe and unhealthy environments in spinning mills, garment production, and carpet making, the regulations governing children ages 14 to 18 in hazardous labor do not include these sectors. (7,60,76) In addition, sources report that the minimum age for voluntary recruitment into India's Armed Forces is age 16 and that individuals must be age 18 to be deployed, but research could not pinpoint these criteria in Indian law or regulation. (77,78) The Juvenile Justice Act (2015) imposes imprisonment and fines on non-state actors recruiting child soldiers; however, the act does not apply to the territory of Jammu and Kashmir where such practices are known to occur. (62)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
State Government Labor Inspectorates	Conducts labor inspections, including inspections for child labor. Enforces child labor laws, including assessing penalties for violations found during inspections. (1) Refers children to Child Welfare Committees for protection and rehabilitation services. (62)
State and Local Police	Enforce laws pertaining to child labor and human trafficking. (76) Submit information to District Magistrates to determine whether a case should be prosecuted in District Court. (1) Refer children to Child Welfare Committees for protection and rehabilitation services. (62) The Criminal Investigation Department (CID) (also referred to as "Crime Branch") is a unit of the police force in each state. There are 36 CID's across India. (72,79)
Ministry of Home Affairs (MHA) – Anti-Trafficking Operations Division – State and District-Level Anti-Human Trafficking Units (AHTUs)	Investigate cases of domestic and international human trafficking. (35,41,76) Reports to district police chiefs. (2) There are a total of 696 AHTUs in various States and Union Territories across India.
Central Bureau of Investigation – Anti-Human Trafficking Units (AHTUs) and Anti-Human Trafficking Cells (AHTCs)	Investigate and prosecute cases involving the kidnapping and trafficking of women and children by professional gangs operating across multiple states at the district level. Take on cases by request of, or in agreement with, state governments. (2,80) Manage the 24-hour Helpline No. 011 for reporting cases of "Illegal Human Trafficking Especially Trafficking of Children & Women." (41,81) Similar to AHTUs, AHTCs provide intelligence gathering on human trafficking cases across the state. Each AHTC consists of an Assistant Commissioner of Police/Deputy Superintendent of Police officer, inspector, and sub-inspector. (51)
National Investigation Agency	Investigates terror-related cases. (25) Investigates and prosecutes trafficking in persons cases that have multiple state or international ramifications. (25,32,79,82)

India

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The Anti-Human Trafficking Units (AHTUs) function at the district level and work within the local police department. Research has found that some AHTUs are effective in conducting investigations, providing evidence for cases, and empowering survivors. (51) In the wake of the pandemic, the Ministry of Home Affairs (MHA) allocated $13.3 million and directed the States and Union Territories to expedite the establishment of AHTUs covering all districts in India and upgrade the infrastructure of existing AHTUs to eliminate human trafficking. (83) State governments also dedicated financial resources to create and support fully functioning AHTUs in their jurisdictions. (51) India's largest state Uttar Pradesh had functional AHTUs in all 75 districts. In addition, the Odisha state government allocated a total of $544,795 to strengthen the state's 37 integrated AHTUs, one in each of the 36 police districts and another in the headquarters of the state Crime Investigation Department. (51) Other funding allocation was also made for Anti-Human Trafficking Cells (AHTCs). (51)

However, a lack of resources and adequately trained staff has hindered the effectiveness of AHTUs across India. (2,84) Research was also unable to determine whether the AHTUs were set up and functional in all the states with allocated funding during the reporting period. (51) Reports show that the funding was mostly spent on infrastructure (e.g., offices, desks, buildings) and awareness programs, rather than human trafficking investigations. (2) During the reporting period, the state of Andhra Pradesh issued an order to establish 10 more AHTUs in the state, but NGO staff on the ground allege that no progress has not been made to set up AHTUs since the MHA's declaration. (85)

A distributional study from 2010-2019 conducted by an NGO based on Right to Information indicated that only about 27 percent of AHTUs across India were fully functional. (86-88) It also noted that 49 percent of India's AHTUs operate with significant funding deficits, and the remaining 32 percent (approximately 225) AHTUs as not operational and exist only on paper. (2,86-88) Police officers assigned to an AHTU unit reportedly sometimes view these positions as less favorable and these positions are sometimes occupied by near-retirees or officers with poor performance. (2,51)

The enforcement of labor laws is overseen by the state governments' labor ministries, while criminal law enforcement is overseen by the state police. Labor law enforcement officers typically coordinate with the state police on cases through the Office of the District Magistrate. (25)

In 2021, when some states sought approval from the national government to suspend labor laws to mitigate the economic downturn caused by the pandemic, the government mandated that child and bonded labor laws continue to be actively enforced. (89) In May 2021, the MHA re-issued the Standard Operating Procedures to strengthen law enforcement against the exploitation of women and children, and issued advisories to states to closely monitor human trafficking to ensure that the pandemic did not result in human trafficking expansion. (21,89) In December 2021, the National Committee to Protect Child Rights held a workshop attended by officials from state-level Commissions for the Protection of Child Rights, officers from AHTUs, NGOs, the Department of Labor, and other representatives to enhance coordination on child protection efforts, including rescuing children from human trafficking. (51)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in India took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the state government labor inspectorates that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws, including training for labor inspectors.

The government did not publicly release information on its labor law enforcement efforts. While the number of labor inspectors is unknown, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of India's workforce, which includes over 471.3 million workers. (90) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, India would need to employ roughly 31,420 labor inspectors. (90) The government also does not release disaggregated data on the specific budget for inspections, but government officials claim that inspectors have sufficient office facilities, transportation, fuel, and other necessities to carry out inspections. (21) However, the ILO and NGOs report that training for labor inspectors is inadequate, that the number of labor inspections carried out is insufficient given the size and population of the country, and that the response time to complaints is too long. (1,25,91)

Yearly data on the number of inspections are not available. The Government of India's Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE) reported that during 2014-2020, 1.63 million inspections were carried out, resulting in 10,720 prosecutions and 4,153 convictions. (51) Due to the ongoing pandemic, NGOs claim that the number of labor inspections have further declined. (1) NGOs commended Rajasthan, Gujarat, and Tamil Nadu for proactive inspections, while noting that the response time is too long. Labor rights groups and trade unions alleged that inspections are often conducted ineffectively. (1) In 2021, labor inspectors received virtual training on laws relating to child labor. However, data on the number of inspectors who received training are not available. (1) In addition to not providing data on inspectors and training, the national government also failed to provide data on the number of inspections conducted, violations found, and the number of violations for which penalties were imposed and collected. (1,21)

Penalties under the 2016 Child Labor Act (CLA) include imprisonment for a minimum of 6 months up to 2 years and fines ranging from $300 to $700 for hiring children under the age of 14. (25,66,92) However, current available penalties and levels of enforcement are insufficient to deter employers from hiring children, as imprisonment is rare and maximum fines are infrequently levied. (1,59) While the CLA and the rules framed under this act empower labor inspectors to assess penalties and monetary fines for child labor law violations, research has found that penalties assessed do not deter child labor law violations as labor inspectors do not impose the maximum permissible penalty amount, even though there are no barriers to assessing penalties. (1)

State government labor inspectors plan and conduct labor inspections, which are generally targeted at specific sectors or geographical areas known to involve child labor. In 2019, under the Ease of Doing Business Reform Plan, the Ministry of Commerce and Industry established the State Reform Action Plan that included several reform points, including consolidating labor inspections with other types of business inspections. (51,93) While reforms do not apply to inspections under the CLA, states such as Telangana have since witnessed a decline in the number of inspections carried out to identify child labor. Reporting indicates that the decline is due to a lack of regular inspections of business establishments. (51,94)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, authorities continued to respond to corruption in labor inspections and enforcement primarily through state and local Anti-Corruption Bureaus (ACBs). In 2021, media reporting in Rajasthan highlighted work by the ACB to hold three labor officers responsible for accepting bribes. (51,95) In Karnataka, an ACB also conducted anti-corruption raids and investigations into the Bengaluru Labor Department. However, for both cases, research was unable to determine whether the labor officers were also responsible for enforcing child labor laws. (51)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in India took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws, including the lack of data on federal and state government efforts to investigate, prosecute, and convict crimes involving child labor.

The Government of India did not respond to requests for information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (1) During the reporting period, the Women Safety Wing of the Telangana state government streamlined the state's investigative process to prevent human trafficking and provide care for survivors. (97) On August 2, 2021, the Government of India confirmed an increase in the number of children rescued from illegal work in 2020-2021, from 54,894 to 58,289. (51) In July 2021, AHTUs in Telangana also rescued more than 2,500 children from forced child labor. (51,98) In January 2022, 1,801 children engaged in bonded labor in brick kilns, begging, street work, and other activities were rescued by the Telangana State Police under Operation Smile Phase 8. (99) In the state of Assam, police rescued 40 children who had recently been trafficked to Sikkim. Officials noted that in June and July of 2021, there were at least 107 women and children from Assam that had been rescued after human trafficking attempts. (100)

In late 2021, the National Investigation Agency filed charges against various international human trafficking rings across the country. Charges were brought against 13 Bangladeshi nationals in Bengaluru, 6 Indians from Tamil Nadu in Mangaluru with human trafficking connections in Sri Lanka, and 4 Bangladeshis for human trafficking-related offenses to the Rohingya community. All human trafficking charges included the smuggling of women and children into the country. (101,102) In March 2022, the sub-divisional magistrate in Narela helped rescue 73 child laborers from polishing, toy, and fan manufacturing factories in North Delhi. The children were trafficked from the neighboring state of Uttar Pradesh with promises of decent work and monthly pay. (20)

In addition, Telangana opened an online portal to curb human trafficking through public awareness and education. In 2021, the Telangana Women Safety Wing conducted training for all police personnel to create awareness of sex trafficking, child labor, "cyber trafficking", and the appropriate application of preventive detention for accused human traffickers. (51)

Even with apprehension and effective enforcement carried out by some district-level AHTUs, India's prosecution rate of suspected traffickers remains low with relatively few convictions. (51) AHTU members continue to express disappointment with unsuccessful prosecutions of accused human traffickers. (97) According to the most recent data available on human trafficking from the National Crime Records Bureau (NCRB), in 2020, 1,714 cases involving suspected human trafficking crimes were filed across India. In 2020, the government reported identifying 3,799 human trafficking victims, including 2,200 children under the age of 18, and 2,837 victims were registered under the Bonded System Abolition Act (BSA). (51) However, courts completed trials in only 27 percent of the cases and convicted a mere 10.6 percent of those charged with human trafficking crimes. (103) Research was unable to determine how many of these prosecutions involved child victims. (103) NCRB data indicate that convictions under the Child and Labor Law also remain low. (104) In 2020, the government completed prosecution in 463 trafficking in persons cases, convicted 101 human traffickers in 49 cases, and acquitted 715 suspects in 414 cases. During the reporting year, the acquittal rate for trafficking in persons cases was 89 percent. (51)

Research found apprehending child traffickers has become more challenging for law enforcement as human traffickers increasingly utilize technology to reach customers and to receive electronic payments, eliminating the need to be centrally located in physical locations, such as brothels. (35,32,41) Reports indicate that both registered and unregistered spas exploit girls in sex trafficking, and the government lacks sufficient oversight of such establishments. (2) In some cases, law enforcement officers do not apprehend human traffickers, including brothel owners, in exchange for bribes and sexual services from victims. (2) Recent reports allege that in states such as Assam, West Bengal, and Jharkhand, police are ordered by state officials to register human trafficking cases as kidnappings to reduce the official number of human trafficking survivors. (2) Government officials and police officers regularly accept bribes and sexual services from human traffickers in return for protection from prosecution, and reports of police refusing to register First Information Reports (FIRs) against accused officials and alerting human traffickers of forthcoming raids also continued during the reporting period. Tamil Nadu state authorities, for example, acknowledged that some local politicians benefited with impunity from child sex trafficking and forced begging rings. (2,32,35,79) In addition, victims of human trafficking faced mistreatment from the police; law enforcement authorities did not utilize existing procedures to screen for human trafficking survivors, and authorities arrested, fined, penalized, and deported some child trafficking survivors for crimes their human traffickers compelled them to commit. (2,105)

Although India banned bonded labor in 1976 with the (BSA), implementation of the law has been minimal and authorities continued to misidentify bonded labor crimes as labor law crimes or minimum wage violations. (2,21,79,106) Police did not always arrest suspects or file FIRs to officially register a complaint, including in at least half of national bonded labor cases. Furthermore, research has found that politically connected individuals across multiple states successfully avoided prosecution, including local and state politicians who held workers in bonded labor on agricultural or brick kiln sites. (2) There continues to be a lack of victim identification, and a widespread tendency to handle bonded labor cases administratively in lieu of criminal prosecution and stall bonded labor prosecutions. (2,21,35,79) The number of convictions against bonded labor crimes is low, and when prosecutions for bonded labor crimes do occur, acquittals are common due to inadequate preparation, court backlogs, and a lack of case prioritization. (107,108) According to the latest data from the NCRB, as of 2020, over 1,500 bonded labor cases remained pending in court for up to 3 years. (109) In 2020, 2,933 total cases went to trial under the BSA; however, 2,875 cases were still pending at the end of the year. (116) Data show that among the 57 cases that completed trial in 2020, only 16 convictions were achieved, whereas 40 cases were acquitted. (110) Of India's 36 states and territories, 21 reported not identifying any bonded labor victims or filing any cases under the BSA in 2019, an increase from 17 states in either 2017 or 2018, despite NGO and media reports of bonded labor victims identified in some of those states. (2)

By the end of the reporting period, the Governments of the National Capital Territory and Delhi, Karnataka, and Tamil Nadu all issued standard operating procedures (SOPs) to cover survivors of bonded labor, child labor, begging, and sex trafficking. However, other state governments lacked similar procedures, sometimes failed to recognize bonded labor cases, and often did not issue release certificates or provide more than the initial financial assistance to bonded labor victims. (2,32,111) When child bonded labor victims were identified, the penalties assessed to the convicted child traffickers were insufficient to deter violations. (2) Since 2016, a new policy has increased reparations for bonded labor survivors, but the government has failed to pay full compensation to anyone freed. (107) Rescued bonded laborers are currently entitled to $4,458 (300,000 Rupees). (107) Reports indicate that employers trap more than 60 percent of survivors back in bonded labor after they are freed. (2)

While state police have primary responsibility for criminal law enforcement, access to training varies from state to state. States, in coordination with the national government, offered trainings for new and veteran law enforcement agents during the reporting period. Topics of these trainings included identification, rescue, and rehabilitation of child labor and bonded labor survivors. (51) Cases on the trafficking of minors for commercial sexual exploitation are heard in Protection of Children from Sexual Offences (POCSO) Act Courts. In 2018, the Department of Justice approved a scheme to establish 1,023 fast-track special courts (FTSCs) for rape and POCSO Acts. Among the FTSCs, 389 courts are exclusively dedicated to POCSO cases. (112) As of December 2021, 383 POCSO FTCs have been set up. (113) However, as of December 2020, 99 percent of cases under the POCSO Act were pending in court. (109) State authorities also report that judges and prosecutors at POCSO courts do not have training or expertise in POCSO crimes. To address this, the Madhya Pradesh police academy signed an MOU with an NGO that allowed for 1,900 police, prosecutors, and judicial officers to be trained on human trafficking. (35) In addition, four states have implemented child-friendly courtrooms or procedures, including some that allowed victims to testify via video conference. This improved victim participation in cases and helped to prevent the re-traumatization of child victims. (2) However, some victims have refused participation in the trials due to inadequate implementation of victim protection measures and legal assistance. (35)

Out of approximately 9,000 government-run, government-funded shelters for vulnerable individuals, including children, roughly 1,300 were not officially registered with the government, operating illegally and with little oversight. (114) A dearth of investigations into human trafficking crimes and the sexual and physical abuse of human trafficking victims at government-run and private shelters has reportedly encouraged a sense of impunity for shelter employees. (2) Moreover, some human trafficking survivors remained in state-run shelters for an extended time due to a lengthy repatriation process. (2) In 2019, after the discovery of the Mazaffarpur shelter case, the National Commission for Protection of Child Rights (NCPCR) under the order of the Supreme Court conducted a state-level audit of shelter homes that housed 256,000 children. NCPCR found that at least 40 percent of all shelters lacked mechanism to protect children from physical and sexual abuse. (2,115) In addition, staff members lacked proper training to recognize signs of abuse and to alert the authorities. (2) Research was unable to determine whether any action has been taken since that time to train shelter staff and implement mechanisms to protect children from abuse.

In January 2022, the Government of Bihar issued record compensation to the survivors of the Muzaffarpur shelter home case, for which the government obtained numerous convictions in 2020 under the POCSO Act and Juvenile Justice Act related to the victimization of 44 girls between the ages of 7 and 17 for the purposes of commercial sexual exploitation. According to the statement released by the National Human Rights Commission, each girl was awarded between $4,000 to $12,000, which is the biggest recorded payout for sexual abuse survivors in India. (116) When the Muzaffarpur case came into light in 2018, the Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) investigated 16 additional shelter homes in Bihar and concluded similar patterns, but only pursued court action against individuals associated with the Muzaffarpur shelter. In early 2022, the Supreme Court of India ordered the state of Bihar to submit a report on actions, if any, taken against state officers per the earlier recommendations of the CBI. (117) Research also found that other illegal shelter homes continued to operate outside of Bihar during the reporting period. (118) In 2021, similar reports of sexual assault of minor girls in a shelter home run by a government-approved NGO emerged in Jharkhand, where girls as young as age 16 were found to be victims of psychological and sexual exploitation; 40 children from the shelter home were relocated. (119,120,118) In Kolkata, police rescued 20 children from an adoption home, where 10 people were allegedly accused of running a child trafficking racket. (118,121) The adoption home was run by a top civil servant's family member, and a senior government official is also charged with abuse of children at the facility. (121,118)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Task Force to Implement the Child Labor Act (CLA)	Coordinates the oversight mechanism to ensure effective implementation of the Child and Adolescent Labor (Prohibition and Regulation) Act. Led by the Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE) and comprises 12 officials from the federal and state governments. (122) Met once during the reporting period, issuing instructions to all states to closely monitor child labor issues and ensure continued enforcement of the CLA, especially in the wake of pandemic-related economic distress. (1)
Central Advisory Board on Child and Adolescent Labor	Convenes board members to review the implementation of existing legislation and programs related to child labor and proposes new welfare measures for child labor. Chaired by MOLE and comprises 45 board members, including government officials and NGO representatives. (123) The board met once during the reporting period but research was unable to determine the outcome of the meeting. (1)
National Commission for the Protection of Child Rights (NCPCR)	Ensures that all laws, policies, programs, and administrative mechanisms are in accordance with the constitutional protections for children and the UN CRC. Conduct inquiries about child rights violations and failures to properly implement laws relating to child protection. (124) State Commissions for Protection of Child Rights have also been established in all 29 states and in 6 territories, including Delhi. (125) The NCPCR met several times during the reporting period to review issues related to child labor and the launch of a new online portal ( Baalswaraj ) used to track children engaged in street work and those that have been orphaned during the pandemic. (1)
National Human Rights Commission	Monitors implementation of the Bonded Labor System (Abolition) Act. Monitors state governments' actions to identify, release, and rehabilitate bonded laborers through quarterly submissions and exploratory and investigative missions. (126) During the reporting period, the Commission issued an advisory to all states on protecting child rights. (1)
Platform for Effective Enforcement for No Child Labor Portal	Allows government officials, NGOs, and law enforcement to share information and coordinate on child labor cases at the national, state, and local levels. Mole-operated online portal which attempts to improve enforcement of child labor laws and the implementation of the National Child Labor Project (NCLP) Scheme. (127) Allows citizens to submit child labor complaints online. (1,25) Incorporates a child tracking filing system to enhance enforcement of child labor laws. (1) Since the online platform was launched in 2017, 191,418 child laborers have been identified and 111,380 children removed from child labor and rehabilitated through STCs. Currently, 52,271 children are enrolled in STCs. (1)

During the reporting period, senior leadership from the Assam government, law enforcement, and political parties participated in an anti-trafficking in persons conclave in Guwahati. This event was organized by Shakti Vahini, a non-profit organization, and the U.S. Consulate General in Kolkata to raise awareness about human trafficking among lawmakers and political leadership at both the state and national level. (51,128)

Local-level Child welfare Committees are supported by the State Ministries of Women and Child Development. They advocate for care, protection, development, treatment, and rehabilitation of at-risk children, and provide basic needs and human rights protection. (1)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of action by some states to establish action plans to eliminate child labor.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy on Child Labor (NPCL)	Describes actions for addressing hazardous labor for children, including implementing legislation and providing direct assistance to children. (129) Implemented through programs operated by MOLE and the Ministry of Women and Child Development, including the National Child Labor Project (NCLP) Scheme, Grants in Aid, the Integrated Child Development Scheme (ICDS), the National Children's Fund, and the National Creche Scheme. (25,79,130,131) All NPCL schemes were functional during the reporting period. (70) The projects and schemes within the national policy helped rehabilitate thousands of children from child labor and provided group care to children of working parents. (1,70)
National Plan of Action for Children	Identifies priority actions for achieving the objectives set out in the National Policy for Children (NPC). (25,132,133) Aims to establish bridge courses and age-appropriate classes for children rescued from child labor and child trafficking to meet the NPC objective to ensure that all out-of-school children have access to education. In addition, seeks to develop community-based prevention, rescue, rehabilitation, and reintegration mechanisms, and strengthen institutional mechanisms to address the worst forms of child labor to meet the NPC objective that all children are protected from exploitation. (132,133) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the national action plan during the reporting period.
State Action Plans on Child Labor	Detail state governments' activities and programs to eliminate child labor. CLA plans are in place in only 11 states: Andhra Pradesh, Bihar, Delhi, Gujarat, Jharkhand, Karnataka, Meghalaya, Orissa, Punjab, Tamil Nadu, and Uttar Pradesh. (70,78,111,134-141) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the national action plan during the reporting period.

According to reports, the budget for the National Child Labor Project under the National Policy of Child Labor (NPCL), which is meant to rescue and rehabilitate child laborers, has decreased for the second year in a row. From fiscal year 2018–2019 to fiscal year 2020–2021, the allocation for the project has been reduced by half- from $12 million (Rs. 90 crore) to $5.4 million (Rs. 41 crore)- impacting the provision of essential services for rescued children. (142) The NCLP scheme helps connect rescued child laborers to education and skills programs. (142)

The Government of the National Capital Territory of Delhi's "Policy on Rehabilitation and Combating Trafficking of Women and Children," which would establish a rehabilitation fund for women and children who were trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation and establish state- and district-level coordination committees to undertake prevention and rehabilitation activities, remains pending in draft form. (70,111,143,144)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the oversight of government-run, government-funded, and privately-run shelter homes that provide assistance to survivors of the worst forms of child labor.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
National Child Labor Project (NCLP) Scheme† Integrated Child Development Scheme (ICDS)†	MOLE program that operates at the district level to identify working children, withdraw them from hazardous work, and provide them with education and vocational training. (7,130) Sets up and administers NCLP schools, mainstreams children into formal education, and provides them with stipends, meals, and health checkups. (130) Comprises approximately 3,000 NCLP Special Training Centers' (STCs) that accommodate approximately 120,000 children. (130) STCs are located across the country and provide children with a stipend, free meals, and vocational training, and bridge gaps in education for eligible children. Length of stay ranges from 6 to 18 months. (79) From April 2020 to March 31, 2021, the NCLP project removed and rehabilitated 58,219 children from child labor. (1) The National Crèche Scheme is running 5,705 crèches (child care centers). (70) Of children between the ages of 6 months and 6 years, 64.9 million have benefited from the ICDS scheme. (70)

Program	Description
Ministry of Women and Child Development (MWCD) Programs - Integrated Child Protection Scheme†, Childline†, TrackChild and Khoya-Paya†	Integrated Child Protection Scheme provides children in need of protection—including children withdrawn from hazardous work, forced labor, and human trafficking—with food and accommodations in government-run shelter homes and non-institutional care in foster homes and with adoptive families. (35,25,32,131) Provides rehabilitation and reintegration services to rescued children. (131) Through the Welfare of Working Children in Need of Care and Protection program, provides non-formal education and vocational training to street children and working children living in urban areas not covered by NCLP schemes. (131) MWCD also operates ChildLine, a 24-hour toll-free emergency telephone service for children in distress in cities across India. (32,35,131,145,146) The telephone service connects children in need of assistance with hospitals, Child Welfare Committees, shelter homes, and police; 60 to 70 percent of received calls result in the rescue of a child. (32,79,131,146) By March 2021, ChildLine service was operating in 598 districts, including child helpdesks in 141 railway stations and 5 bus stops. (147) During the reporting period, Childline fielded 5 million calls and assisted 39 million children, including children who are survivors of child labor. (147) MWCD also operates TrackChild, an online portal that tracks missing children and facilitates information sharing about missing and vulnerable children among stakeholders, including child protection units, police stations, and Child Welfare Committees. (35,25,131,148) TrackChild's Khoya-Paya (Lost and Found) website allows parents and the public to report and search for missing children. (25) Since the program's inception, the program has matched 279,692 children with their families. (149) The program was operational during the reporting period. (1)
Central Sector Scheme for Rehabilitation of Bonded Laborers†	MOLE program that rescues and rehabilitates adult and child bonded laborers. (25,130) Provides rescued bonded laborers with financial assistance and social protection services. (130) Supports funding of surveys at the district level on the prevalence of bonded labor and the rehabilitation of bonded laborers identified through the surveys. (150) From April 1, 2020, to March 31, 2021, MOLE distributed $137,000 among 7 states for the rehabilitation of bonded laborers. (1) Research was unable to determine how the released funds were utilized on the state level.
Anti-Human Trafficking Activities†	MWCD-operated anti-human trafficking activities, in collaboration with NGOs and state governments. (151) Supports projects to help reintegrate, rehabilitate, and repatriate human trafficking survivors, including children, through the Ujjwala and Swadhar Greh schemes. (151) Ujjwala is a comprehensive scheme launched in 2007. Responds to trafficking in persons of women and children, including for commercial sexual exploitation. (35,151) Operates 104 shelters. (149) In addition, facilitates the rescue of survivors, places them in safe custody, provides rehabilitation services, facilitates reintegration of survivors, and facilitates repatriation of foreign survivors. (151) The Swadhar Greh scheme provides temporary residential accommodations and services, including vocational training, legal aid, and rehabilitative counseling services to women and girls rescued from human trafficking, including commercial sexual exploitation. (32,151) Operates 362 shelters. (149) For 2020–2021, the central government allocated $1.6 million for the program, which is yet another decrease from the $2.03 million allocated in the first 5 months of 2019–2020, and from $3.18 million allocated to the program in the first 5 months of 2018–2019. (35,149) MWCD also allocated approximately $13 million towards setting up and strengthening new AHTUs in all districts across the country. A total of approximately $12.3 million of those funds have been released. (149)
Work in Freedom Project II (2018–2023)	Partnership program developed between the UK's Foreign, Commonwealth & Development Office and ILO on Fair Recruitment and Decent Work for Women Migrant Workers in South Asia and the Middle East. Aims to reduce vulnerability to human trafficking and forced labor of women and girls across migration pathways leading to the care sector and textiles, clothing, leather, and footwear industries. (152) Addresses key drivers and vulnerabilities of human trafficking, such as gender and other forms of discrimination, distress migration, and poor working and living conditions, through an integrated prevention strategy of targeted social protection and empowerment; fair recruitment practices; and evidence-based policy advocacy for decent work options. (152) For more information, see the ILO website.
Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAPI6) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor	USDOL-funded project implemented by the ILO to conduct research and develop new survey methodologies, improve awareness, strengthen policies and government capacity, and promote partnerships to eliminate child labor and forced labor. (153) In India, the project works in the states of Bihar, Chhattisgarh, and Uttar Pradesh to promote coordination of programs for child laborers and their families, build capacity of state and local governments to address child labor, and build the knowledge base on child labor. During the reporting period, the project reviewed approximately 55 schemes and programs and developed recommendations for bundling different benefit packages to specifically target families with children in child labor. (153) The program also raised awareness on child labor issues through campaigns and road shows. (154) For additional information, please see the USDOL website and the ILO website.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor

State governments in Telangana and Andhra Pradesh, two of the states where the jogini system is most prevalent, are making efforts to end the jogini practice. Telangana's State Commission for Scheduled Castes and Scheduled Tribes has identified the jogini system as a priority and requires district-level reporting on its prevalence while undertaking steps to expand support and rehabilitation services for its survivors. (51) NGOs report that Andhra Pradesh has made some progress in addressing the jogini system and supporting survivors. In addition, the state and national government funds research into the prevalence of the jogini system and support programs designed to rehabilitate survivors. (51)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The National Commission for the Protection of Child Rights launched the Baalswaraj Portal to track and assist children orphaned by the pandemic and street children. In June 2021, the Prime Minister announced government funding for children who lost parents and legal guardians to COVID-19, including higher education scholarships and monthly stipends. (51) In June 2021, the Ministry for Women and Child Development urged states to ensure children were brought under government safety nets including protecting children from child labor. (51)

Similar to government-run, government-funded shelter homes, both Ujjwala and Swadhar Greh homes, which are privately funded, have high rates of non-registration. Due to a reported loophole in the law, if the government did not act on a home's application in a prescribed timeframe, the organization applying would automatically gain licensure. (2) Research indicates that some corrupt officials purposely missed the licensing deadline to allow inadequate but politically-connected organizations to gain licensing. (2) Furthermore, audits of Ujjwala and Swadhar Greh homes documented that many homes violated minimum hygiene and safety standards, did not provide psychosocial support or educational opportunities, and operated without proper registration. (2) Moreover, in some instances the homes functioned as hostels and offered non-survivor residents for accommodations for a fee. Due to unsafe conditions coupled with alleged abuse by caretakers, authorities reported multiple instances in which children ran away. (2) Research was unable to determine whether the Government of India has taken action to close the loophole on the shelter homes' application timeframe and licensure.

The Central Sector Scheme for Rehabilitation of Bonded Laborers was updated during the reporting period. The updated scheme raises the limit of assistance from $250 (Rs. 20,000) to $380 (Rs. 30,000) and provides an option to include additional funds, up to $1,200 (Rs. 1 Lakh), in annuity. (155) The new scheme was implemented on January 27, 2022. However, research was unable to determine whether the scheme has been effective in rehabilitating bonded laborers. (155) Recent media reports have suggested that as of April 2022, some rescued laborers have yet to receive compensation as part of the scheme. (156)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in India (Table 11).

In 2021, Indonesia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

The Ministry of Women Empowerment and Child Protection launched a hotline to connect with child labor or child trafficking survivors requiring outreach, case management, shelter, mediation, and victim services. The government also issued Regulation No.

78/2021 on the Special Protection of Children, which requires the central and regional governments to provide comprehensive protection to children who are survivors of the worst forms of child labor, as well as children from minority groups and with disabilities. In addition, the Ministry of Manpower employed 1,503 labor inspectors in 2021, up from 1,352 labor inspectors in 2020.

However, children in Indonesia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in plantation agriculture, including in palm oil and tobacco production. The Ministry of Manpower continued to lack the financial resources and personnel necessary to fully enforce child labor laws throughout the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Indonesia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in plantation agriculture, including in palm oil and tobacco production. (1-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Indonesia.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	10 to 14	3.7 (816,363)
Attending School (%)	10 to 14	92.4

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,5,6,27)
	Forced domestic work, fishing, and mining (4,6,16,18,19,21)
	Use in illicit activities, including the sale, production, and trafficking of drugs, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,6,16)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

The Ministry of Women Empowerment and Child Protection (MoWECP)'s 2020 Indonesian Children's Profile report, with data on working children between ages 10 and 17, is the most recent source of government child labor data. (15) The report cites data from the 2019 National Labor Force Survey, which indicate that the percentages of working children below the minimum age for work are 1.87 percent for ages 10 to 12 and 5.14 percent for ages 13 to 14. (28) In 2019, there were 2.35 million children ages 10 to 17 who were working—38 percent in the agriculture sector, 43 percent in the service sector, and 18 percent in the industrial sector. However, data are still missing for child laborers ages 5 to 10. (15,28) In addition, the 2019 National Labor Force Survey data are not used consistently across ministries. For instance, to inform its programs, the Ministry of Manpower (MoM) continues to use outdated and inaccurate estimates of child labor and its worst forms from the 2009 survey. (15)

Children are subjected to forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation, particularly in Batam, Bali, Jakarta, Riau Islands, Puncak district in Bogor, and near mining operations in Maluku, Papua, and Jambi provinces. (6,15,27) Abroad, children, mostly girls, are also subjected to forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation, primarily in Malaysia, Taiwan, and the Middle East. (6,19,21) Data from MoWECP's SIMFONI PPA (Sistem Informasi Online Perlindungan Perempuan dan Anak), a national information management system that tracks cases of violence against women and children across Indonesia, indicate that, from January to September 2021, of 9,428 reported cases involving children, 165 were cases of sexual exploitation and 256 were cases of human trafficking. (15) Through the COVID-19 pandemic, Indonesia closed its borders to foreign tourists and limited domestic tourism, which may have had an effect on reducing the prevalence of commercial sexual exploitation by Indonesians and foreigners. (15) A prominent network of civil society organizations that monitors child sexual exploitation also recorded no cases of child sex tourism in 2021. (27) Meanwhile, perpetrators are increasingly using online and social media platforms to recruit victims of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (6) The pandemic kept many children at home with no access to school services, during which traffickers might have used this opportunity to target minors with access to the Internet and more unsupervised time. (27) During the reporting period, a prominent civil society consortium that monitors child sexual exploitation conducted media monitoring and recorded 49 cases of commercial sex, 42 cases of online prostitution, and 50 cases related to child pornography. (27)

Children working in tobacco farming—especially in the provinces of East Java, Central Java, and West Nusa Tenggara—are exposed to pesticides, work long hours, carry heavy weight, and work in extreme heat, among other activities. (1,15,17,29,30) Children working on agricultural plantations, including palm oil, coffee, and rubber plantations, collect fallen palm fruitlets and plants, and spray toxic herbicides. (10,31) Children are often recruited by family members to help adult palm oil laborers meet harvest quotas, which sometimes results in children working long hours into the night or dropping out of school. (9,11,13–15) Children in the city of Bima, on the island of Sumbawa, work as horse jockeys and face a number of health and safety hazards, including risk of bone injuries and fatal falls. In addition to safety concerns, participation in horse racing may impact school attendance. (25,26),

Although the Act on the National Education System mandates free education, research indicates that schools impose additional fees on students to cover school activities and educational items, such as books, uniforms, transportation, and other non-tuition costs. (32,33) These added expenses may hinder students' ability to attend school, particularly for students from low-income families. Refugee children, and Indonesian children without proper birth documentation or a government-sponsored identification card, face a barrier to accessing education, because Indonesia's formal education system is only accessible to citizens and individuals with officially granted residency. (33,34) Children in rural areas are less likely to have a birth certificate than those in urban areas. (28) In addition, children with disabilities and children whose parents do not have a birth certificate also report high rates of non-registration. According to the 2019 National Socioeconomic Survey, 86 percent of children in Indonesia have birth certificates. (35) Through the formulation of the Sustainable Development Goals Roadmap and Medium-Term National Development Plan 2020–2024, the government has set an explicit target to increase birth certificate coverage to 100 percent through its strategy of strengthening civil registration and other vital statistics. (28) In addition, the government has an online application system as an alternative to applying at population registry offices to help Indonesian children obtain birth documentation more quickly so they can attend school. (34,36)

The pandemic severely affected Indonesia's education system and children's access to schooling. In response to the pandemic, the government closed public schools and moved much of its learning online. (37) Lack of technology and access to high-speed Internet resulted in many students in rural and poorer areas having unequal access to education. (38) Children's presence at home during normal school hours also increased the likelihood that family members may have pressured them to engage in family-based employment to supplement the family's income during the pandemic. However, many schools returned to in-person classes in late 2021. (38)

In addition, Indonesia's National Disaster Management Agency reported 1,441 natural disasters, with 493 fatalities, from January to June 2021. (15) Children who are orphaned, separated from their families, displaced, or become homeless as a result of natural disasters are at high risk of child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking. (6,35)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Indonesia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Indonesia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including insufficient prohibitions against child trafficking.

Free Public Education	No		Articles 12, Section 2(b), and 34 of the Act on the National Education System (32)

The legislature has yet to pass the Domestic Workers Protection Bill. This bill outlines the circumstances under which children ages 15 through 17 can perform non-hazardous domestic work, including requiring parental permission to execute the work contract and prohibiting work at night. (3,49)

Indonesia's prohibitions against child trafficking are inconsistent with international law because the Law on the Eradication of the Criminal Act of Trafficking in Persons requires a demonstration of threats, the use of force, or coercion to be established for the crime of child trafficking. (42,43) However, judicial officials at the national and provincial level continued to assert that the law implicitly established that force, fraud, or coercion was not required to constitute child sex trafficking and that this, therefore, was not a barrier to successfully prosecuting and obtaining convictions in child sex trafficking cases. (6)

Although Indonesia does specify the conditions in which light work may be undertaken and limits the number of hours for light work, it does not list activities in which light work may be permitted. The types of hazardous work prohibited for children also do not cover horse jockeying, a type of work in which there is evidence that Indonesian children are exposed to physical dangers. (41) In addition, Article 12, Section 2(b) of the Act on the National Education System permits schools to charge fees. Although the Act on the National Education System provides for free basic education, the Act also requires students to pay prescribed fees unless those fees are waived. (32)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Manpower (MoM), Directorate General of Labor Development and Supervision and Directorate of Norms Supervision of Women and Child Workers	MoM's Directorate General of Labor Development and Supervision enforces the country's labor laws relating to child labor through labor inspections and formulates policies, standards, norms, guidelines, and mechanisms on labor inspections. Provides information to employers on child labor laws and regulations and works with law enforcement officials to prosecute child labor violators. (50) MoM's Directorate of Norms Supervision of Women and Child Workers responds to complaints of child labor by telephone, fax, or e-mail. Refers children found during inspections to the local Women's Empowerment and Family Planning Body or to the Integrated Service Center for Empowering Women and Children for appropriate social services, coordinated by the Ministry of Women Empowerment and Child Protection (MoWECP) and the Ministry of Social Affairs (MoSA). (15)
Indonesian National Police, including Women and Children's Service Unit	Handle investigations involving child trafficking. (15) Conduct inspections and raids, and make arrests in response to crimes, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. (2)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Indonesia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MoM that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

† Data are from January 2020 to September 2020.

‡ Data are from January 2021 to September 2021.

During the reporting period, the government decreased labor inspection funds to $12.2 million in 2021 from $13.5 in 2020 due to budget reallocations to support the pandemic response. Officials noted that funds are insufficient to cover office infrastructure, transportation, and fuel for vehicles, which hampered labor inspectors' ability to carry out inspections. (15)

Despite the budget decrease, MoM employed 1,503 labor inspectors in 2021, up from 1,352 labor inspectors in 2020. (15) However, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Indonesia's workforce,

Indonesia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

which includes approximately 139 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Indonesia would need to employ roughly 9,278 labor inspectors. (53,54)

Officials at MoM disclosed that there are insufficient inspectors to cover all formal workplaces, and MoM continued to rely on community-based monitors and neighborhood chiefs to report incidences of child labor. (15,21,34) As of September 2021, MoM conducted 12,419 inspections in 12,820 workplaces in the formal sector, including 11,440 routine inspections. Although MoM reported no instances of child labor, ILO and MoM officials suspect that child labor violations occur. (15) MoWECP, which coordinates the provision of social services to children, responds to reports of child labor in the informal sector. (12)

In 2021, MoM conducted a training, held in person and virtually, to 25 labor inspectors in North Sulawesi province and 50 companies in Manado on the Socialization of Child Workers norms, as well as trainings on child labor in Jakarta, Banten, and West Java. (15,38) In previous years, government officials noted that the amount of refresher training was insufficient, given the total number of labor inspectors. (2)

As the law in Indonesia treats child labor as a criminal offense, labor inspectorates may initiate investigations for violations related to child labor, which may result in prosecutions and criminal penalties. (40,51) Child labor cases are investigated by MoM civilian investigators who collect evidence and prepare information that is passed to the Attorney General's Office for subsequent prosecution. (21)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Indonesia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (21,36)	No (15)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (21)	N/A

Number of Investigations	Unknown (21)	3 (27)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (21)	Unknown (27)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (21)	Unknown (27)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (21)	2 (27,38)

During the reporting period, the High Court of Kendari, Southeast Sulawesi, upheld a decision during an appeal from the former Deputy Regent of North Buton who was convicted in June 2020 under Indonesian child protection laws for the sexual exploitation of a minor. The court extended his sentence to 13.5 years, up from 6.5 years, and increased his fine to $71,429 from $7,042. (6,27) In August 2021, the Mojokerto District Court, East Java sentenced a trafficker under Indonesia's anti-trafficking in persons laws to 10 years in prison and imposed a fine of $14,286 for subjecting 36 minors between ages 14 to 16 to online commercial sexual exploitation. In October 2021, the Sigli District Court, Aceh, convicted a trafficker to 6.5 years in prison and imposed a fine of $7,143 for subjecting 2 minors to commercial sexual exploitation. (27)

The Indonesian National Police's Criminal Investigation Division maintains an informal database of cases involving child trafficking. However, these statistics are not comprehensive of all child trafficking crimes or other worst forms of child labor, and the number of violations found and prosecutions initiated do not specify whether they were for worst forms of child labor offenses or human trafficking offenses. (27) In addition, the government does not have a centralized system of aggregating information on criminal law enforcement information related to child labor and its worst forms. (15) Although data for these crimes may exist at the local level, the government lacks the resources to consolidate data in a central database. (27) The decentralized nature of criminal law enforcement data and voluntary reporting by precincts may have contributed to the underreporting of criminal law enforcement information related to the worst forms of child labor.

No training on child labor and its worst forms was held for criminal law enforcement during the reporting period due to pandemic-related restrictions and reprioritization of funds. (15) Research found training on current child labor-specific regulations to be inadequate. (2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
MoWECP	Coordinates among relevant ministries at the national and provincial levels on child protection efforts, including child labor. Collaborates with MoM, which enforces child labor laws, and MoSA to ensure that all children who were removed from child labor are provided with appropriate social services, such as rehabilitation at shelters, before enrolling them in school. (15) Coordinates with the Ministry of Communication to maintain a Children's Helpline to receive complaints on child labor. During the reporting period, MoWECP launched a hotline to connect with survivors of child labor or child trafficking requiring outreach, case management, shelter, mediation, and victim services. (15,38) This hotline is in addition to SEJIWA ( Sehat Jiwa ), another hotline that supports women and children during the COVID-19 pandemic. Also in 2021, MoWECP recognized 17 stakeholders who worked toward the elimination of child labor in Indonesia. (15) These stakeholders included local governments, businesses, and organizations. (15)
Indonesian Child Protection Commission (KPAI)	Monitors the implementation of the Child Protection Law and child protection policies; and provides recommendations on child protection framework to the President of Indonesia. (43) Includes MoWECP; MoSA; the Ministry of Education, Culture, Research, and Technology; the Ministry of Health; the Ministry of Agriculture; the Ministry of Law and Human Rights; the Indonesian National Police; and the National Narcotics Agency. (55) During the reporting period, KPAI held a press conference on the status of its supervision of 35 cases of child victims of sexual exploitation and child labor from January to April 2021. (56)
Provincial-Level and District-Level Regional Action Committees	Coordinate and monitor policy and program efforts and develop action plans to eliminate the worst forms of child labor at the local level. Led by the Ministry of Home Affairs. (57) Indonesia has provincial-level task forces in 32 provinces and 194 district-level committees. During the reporting period, the provincial-level and district-level committees continued their activities. (15)
National Anti-Trafficking in Persons Task Force	Coordinates anti-human trafficking efforts across 21 ministries and government agencies, including MoM and MoWECP; advocates, disseminates information, conducts trainings, and builds national and international cooperation; monitors protection systems for survivors of human trafficking; develops law enforcement practices related to human trafficking; and evaluates and reports to the President on the Task Force's work. Co-chaired by the Coordinating Ministry of Human Development and Culture and the Coordinating Ministry of Political, Legal, and Security Affairs. (27) During the reporting period, the Anti-Trafficking Task Force continued to work on the National Action Plan on Preventing Human Trafficking, which expired in 2019. (27) Research found coordination between the National Anti-Trafficking Task Force and its provincial and local-level counterparts to be insufficient to translate national government policies into nationwide implementation. (6)
Provincial-Level and District-Level Anti-Trafficking in Persons Task Forces	Coordinate prevention and anti-trafficking efforts at the local level. Commonly chaired by the local Integrated Service Center for Women and Children or the local Office of Social Affairs. Operate in 32 provinces and 251 out of 438 districts and municipalities. (27) During the reporting period, the local chair of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Task Force in Nunukan Regency, North Kalimantan province, led workshops to raise awareness on anti-trafficking in persons strategies, which were attended by 41 local government officials. In addition, in July 2021, the Aceh Provincial Women Empowerment and Child Protection Agency organized a "Regional Trafficking Issues Networking and Mapping" meeting to strengthen the regency- or city-level Anti-Trafficking in Persons Task Force networks. (27)

Indonesia

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The government eliminated the National Action Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor in 2014 to streamline its bureaucracy and transferred the committee's responsibilities to MoM. MoM serves as the lead agency for coordinating the work of partner ministries and sub-national entities in implementing the National Plan of Action for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2002–2022). (15)

Some Provincial and District Task Forces lack sufficient funding to conduct investigations and mechanisms to incorporate anti-trafficking in persons national policies and recommendations into their policy priorities. Although the Indonesian National Police's Criminal Investigative Division received dedicated funding for anti-human trafficking activities, provincial police did not receive dedicated funding for human trafficking cases and funded investigations through their general crimes budget. (6)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan of Action (NPA) for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2002–2022)	Provides a policy framework for the elimination of child labor, including its worst forms. (58) Specific activities conducted during the third phase of the NPA include developing a set of recommendations with international and local NGOs, increasing awareness-raising and advocacy efforts, and integrating child labor in formulating sectoral policies and regulations. Established a program to create a series of industrial zones free of child labor, as well as the National Movement for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor to integrate the issue of child labor as the government develops sectoral policies and programs. (15) During the reporting period, MoM distributed anti-child labor booklets to companies and agencies, and held trainings for labor inspectors in Jakarta, Banten, and West Java. (15)
Roadmap Toward a Child Labor-Free Indonesia in 2022 (2014–2022)	Supports implementation of the NPA for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor. Aims to mainstream the elimination of the worst forms of child labor into relevant national policies; strengthen coordination between stakeholders at the national, provincial, and district levels; and enhance the capacity of stakeholders to eradicate child labor. (59) During the reporting period, MoM held a virtual event on the Declaration of Indonesian Palm Oil Sector Free of Child Labor, in which the Minister of Manpower was a keynote speaker and 287 companies in 35 regencies/cities in 7 provinces throughout Indonesia attended. (36)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (19,21)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including education-related fees for children to attend school.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Trafficking Services‡	Provide social rehabilitation and shelter services for child survivors of human trafficking. Led by MoSA and other government agencies. (19) The government continued to provide shelter and rehabilitation services for child trafficking survivors during the reporting period. (6)
Cash Transfer Programs‡	Provide conditional cash transfers to help with formal and informal education opportunities and health expenses for vulnerable groups, including street children, abandoned children and infants, children facing criminal charges, children with disabilities, the poorest families, and child laborers who dropped out of school. Includes the Smart Indonesia Program ( Kartu Indonesia Pintar , KIP), a card that provides educational grants to all school-age children whose families have a Family Welfare Card or meet eligibility criteria covering both formal and informal education; Child Social Welfare Program ( Program Kesejahteraan Sosial Anak ), which provides conditional cash transfers to children; Family Welfare Card ( Kartu Keluarga Sejahtera ), which provides a bank account and consolidates all financial assistance programs, including children's education and health funds, for low-income families; and the Family Home Program ( Program Keluarga Harapan , PKH), which provides conditional cash transfers for children's education to the poorest 5 percent of households. (2,34,35) In 2021, the government provided KIP cards to 17.9 million students from poor families. (15) In response to the pandemic, PKH's budget was reduced to $2.04 billion in 2021 from $2.67 billion in 2020, yet it still provided services to 10 million beneficiaries in 2021. (15)

Program	Description
Education Programs†	School Operation Assistance ( Bantuan Operasional Sekolah ) grant program compensates schools for the loss of income from waiving school fees for poor and vulnerable children in primary, junior secondary, and senior high schools. (15) In 2021, the government allocated $3.66 billion to the fund. (15) Minimum Service Standards of Basic Education Program improves access to quality public education by limiting the distance of primary and junior secondary schools from children's households, specifying minimum teacher-student ratios, and identifying minimum teacher education qualifications. (60) Community Learning Centers provide education for children of migrant palm oil workers. (19) Reducing Child Labor to Support the Family Hope Program (PPA-PKH) provides special education services to prepare children who dropped out of school to work so they can return to school, and aims to reduce child labor among targeted households. (15,34)

† Program is funded by the Government of Indonesia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (16,21,35)

During the reporting period, the government issued Regulation No. 78/2021 on the Special Protection of Children, which requires the central and regional governments to provide comprehensive protection to children who are survivors of forced labor, slavery or practices similar to slavery, commercial sexual exploitation (including child pornography), and human trafficking, and to children from minority groups and with disabilities. (15) Comprehensive protection provisions include providing physical, psychological, and social treatment and rehabilitation services, social assistance for children from economically disadvantaged families, and protection and assistance in judicial proceedings. (61)

As Indonesia's poorest families continue to cope with financial effects of the pandemic, the government provided 100 million Indonesians with the Indonesia Health Card (KIS) designed to aid those who are struggling to meet basic needs, thereby reducing the risk of child labor. The budget for KIS in 2021 remained unchanged from 2020 at $3.43 billion. (15)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Indonesia (Table 11).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2021, Iraq made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs launched a campaign with the International Labor Organization to raise awareness about child labor among students, families, and employers in sectors in which child labor is present. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Iraq is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued to implement a practice that delays advancement to eliminate child labor. During the reporting period, Iraqi and Kurdistan Regional Government authorities may have inappropriately detained or punished children allegedly affiliated with ISIS—some of whom were victims of forcible recruitment and use. Children in Iraq are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced begging. The government did not provide information on its labor or criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. It also continues to lack social programs that focus on assisting children involved in the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Iraq are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced begging. (1-4) Household surveys, such as the 2018 Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey (MICS) administered in Iraq, are not designed to capture the labor performed by IDPs living in camps and, therefore, do not capture the children within this population who are involved in child labor. Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Iraq. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	4.8 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	78.4
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.2
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (5)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2018. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Farming, including the production of dairy products (7,8)
	Fishing, activities unknown (7)
Industry	Construction† (9)
	Making bricks, including transporting bricks and working in kilns (3,7,10)
	Working in factories, producing glass, household cleaners, paint, steel, garments and textiles, perfume, electrical materials, and recycling plastic (3,10)
Services	Street work, including selling goods, pushing carts, cleaning cars, and begging (3,11-15)
	Working at gas stations† and auto repair and other shops (3)
	Working in landfills, scavenging and collecting garbage† and scrap metal (10,13,16)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Domestic work (3)
	Working in hotels, restaurants, bars, nightclubs,† and brothels (3,11,12)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Use in illicit activities, including cross-border smuggling and drug and weapons trafficking, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,4,7,11,12,17,18)
	Forced domestic work (3)
	Forced begging (2,4,7,19-21)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-4,7,19-23)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Throughout the country, some girls are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation through temporary marriages, including girls living in IDP camps. (17,23) Iranian-backed Popular Mobilization Forces (PMF)-affiliated militias Asaib Ahl al-Haq (AAH) and Harakat Hezbollah al-Nujaba (HHN) profit from and protect "marriage offices" operated by clerics who facilitate commercial sexual exploitation of children through temporary marriages. (2,17,20) Syrian girls from refugee camps in the Kurdistan region were sometimes forced into early or temporary marriages with Iraqi or other refugee men; some Kurdistan Regional Government (KRG) authorities allegedly ignored—or accepted bribes to ignore—such cases, including those in which girls were sold multiple times. (17) Research found that women and girls in IDP camps whose family members have alleged ties to ISIS endure a complex system of sexual exploitation, sex trafficking, and abuse by armed actors residing in the camps, security and military officials, and camp personnel controlling access to humanitarian assistance and services. (19)

Children in Iraq face numerous barriers to education, including displacement, the lack of local schools, the use of schools as shelters by IDPs, costs of transportation and school supplies, and lack of sufficient educational facilities. (7,9,12) Sources report severe teacher shortages in Sinjar district as the result of teachers being displaced. (7) Insufficient access to transportation and destruction of schools during the conflict with ISIS also continue to limit access to education; according to UNICEF, over half of the schools in Iraq require repairs. (7) In addition, children of parents whose marriages were considered to be informal due to the woman being a minor, some displaced persons and refugees, and some children with suspected ties to ISIS lack identification documents required for school enrollment. (7,25,26) As of March 2021, 1.34 million people remained internally displaced with poor access to education, with 2.6 million children in need of humanitarian assistance. (27)

Displaced children and refugee children are especially vulnerable to educational barriers, including the cost of transportation and school supplies, lack of documentation, host community children being given priority for classroom seats, and vulnerability to COVID-19 pandemic-related school closures due to reduced access to mobile devices, the Internet, and parental support. (7) Secondary and higher education systems sometimes refuse to accept students who previously studied at schools that used the Latin rather than Arabic alphabet; many of these students drop out as a result. (7) Children with special needs had limited access to education due to a lack of specialized teachers and school infrastructure. (7) UNICEF reports that, while almost 92 percent of children enroll in primary schools, only half of children from economically disadvantaged families complete primary school and less than a quarter complete secondary education. (28)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Iraq has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Iraq's and the KRG's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of child trafficking.

	Kurdistan Region	Yes	15	Articles 6 and 10 of the Kurdistan Regional Government Ministry of Education Law (37)

Standard	Related Entity	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Free Public Education	Iraq	Yes		Article 34.2 of the Constitution; Article 9 of the Education Law (35,38)
	Kurdistan Region	Yes		Article 10 of the Kurdistan Regional Government Ministry of Education Law (37)

* Country has no conscription (34)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (35,36)

Article 117 of the Constitution of Iraq recognizes Kurdistan, which comprises the provinces of Dohuk, Erbil, Sulaimaniya, and Halabja, as a federal region. (38-41) Article 121 grants the Kurdistan Region the right to exercise legislative, executive, and judicial powers. (38) The Iraqi Kurdistan Parliament must endorse any laws that the Government of Iraq passed after 1991 for such laws to enter into force in the Iraqi Kurdistan Region. (39-41)

In Iraq, Article 1 of the Law to Combat Human Trafficking requires force, fraud, or coercion to be present as an element to constitute the crime of child sex trafficking, which is inconsistent with international standards, including Article 3 of the Palermo Protocol. (32) The Iraqi Kurdistan Parliament endorsed the Iraqi Law to Combat Human Trafficking, which means the operative human trafficking standard in the Kurdistan Region is also not in compliance with international standards. (42)

Iraq's laws do not prohibit the use of children in prostitution and do not clearly prohibit the use, procuring, and offering of children for the production of pornography or pornographic performances. (33) Moreover, under the Iraqi Education Law and under the Law on Compulsory Education, children are required to attend primary school for only 6 years, which is typically up to age 12. (35,36) This leaves children ages 12 to 15 particularly vulnerable to child labor, because they are not required to be in school, yet they are not legally permitted to work.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Related Entity	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MOLSA)	Iraq	Enforces child labor laws and regulations through its Child Labor Unit. (12) Conducts research on child labor through its Childhood Welfare Authority. Receives complaints of child labor cases. (12)
Kurdistan Regional Government's Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (KMOLSA)	Kurdistan Region	Enforces child labor laws and regulations in the Iraqi Kurdistan Region. Police units of the KRG's Ministry of Interior (KMOI) play a supporting role in the daily activities of KMOLSA. (12)
Ministry of Interior (MOI)	Iraq	Enforces criminal laws on the worst forms of child labor. Collaborates with MOLSA, the Iraqi Industries Federation, and the Confederation of Trade Unions to conduct inspection campaigns. (12) Maintains a hotline for victims of human trafficking, with calls routed directly to the Ministry's Anti-Trafficking Directorate. (12)
Kurdistan Regional Government's Ministry of Interior (KMOI)	Kurdistan Region	Investigates cases of commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (12) Includes a Counter Trafficking Directorate within KMOI. (42)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Iraq took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (MOLSA) and the KRG's Ministry of Labor and Social Affairs (KMOLSA) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In August 2021, the director of MOLSA's Child Labor Unit publicly reported that the Ministry carried out 20 inspection visits per month on average in its efforts to expose and enforce child labor violations, and its teams recorded 70 child labor violations in the first half of 2021. (3) All 70 cases resulted in a fine, temporary shutdown, or full shutdown of the workplace. (43) However, MOLSA officials stated that enforcement of child labor laws remains weak and ineffective. (3)

Sources indicate that, during the reporting period, KMOLSA and the KRG's Ministry of Interior (KMOI) were responsive to complaints of child labor in the Kurdistan region but would only conduct child labor inspections in response to a complaint. (3)

Although the number of labor inspectors is unknown, research indicates that the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Iraq and the Kurdistan Region's workforce, which includes over 10.7 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Iraq and the KRG would need to employ roughly 715 labor inspectors. (3,44)

When inspectors identify child labor violations, they can issue warnings and instructions, or refer cases to court. (45) KMOLSA indicated that funding is insufficient to carry out its duties. (7)

The government did not provide information on its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Iraq took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including prosecution planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2021, authorities may have inappropriately detained or punished children allegedly affiliated with ISIS—some of whom were victims of forcible recruitment and use by armed groups. (17, 24,46-49)

Although the Ministry of Interior (MOI) reported that it investigated 12 police officers for involvement in sex trafficking, research indicates that security and camp management personnel in IDP camps continue to be complicit in the sexual exploitation and trafficking of girls. (3,4) The government did not investigate or hold anyone criminally accountable for allegations of unlawful recruitment and use of child soldiers. (17,21) Some victims of human trafficking, including children who were forcibly recruited and used, are punished for unlawful acts their traffickers compelled them to commit. (17,41,55) Research indicates that children are sentenced to up to 8 years in prison for prostitution, rather than being treated as victims of trafficking or commercial sexual exploitation of children. (43) In addition, an NGO reported that police occasionally detained children engaged in street begging and kept them in custody before releasing them; police did not screen these children as possible victims of human trafficking or refer them to appropriate protection services. (11,17)

The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including lack of coordination among agencies to effectively process cases of children suspected of having ties with ISIS or children who are victims of human trafficking.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Related Entity	Role & Description
Interministerial Committee on Child Labor	Iraq	Coordinates overall government efforts to address child labor, researches policies regarding child labor, and designs and manages projects. Members include representatives from MOLSA and four other ministries. (11) Active in 2021. (3)
Central Committee to Combat Trafficking in Persons (CCCT)	Iraq	Oversees the implementation of the Law to Combat Human Trafficking and serves as the national coordinating body on human trafficking. Led by MOI, and includes representatives from five ministries, KMOI, and two other state entities. (11,50) Active in 2021. (4)
Interministerial Committee on Trafficking in Persons	Kurdistan Region	Makes recommendations on implementing the KRG's Anti-Trafficking in Persons Law. Headed by the Director General of the Divan at the Ministry of Interior, it also includes 17 members from several ministries and services. (20) The Interministerial Committee on Trafficking in Persons met at least once in 2021. (43)
KRG Council of Ministers	Kurdistan Region	Coordinates KMOI and KMOLSA actions on child labor in the Iraqi Kurdistan Region through the KRG Council of Ministers. (11) Research was unable to determine whether the KRG Council of Ministers was active during the reporting period.
KRG High Committee on Human Trafficking	Kurdistan Region	Led by KMOI and includes representatives of KMOLSA and 17 government ministries. (4,11) Specific activities are unknown. (51) Research was unable to determine whether the KRG High Committee on Human Trafficking was active during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including covering all worst forms of child labor.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Related Entity	Description
Child Protection Policy (2017–2022)	Iraq	Outlines a comprehensive approach to addressing child protection, including addressing child labor through prevention, protection, and rehabilitation programs, such as a poverty alleviation initiative and educational and mental health services. Includes a component to provide rehabilitation and reintegration activities for children previously engaged in armed conflict and children who experienced trauma during the period of ISIS occupation. (12,52) The policy does not specifically cover other worst forms of child labor present in Iraq, including forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation. (52) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
National Plan on Combating Human Trafficking in Iraq	Iraq	Aims to address human trafficking by outlining steps to be taken by authorities represented on the CCCT. Focuses on prevention, protection, prosecution, and regional and international cooperation and includes considerations for child victims. (53) Active in 2021. (21)

Research was unable to identify any child labor policies in the Kurdistan Region. (3)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Related Entity	Description
Informal Education†	Iraq	Government-supported informal education systems, including evening school programs and accelerated education that encourages children ages 12 to 18 who have dropped out of school to continue their education. (12) Research was unable to determine what steps were undertaken in 2021 to implement this program.
Conditional Subsidies Program†	Iraq	Provides assistance to low-income families for children to stay in school and out of the workforce. In 2021, MOLSA continued to provide cash assistance to low-income families to send their children to school. (3)
Shelters for Human Trafficking Victims†	Iraq	MOLSA-operated shelter in Baghdad for human trafficking victims, including children involved in the worst forms of child labor; other facilities are in Basra, Kirkuk, and Ninewa provinces. (12) Officials have indicated that poor coordination and policies that dissuade victims from seeking help accounted for a low number of victims receiving services through shelters. (20) In addition, shelters are reportedly unable to house child survivors, sending them to MOLSA orphanages instead, due to a lack of funding and suitable accommodations. (21,43)

† Program is funded by the Government of Iraq.

In 2021, MOLSA launched a campaign with the ILO to raise awareness about child labor among students, families, and employers of sectors in which child labor is present. (54) The campaign hopes to reach 10,000 children, families, teachers, and others and is conducted in schools. The campaign will also include awareness-raising activities, such as television and radio programs. (54)

Efforts by the Government of Iraq and the KRG to provide protection services to demobilized child soldiers of ISIS or the PMF are insufficient. Failing to reintegrate former child soldiers leaves them vulnerable to re-victimization or re-recruitment into armed groups. (17) Likewise, research was unable to find evidence of specific active programs to support children subjected to commercial sexual exploitation or other worst forms of child labor, including child soldiering. Existing programs do not sufficiently address the lack of access to education in Iraq and the Kurdistan Region.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Iraq (Table 11).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the laws comprehensively prohibit child trafficking in all parts of Iraq, including the Kurdistan Region, and do not require force or coercion for their application, in accordance with international standards.	2015 – 2021
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the use of a child in prostitution and the use, procuring, and offering of a child for the production of pornography and pornographic performances.	2019 – 2021
	Ensure that the law in Iraq criminally prohibits the use of children in illicit activities, including in the production and trafficking of drugs.	2015 – 2021

	Increase the age of compulsory schooling in Iraq to at least age 15, the minimum age for work.	2009 – 2021
Enforcement	Publish labor law enforcement information, such as the funding of the labor inspectorate, number of inspectors, inspections, and violations.	2011 – 2021
	Increase the number of labor inspectors to meet the ILO's technical advice and ensure adequate funding to enforce legal protections against child labor, including its worst forms.	2011 – 2021
	Ensure children picked up by authorities for begging are screened for trafficking indicators.	2021
	Ensure that children who are victims of trafficking or commercial sexual exploitation are not imprisoned and are granted access to social services providers and humanitarian assistance.	2021
	Ensure that labor inspectors and criminal investigators receive training, including refresher courses, on child labor and that they have sufficient resources to carry out their duties.	2016 – 2021
	Publish information on criminal law enforcement on the worst forms of child labor in Iraq and the Iraqi Kurdistan Region.	2013 – 2021
	Ensure that children are not arrested, detained, tortured, or denied services on the basis of their or their family members' perceived ties to ISIS.	2015 – 2021
	Ensure that armed groups that recruit and use children are held criminally accountable.	2016 – 2021
	Ensure that allegations of sexual exploitation and trafficking of girls in IDP camps by government officials are investigated and those responsible are held criminally liable.	2019 – 2021
Coordination	Ensure that all coordinating bodies meet and are able to carry out their intended mandates.	2017 – 2021
Government Policies	Implement the Child Protection Policy in Iraq and adopt a child labor policy in the Iraqi Kurdistan Region for other worst forms of child labor present in Iraq, including forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation.	2018 – 2021
Social Programs	Implement programs to ensure that children are discouraged from enlisting in armed groups and receiving military training.	2015 – 2021
	Ensure that universal access to education is consistent with international standards, including for refugee and internally displaced children and children with special needs, and that programs address barriers to education, including the lack of teachers, the destruction and lack of local schools, costs of transportation and school supplies, lack of infrastructure, especially during school closures. Ensure that the lack of identification documents does not hinder access to education, including for IDPs and refugees, children with suspected ties to ISIS, and children of "informal" marriages.	2013 – 2021
	Implement programs to address child labor in relevant sectors in Iraq, such as the provision of services to children in commercial sexual exploitation, to demobilize and reintegrate children engaged in armed groups, and to provide informal education programs and shelters for human trafficking survivors.	2009 – 2021

In 2021, Jamaica made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government amended its Trafficking in Persons Act by removing the option of fines as punishment for certain severe offenses, such as commercial sexual exploitation of children, and increasing the maximum fine for other offenses. It also launched a 211 hotline to replace the previous 888-PROTECT line, making it easier for the public to report child labor cases. Moreover, 150 justices were trained on how to identify and report suspected cases of trafficking, including child trafficking and child labor violations. However, children in Jamaica are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and use in illicit activities. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and street work. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, its laws do not provide higher penalties for using, procuring, or offering children for the production and distribution of drugs than penalties imposed for these same crimes when the victims are adults. Moreover, the number of labor inspectors is insufficient for the size of Jamaica's workforce.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Jamaica are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and use in illicit activities. (1) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture and street work. (2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Jamaica.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Jamaica is a destination and source country for commercial sexual exploitation of children, particularly in or near the tourist attractions of Negril, Montego Bay, and certain urban areas of Kingston. (1,5) Cases typically involved young girls from poor urban and rural households trafficked to engage in commercial sexual exploitation in brothels, nightclubs, massage parlors, and strip clubs. Recently, victims were lured by social media or false jobs in popular newspaper advertisements. (1) Young girls, immigrant children, LGBTQI+ youth, children from poor families, and children from rural areas are particularly vulnerable to human trafficking and child sexual exploitation. (11,15) Many of the LGBTQI+ youth were minors fleeing their families or communities in fear of persecution or bullying. (11)

Children also continue to be recruited by criminal organizations to engage in illicit activities, such as gang violence, drug and gun smuggling, and financial fraud, including lottery scamming. (1,16) Some child domestic workers are subjected to domestic servitude, and some children are subjected to forced begging. Many children are reported missing in Jamaica, some of whom may be subjected to forced labor. (16) Reports showed that forced child labor across sectors increased during the reporting year due to the economic downturn and school closures as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic. (1)

The Statistical Institute of Jamaica and the ILO released the results of the Jamaica National Youth Activity Survey, which estimated that 37,965 children between ages 5 to 17 are engaged in child labor in Jamaica, with 68.6 percent engaged in hazardous work. Children are engaged in hazardous work primarily in the domestic work sector, in agriculture and fishing, in the wholesale and retail sectors, and in construction. (2) Children in rural areas are more likely to work than their urban counterparts; they are also more likely to work more hours and to engage in hazardous work. (2)

Moreover, the cost for transportation, food, books, and uniforms creates barriers to education for some children. (19,20) Government officials and education professionals in Jamaica reported a significant divide between traditional and non-traditional schools, in which the latter purportedly left students without adequate education, training, and certification, perpetuating a cycle of poverty. (1) The government closed schools due to the pandemic from March 2020 to November 2021, with some schools closed through the end of 2021. The Ministry of Education, Youth and Information reported that approximately 120,000 students disengaged from school during the pandemic. (1,21)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Jamaica has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention		Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Jamaica's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a lack of prohibition of military recruitment by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 34(1) and 36 of the Child Care and Protection Act (22)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 34(3) and 36 of the Child Care and Protection Act (22)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 34(3)(b), 39, and 41 of the Child Care and Protection Act; Section 55 of the Factories Act: Docks (Safety, Health and Welfare) Regulations; Section 49(2) of the Factories Act: Building Operations and Works of Engineering Construction Regulations; Section 18 of the Mining Act (22-25)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Sections 2, 4, and 4A of the Trafficking in Persons (Prevention, Suppression and Punishment) Act; Section 2 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prevention, Suppression and Punishment) (Amendment) Act, 2021 (26,27)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Section 10 of the Child Care and Protection Act; Sections 2, 4, and 4A of the Trafficking in Persons (Prevention, Suppression and Punishment) Act; Section 2 of the Trafficking in Persons (Prevention, Suppression and Punishment) (Amendment) Act, 2021 (22,26,27)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Sections 2, 4, and 4A of the Trafficking in Persons (Prevention, Suppression and Punishment) Act; Sections 18, 21 and 36 of the Sexual Offences Act; Sections 3–4 of the Child Pornography (Prevention) Act (26-29)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Section 4 of the Criminal Justice (Suppression of Criminal Organizations) Act (28)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 18(2) of the Defense Act (29)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Sections 28 and 89 of the Child Care and Protection Act(22)
Free Public Education	No		Section 13(k) of the Jamaican Charter of Fundamental Rights and Freedoms (30)

* Country has no conscription (26)

Jamaica does not meet the international standard for free public education as free education is only guaranteed for Jamaican citizens, thereby leaving those without citizenship vulnerable to child labor. (30)

In November 2021, the government amended its Trafficking in Persons (Prevention, Suppression and Punishment) Act, which removed the option of fines as punishment for certain severe offenses such as commercial sexual trafficking and increased maximum fines for other offenses. (1) Jamaica prohibits a child below the age of 13 from engaging in work for economic gain; however, it allows children ages 13 to 14 to engage in some limited forms of light work involving fewer hours or less physically intensive labor. Jamaica allows for formal employment beginning from age 15. (1,22)

Jamaican laws do not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation because the law does not criminalize use of a child for prostitution. Additionally, the laws related to use of children in illicit activities do not specifically include higher penalties for perpetrators who use, procure, or offer a child for the production and distribution of drugs. (22,31) Moreover, Jamaican law does not criminally prohibit military recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.

The Occupational Safety and Health Bill was expected to be passed by parliament during the reporting year, but it still has not been passed. It is anticipated that the bill, if passed, will specify light work activities that are permitted for children ages 13 and 14. (11,32)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS)	Enforces and administers child labor laws through the labor inspectorate, in both the formal and informal sectors of the economy. The Child Labor Unit within MLSS coordinates and shares information with other agencies to address child labor issues. (7) Minister for Labor Karl Samuda represented Jamaica in ILO's International Year for the Elimination of Child Labor launch event, which included an online poster competition to raise awareness of child labor concerns. (1)
Child Protection and Family Services Agency (CPFSA)	Monitors and investigates suspected child labor violations and oversees efforts to address child labor. Housed within the Ministry of Education, Youth and Information. (19) Receives complaints of child abuse, child labor, child trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation of children through a hotline and refers suspected cases of child abuse to law enforcement. (7,19,33) During the reporting year, launched a new 211 hotline to replace the previous 888-PROTECT line for reporting child trafficking and abuse. (1) Also established an internal child trafficking technical advisory committee that oversaw the piloting and launch of the National Referral Mechanism on Child Trafficking (launched December 2021) and a screening tool, which includes agency-specific child trafficking indicators for identifying child trafficking victims locally, an intake and biodata form, and case management forms. Moreover, trained 83 members of its personnel, including Registration/Intake Officers, Investigators Officers, and Supervisors and launched a Trafficking in Persons Handbook designed to increase knowledge of trafficking in persons across ministries, departments, and agencies. (33)
Office of the Children's Advocate	Investigates reports of child abuse and partners with other agencies, including CPFSA and the police, to promote protection of children and address child labor. (7)
Jamaica Constabulary Force	Enforces criminal laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. Investigates, through the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit, cases of child trafficking, forced child labor, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities in which trafficking is involved. Through the Center for the Investigation of Sexual Offenses and Child Abuse, investigates cases of child and sexual offenses, and educates the public about sexual offenses against children. (7)
Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions	Prosecutes cases involving the worst forms of child labor. Protects and promotes human rights for all citizens. (34)
Office of the National Rapporteur on Trafficking in Persons	Monitors government efforts to protect human trafficking survivors, prosecute cases, and implement preventative measures. (11) As a commission of parliament, holds a unique position in analyzing regulations, observing compliance, and compiling data for official reports back to the legislative branch of the government. These reports are, in turn, considered by parliament for amendments or new bills. (1)
Ministry of Justice Victim Services Division	Provides emotional support, crisis management, and special intervention projects for children and adults. Assists child crime survivors through the Children in Court Program, which offers survivors access to social workers and counselors. (35)

In 2021, the Child Protection and Family Services Agency (CPFSA) identified 25 cases of suspected child trafficking and referred them to the Jamaica Constabulary Force for investigation. Of these cases, 14 were received through the child abuse hotline. (33)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Jamaica took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor and Social Security (MLSS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including lack of a mechanism to assess civil penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$3,144,000 (36)	$3,200,000 (1)

Labor inspectors engage in annual awareness raising sessions focused on child labor, human trafficking, and standard operating procedures. (36)

The number of labor inspectors is insufficient for the size of Jamaica's workforce, which includes approximately 1,263,000 workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Jamaica would need to employ 84 labor inspectors. (39) Inspectors are not allowed to enter and inspect private residences; however, labor inspectors may coordinate visits with social workers who are allowed to enter private residences and are trained to watch for indicators of child labor. (1) Inspectors do not have authority to assess penalties, but if a labor inspector observes a suspected child labor violation during an inspection, the case is referred to the MLSS Child Labor Unit for investigation and possible referral for legal action through the courts. Fines and penalties can be levied or collected upon summary conviction in court. (1,5,22,38)

Though there are reports of increased prevalence of child labor during the reporting period, inspectors identified no child labor violations. The MLSS developed a new General Compliance Inspection Form during the reporting period to enable greater volume and standardization of inspections, which will be implemented in 2022. (1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, the government's criminal law enforcement agencies appeared to function adequately in addressing child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (5,36)	Yes (1)

During the reporting period, the Child Protection Compact Partnership (CPC Partnership), USDOS, and Jamaica's Ministry of National Security jointly launched Jamaica's first child-friendly space in Falmouth, which focuses on delivering a multidisciplinary and trauma-informed response, including examination, interviews and referrals for appropriate care and services. The space aims to serve children who are removed from human trafficking (domestic servitude, commercial sexual exploitation, forced labor and forced illicit activity by gangs)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

or other serious crimes. (33) Additionally, the government reported that 75 percent of criminal investigators assigned to the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Unit (A-TIP) of the Jamaica Constabulary Force received virtual training on child labor and child trafficking. (1)

In 2021, A-TIP conducted 25 investigations in response to reports of potential child trafficking, as well as 36 proactive surveillance operations of high-risk locations (truck stops, construction sites, and resorts) for trafficking or exploitation of children. (1,33) Jamaica Constabulary Force's Counter Terrorism and Organized Crime Investigations Branch also investigated eight reports of commercial sexual exploitation of children. (1) During the reporting period, the government identified six children as victims of sex trafficking, after which it provided them services. (33) Moreover, the government prosecuted four individuals in three cases under the Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Act in 2021, which resulted in two convictions. In particular, the government entered into a plea agreement with two defendants from a 2010 child sex trafficking case, allowing two nightclub owners to pay fines of $13,132 and $5,252, respectively, in lieu of prison time for forcing a girl they brought from Guyana to dance and have sex with patrons in their facility. (33)

Jamaica's National Rapporteur on Trafficking in Persons and Child Advocate reported that it had discovered anecdotal evidence suggesting complicity of police officers in sexual exploitation rings operating under the guise of massage parlors. The government did not investigate these allegations during the reporting period. (33)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including clarity of institutional mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
MLSS Program for the Elimination of Child Labor	Coordinates the government's child labor policies and programs and identifies gaps in legislation across ministries. Collaborates with other ministries and agencies, such as the Ministry of Education, Youth and Information, CPFSA, the Ministry of Justice's National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons (NATFATIP), and the Ministry of National Security, to address gaps in legislation. (36,40) During the reporting period, supported a data visualization and vulnerability mapping project using the ILO's Child Labor Risk Identification model. (37)
National Task Force Against Trafficking in Persons (NATFATIP)	Facilitates information exchanges between government agencies and external stakeholders and creates momentum for counter-trafficking efforts. Led by the Ministry of National Security, includes ministries and agencies across the government. (7,41) Oversees implementation of the country's National Plan of Action to Combat Human Trafficking. (33) Meets regularly with the Jamaica Constabulary Force, the Director of Public Prosecutions, and relevant ministries. (6,7) With the support of the U.S.-Jamaica Child Protection Compact, developed a child trafficking screening toolkit, a set of screening tools to outline behavioral, situational, and health factors that indicate a child is being exploited. (40) Held bi-monthly coordination sessions virtually during 2021. (33) Various agencies that are members of NATFATIP executed an MOU designed to provide more a comprehensive system to regularly share data among stakeholders. (1) During the reporting period, held public awareness campaigns, which included sensitization trainings at local high schools, and a weekly public service announcement on reporting human trafficking. In addition, increased partnership with the Radio Jamaica Cross Country Invasion program by conducting radio and television interviews, distributing materials at broadcast locations and publishing in newspapers. (33)
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Provides leadership, shares information, and guides the development of policies and programs geared toward eliminating the worst forms of child labor, including the National Plan of Action. (36,37,42) The committee was functioning during 2021, but no activities were reported. (37)

During the reporting period, 150 Justices of the Peace from Manchester and St. Andrew parishes were trained on how to identify and report suspected cases of human trafficking, including child trafficking and child labor violations. (1)

Although the Child Protection and Family Services Agency has assumed coordinating functions between various agencies charged with protecting children, the organization is not mandated or fully resourced to play this role. Jamaica lacks an effective central agency to coordinate efforts to address the challenges posed by child labor, human trafficking, and other child-related issues. (11)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan of Action for Combatting Trafficking in Persons (2018–2021)	Identifies objectives, actions, and responsible agencies to prevent and eliminate trafficking in persons, including commercial sexual exploitation of children and forced child labor, through prevention, protection, prosecution, and partnerships. (19,43) During the reporting period, conducted 9 sensitization sessions and 10 outreach workshops. Sessions were provided for MLSS officials, union representatives, and other relevant stakeholders, as well as the broader community in Kingston to sensitize members of the public to child labor and trafficking in persons concerns. (1) Sessions included discussions of international child labor standards and conventions, trafficking in persons, child labor statistics in Jamaica, and the role of government agencies in addressing child trafficking and labor violations. (1)
National Plan of Action for an Integrated Response to Children and Violence (NPACV)	Provides a coordinated and structured approach to addressing the key issues and challenges pertaining to children as victims, perpetrators, and witnesses of acts of violence and abuse. (33) Outlines a range of strategies and programs that will be implemented over 5 years across multiple stages in a child's life. The NPACV is implemented, monitored, and evaluated by an Inter-Sectoral Committee on Children and Violence. (5) During the reporting period, the plan was revised. (33)

The Ministry of National Security sponsored and hosted public awareness campaigns, including virtual discussions on child labor with the Jamaica Constabulary Force and MLSS, radio conversations on child protection during the pandemic, and social media discussions on how to safeguard children against human trafficking with CPFSA. The Ministry of National Security also conducted trainings on identifying potential survivors of trafficking in persons and available referral mechanisms for approximately 60 customs officers. (1)

During the reporting period, the government hired consultants to create vulnerability maps for various parishes and constituencies using the ILO's Child Labor Risk Identification model. The government intends to use this information to proactively identify and provide services to children and families at risk of becoming victims of trafficking in persons. (1)

While there are some policies in place, research indicates that existing policies do not fully address the scope and magnitude of the problem, including the worst forms of child labor. (1, 11)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Program for Advancement through Health and Education†	Government of Jamaica and World Bank-funded conditional cash transfer program launched in 2002 that helps reduce child labor by requiring participants to attend school at least 85 percent of the academic days in a month. (1,7,44,45) Expanded funding during the reporting period to $34 million and provided support to about 200,000 children during the reporting period. (1) Provided nutritional support for children who previously received subsidized meals at school and provided back-to-school stipends for school-aged children beginning in September 2021. (1)
Trafficking in Persons Club in School Program†	Launched by NATFATIP in October 2019 and implemented by the Ministry of National Security, the program is designed to provide information, exposure, and knowledge to students and teachers regarding child trafficking to help protect them from becoming victims. (1,7) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Trafficking in Persons Club in School Program during the reporting period. (1)

Program	Description
Regional Initiative Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor (2022–2025)	Developed as an intergovernmental cooperation platform made up of 30 countries, with active participation of employers' and workers' organizations. (46) Seeks to declare Latin America and the Caribbean as the first developing region free of child labor by 2025. (47) Drawing on the knowledge, experience, and accumulated capacity of key public and private actors, aims to address the persistence of child work. During the reporting period, reestablished multi-sectoral, national steering committee and continued to pursue training and capacity building actions to augment the coordinated planning and practical interventions to address the social and economic root causes of child labor. (47)
U.S.-Jamaica Child Protection Compact Partnership (CPC Partnership) (2018–2022)	Jointly developed 4-year plan partially funded by the U.S. Government to enhance the efforts of the Government of Jamaica to address child trafficking. Commits Jamaica to providing staff and resources to fulfill the project's objectives. (15) Formally launched in 2019 with implementing partners Warnath, Winrock, IOM, and Encompass, and began activities and training across the island. (7) Launched a handbook on human trafficking in December 2021 that explains human trafficking, discusses indicators and red flags, and provides a screening tool for use by ministries or other stakeholders. (1) Funding increased through July 2023. (47)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (48-50)

The Ministry of National Security hosted activities during World Day Against Trafficking in Persons that included sensitization sessions with the Jamaica Hotel and Tourist Association, radio and television interviews, and a virtual town hall that was streamed on social media platforms. (33)

During the reporting period, CPFSA finalized a Study of Children Living and Working on the Streets of Jamaica, which was produced as part of the USDOL-funded CLEAR II initiative. (1) The Ministry of Education, Youth and Information also signed an MOU with the IOM to support a study on the prevalence of child trafficking in Jamaica, conducted under the CPC Partnership. (33)

The National Children's Registry hotline received approximately 4,700 calls during the reporting period, 329 of which were specifically related to child labor. The registry referred 366 reports of potential child labor violations to CPFSA for further investigation. (1)

Although Jamaica funds education-related social programs, current resources are insufficient, and social programs do not fully address the scope and magnitude of the problem, including the worst forms of child labor. (11) Research found no evidence of programs targeting children working in agriculture, street work, commercial sexual exploitation, and other worst forms of child labor.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Jamaica (Table 11).

In 2021, Jordan made significant advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government enacted several amendments to the Law on the Prevention of Human Trafficking, including adding organized begging to the categories of trafficking crimes, and launched a new website for the public to submit labor complaints, which includes a dedicated channel for child soldiers. The government also amended the National Framework to Combat Child Labor to reflect the Ministry of Social Development's responsibility to protect working children as specified in Juvenile Law No. 32 of 2014. Additionally, it established a new program—Addressing the Worst Forms of Child Labor in the Agriculture Sector—that aims to reduce child labor in agriculture in rural and remote parts of Mafraq and the Jordan Valley. Moreover, the government formed an interagency committee to update the National Strategy to Combat Child Labor; the committee met six times and agreed on a draft updated strategy. However, children in Jordan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Moreover, Syrian children still face barriers to accessing education due to socioeconomic pressures, bullying, and the costs associated with transportation and supplies, among other issues. In addition, the scope of government programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of child labor, including in construction and street vending.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Jordan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-8) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (9,10) Based on the 2016 National Child Labor Survey, approximately 70,000 children ages 5 to 17 are engaged in child labor; most commonly in agriculture and retail trade. Approximately 80 percent of child laborers are Jordanian and about 15 percent are Syrian. (9) Boys constitute nearly 90 percent of those involved in child labor. (9) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Jordan.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	1.0 (33,182)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.8

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2021, child labor in Jordan continued to increase and COVID-19 pandemic-related barriers to education have persisted. (23,26,29) While the government created distance-learning tools for students to continue their education from home, such as an online education portal and educational television channels, a lack of access to the Internet and devices prevented many students from taking advantage of these resources during school shutdowns. (26,29) The learning loss associated with school closures and insufficient online learning made children more likely to drop out, increasing their vulnerability to child labor and other forms of exploitation. (29) Worsening living situations and lack of access to education led to increases in child labor, including in hazardous tasks such as collecting and processing scrap metal. (23) Additionally, an influx of students switching from private schools to public schools exacerbated capacity problems in public schools. (8)

Non-Jordanian children, including Syrian refugees and refugees from other countries including Iraq, Yemen, Sudan, and Somalia face higher barriers to education than Jordanians. (30) In addition, children of Jordanian mothers and non-Jordanian fathers and non-Jordanian children not belonging to refugee groups lack access to public education. (26) While Syrian children are granted access to Jordanian public schools, UNICEF also notes that Syrian refugee children drop out of school at a higher rate than Jordanian children do. (30) These children face barriers to education, including bullying and harassment, and the costs of transportation, uniforms, and school materials. In addition, they are often unprepared for their appropriate grade level because of interruptions in their early years of schooling. (2,8,10,23,31,32) Sources indicate that, rather than attending school, Syrian refugee children are sometimes forced to work alongside their families in agriculture and the services industries, as well as being forced to peddle goods and beg. (2,3,15)

In 2021, Jordan waived a requirement for identity documentation to expand access to education for Syrian children for the 2021–2022 school year. (33) The government provided double-shift schools to address overcrowding. (2,8,29,34,35) At these double-shift schools, Jordanian children attended in the morning and Syrian children attended in the afternoon. However, Jordanian and Syrian children attending double-shift schools were vulnerable to child labor because the school hours are considerably shorter, and fewer school hours leave more time for work. (36)

Non-Syrian refugees in Jordan, primarily from Iraq, Yemen, Sudan, and Somalia, also faced barriers to education due to the lack of identity documentation. (26)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Jordan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Jordan's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Article 73 of the Labor Code (37)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 74 of the Labor Code; Article 2 of the Ministerial Order of 2011 (37,38)

Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Article 141 of the Penal Code (40)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Articles 7(a.2) and 10(b) of the Education Act (45)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 10(a) of the Education Act; Article 20 of the Constitution (45,46)

In 2021, the government enacted several amendments to its anti-trafficking law, including adding organized begging to the types of trafficking crimes. The new law also increases penalties for trafficking crimes, includes a directive to name special trafficking prosecutors and judges, and guarantees victims' rights including temporary residence in Jordan and suitable housing, legal aid and translation services, and compensation for "material and moral harm." (47) At the close of the reporting period, the government was still drafting regulations for the implementation of the new trafficking law amendments. (27)

Also in 2021, the government issued the Agricultural Workers Regulation No. 19, which includes an article prohibiting the employment of children under the age of 16 in the agriculture sector and prohibiting the employment of children under the age of 18 in hazardous tasks in the agriculture sector. It also issued corresponding instructions for labor inspection in the agricultural sector. (8)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL), Central Inspection Directorate	Enforces labor laws, including those on child labor. Identifies cases of child labor through worksite inspections and refers cases to the relevant services. Registers instances of child labor in a National Child Labor Database, which allows ministries to monitor and track children as they are identified and referred to services. (48) Maintains a hotline, website, and mobile app to receive labor-related complaints, including complaints of child labor. (21,26) The hotline has operators during office hours, although operators who speak foreign languages were not always available. The hotline has an automated message recording after 3 p.m. (49,50) The phone number is difficult to locate and, based on available information, operators rarely responded to voicemails left after working hours. (49,50) In 2021, MOL launched a new website to submit labor complaints, www.hemayah.jo , which includes a dedicated channel for child labor. The platform received 101 child labor complaints during the reporting period, of which only 4 were unresolved. (8,51)
MOL Child Labor Section	Coordinates government campaigns against child labor; conducts training, and raises awareness about child labor issues. (16) Manages the Child Labor Monitoring System, a case management tool that helps coordinate efforts by relevant government agencies and civil society organizations to ensure that children are removed from child labor and provided with critical social and educational services. (2)
Public Security Directorate, Criminal Investigation Unit	Investigates and prosecutes violations of the Penal Code, including allegations of the worst forms of child labor. Operates a section to combat human trafficking. (21,52)
Joint Anti-Trafficking Unit of MOL and the Public Security Directorate	Investigates cases of human trafficking and forced labor; refers cases for prosecution, and coordinates with foreign embassies to identify victims of human trafficking and, when needed, to repatriate foreign workers. (2)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Jordan took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$353,000 (26)	$353,107 (8)

When a labor inspector identifies a child laborer, the inspector issues a warning, may issue a fine, and requires the employer to send the child home while the inspector is still present. (36) The inspector also enters the child's information into the child labor database. (26) A warning requires the employer to sign a pledge declaring that they will cease employing children. Without the pledge, MOL can close the business. The information about the child is then shared with the Ministry of Social Development (MOSD), which contacts the family to identify the appropriate social services needed. (53) If a child labor violation is identified, the labor inspector conducts unannounced follow-up inspections at the worksite to ensure compliance. (36) MOL and MOSD may also conduct a joint visit. (26) Jordanian children identified during labor inspections are referred to the Child Labor Unit of MOSD, and those suspected of being trafficked are referred to the Counter Trafficking Unit for criminal investigation. (26,36,54) During the reporting period, 268 children were removed from the labor market and received social services, including education. (8) MOSD additionally referred 1,000 children to social services as part of its anti-vagrancy campaign. (27)

In 2021, MOL conducted 71,686 inspections, 25,338 of which focused on child labor. (8) However, the high number of inspections per inspector raises concerns that inspectors may not have the time to adequately identify and remediate labor law violations. In addition, MOL reported that inspections in the agricultural sector were insufficient to meet the demands of Agricultural Workers Bylaw No. 19. (8) Moreover, sources report that the inspectorate has insufficient financial resources to effectively fulfill its mandate. (8)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Jordan's workforce, which includes over 2.9 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Jordan would need to employ roughly 196 labor inspectors. (8,55,56)

The government did not provide information on the number of child labor penalties that were collected for inclusion in this report.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Jordan took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of information on its criminal law enforcement efforts.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (26)	Unknown
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	Yes (27)

In 2021, Jordanian criminal law enforcement agencies took action to combat forced begging following on the anti-vagrancy campaign launched in 2020. (19,57) The Judicial Council appointed 41 specialized trafficking judges and prosecutors ensuring that all 12 governorates had at least one specialized judge and prosecutor. (27) In September 2021, three girls found begging were referred to social services as potential trafficking victims. (58) Later in the month, the MOSD announced that the father, mother, and uncle of the three girls had been charged with human trafficking under the newly amended anti-trafficking law. (57) However, a trial judge subsequently decided that a non-trafficking begging charge was more appropriate, and, as a result, the case never reached a specialized trafficking judge. (27,59) Sources indicate that the forthcoming regulations clarifying the amendments to the anti-trafficking law could lead to more trafficking prosecutions. (27)

SIGNIFICANT ADVANCEMENT

The government did not provide complete information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efforts to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee on Child Labor	Formulates new policies, amends legislation as necessary, and oversees the implementation of child labor policies, including the National Framework to Combat Child Labor. Led by MOL, members include three other ministries, plus international and civil society organizations. (60) The National Committee on Child Labor did not meet during the reporting period and has been inactive for several years. (61)
National Committee to Combat Trafficking (NCCT)	Coordinates government efforts to combat human trafficking. Chaired by the Ministry of Justice; other members include representatives from 10 state agencies, including the Counter Trafficking Unit (CTU), which is in charge of human trafficking investigations. (62) CTU is operated jointly by the Public Security Directorate and MOL. (49) In 2021, NCCT met five times and members participated in several conferences and trainings. (27) In addition, NCCT began publishing quarterly reports online to increase transparency. (27)

In 2021, the government formed an ad hoc interagency committee to update the National Strategy to Combat Child Labor. The committee met six times and agreed on a draft updated strategy, and continued working into 2022. (8)

Although Jordan has a National Committee for the Prevention of Human Trafficking to coordinate efforts to address trafficking in persons, it does not have functioning coordinating mechanisms to address other forms of child labor, including street and farm work. (63)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Framework to Combat Child Labor	Outlines the roles and responsibilities of key government agencies, including the Ministries of Education, Labor, and Social Development; NGOs; and other stakeholders involved in identifying and responding to cases of child labor. Based on the Framework, MOL inspectors monitor child labor and refer cases to the Ministry of Social Development (MOSD) and the Ministry of Education for the provision of services. (64) In 2021, the framework was amended to reflect the MOSD's responsibility to protect children who work as specified in Juvenile Law No. 32 of 2014. (8) MOSD completed a draft manual on children working in street work and begging and sent it to the Prime Minister's office for review. (8)
Jordan Response Plan for the Syria Crisis (2018–2022)	Integrates a refugee-oriented humanitarian response with a strategic plan for increasing the resilience of local communities. The plan has a particular focus on economic strengthening, education, and social protection. (65) In 2021, the government updated the response plan, extending it to 2022, and continued to offer double-shifted schools for Syrian refugee children. (15,26)
Plan of Action to Eliminate Child Labor in Tourism in Petra	Employs counselors to respond to children at risk of truancy, raise children's awareness of the hazards of child labor and the significance of education, incorporate child labor prevention strategies into mainstream programs for legally employed children ages 16 and older, and inform students about high-quality employment in the tourism sector. (66) The government has yet to implement the plan since passing it in 2015.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of services to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
MOSD Child Labor Unit†	Provides support to children engaged in child labor, returns them to school, and provides services to their families; provides vocational training for youth; organizes training on child labor for families; and maintains the website of the National Child Labor Database. (67) Provides services to children engaged in child begging through centers in Madaba and Deleil (Zarqa). (50) Active in 2021. (27)
Addressing the Worst Forms of Child Labor in the Agriculture Sector*†	Aims to reduce child labor in the agriculture sector, taking into consideration vulnerabilities of children and their families, with field visits by joint teams of MOL inspectors and behavior monitors from MOSD and the Family Healthcare Institute of the Noor Al Hussein Foundation. (51) Works in informal tented settlement communities in rural and remote parts of Mafraq and the Jordan Valley that have not received child labor protection support. (8) Established in 2021. (8)
Program to End the Worst Forms of Child Labor in Zarqa and Amman	Funded by UNICEF, implemented by the Rowad al Khair Society and with the participation of MOL, this program aims to identify 400 of the most vulnerable children in Zarqa and Amman to receive psychosocial support, access to education, and other training to reduce the number of children subjected to the worst forms of child labor. Launched in 2020. (68)
National Aid Fund†	Overseen by MOSD, the Fund pays families through a conditional cash transfer program to withdraw their child from the labor market and re-enroll them in school. (21)
Non-Formal Education Centers	Funded by USAID and UNICEF and operated by the Ministry of Education and local NGO Questscope, these 40 centers throughout the country seek to bring school dropouts, including those engaged in or at risk of child labor, back into the educational system. Children attend classes 3 hours a day in a flexible learning environment, with class sizes of around 20 students and specially trained teachers. (36,69) Targets children ages 13 and older who have been out of school for 3 years and are ineligible to enroll in public schools. (70) Upon completion of the curriculum, students receive a certificate indicating the equivalency of grade 10 education. (69)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Jordan.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (21,26,73,74)

Although Jordan has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs does not fully address the extent of the problem, including child labor in construction and street vending.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Jordan (Table 11).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2021, Kazakhstan made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government approved dedicated funding for agencies to address the trafficking of children, increased penalties for sex crimes against children, and included child labor identifiers on labor inspection checklists. In addition, it adopted a new national action plan to combat trafficking in persons for 2021–2023 and published a number of reports on current action plans to address human trafficking and child labor. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Kazakhstan is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it implemented a law that delays advancement to eliminate child labor. On December 30, 2021, the President of Kazakhstan signed a law significantly restricting the circumstances under which unannounced inspections can be performed. The new law, which will come into effect on January 1, 2023, codifies and expands the government's existing practice since January 2020. Under the newly revised Entrepreneurial Code, unannounced inspections will be prohibited in all cases except in the presence of compelling grounds and supporting evidence enclosed to such a complaint, or if an inspection is mandated by judicial or tax authorities. The lack of unannounced inspections may leave potential violations of child labor laws and other labor abuses undetected in workplaces. Children in Kazakhstan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in markets. The government lacks current, comprehensive, and detailed research on child labor, including in cotton production. In addition, labor inspections of small enterprises are permitted only in cases that pose a mass threat to life and health, law and social order, or national security.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Kazakhstan are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in markets. (1-3) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Kazakhstan.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.2 (79,690)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	90.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	3.6

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

There is no current and comprehensive research on child labor in Kazakhstan that can provide details about the number of children working in different sectors (including in construction, services, or the cultivation of cotton or other forms of agriculture), the nature of their work, or the hazards involved. (2)

Migrant children from the Kyrgyz Republic, some of whom may be unaccompanied, are reported to engage in work in Kazakhstan. (6) Working migrant children are often unable to work legally, limiting their entitlement to work protections. Although migrant children who are above the minimum working age theoretically have the right to a legal work permit, in practice, many are unable to obtain such a permit because they do not list "work" as their purpose for visiting the country when entering Kazakhstan. (6,15) Fear, corruption, and discrimination against migrants can also prevent migrant children from the Kyrgyz Republic from obtaining legal work permits. Kyrgyzstani migrant children over age 16 who are in irregular migration status are vulnerable to administrative fines, arrest, and detention with adults. (6)

The government has continued its efforts to repatriate and reintegrate Kazakhstani children from conflict zones in Syria and Iraq. Seven children, who had been living with male relatives or other adults who were participating in armed conflict in Syria, were repatriated and provided with rehabilitation services in February 2021. (3)

Migration authorities sometimes register migrant children under age 16 as unnamed family members, rather than under their own names, which prevents them from receiving Kazakhstani identification documents. (16,17) Some of these undocumented migrant children fall victim to forced child labor and commercial sexual exploitation in Kazakhstan. (3,6,7) Although Kazakhstan guarantees free education regardless of migration status, migrant children face barriers to accessing education. Some school officials refuse to enroll or award diplomas to students who lack Kazakhstani identification documents, and many parents of undocumented children lack awareness of their right to appeal such decisions to regional education officials. (1,6,16) Landlords often do not register migrant tenants, which prevents migrant children from enrolling in local schools. (17) In 2021, the COVID-19 pandemic further exacerbated barriers to migrant and other vulnerable children's education. Reports indicate that some migrants in Kazakhstan who were awaiting return to their home countries did not enroll their children in school. (1,2) In addition, limited access to internet and other infrastructure impeded the ability of migrant, refugee, and internally displaced children to access distance learning and education resources while in-person schooling was suspended. (1)

Children with disabilities in Kazakhstan face challenges accessing education due to inaccessible school buildings, a lack of specialists able to provide inclusive education services, and official disability evaluations that render children eligible for at-home education only or ineligible for education entirely. (17,18) Children with disabilities who live in specialized, closed-care institutions may be compelled to assist caregivers in feeding, changing diapers, bathing, and dressing younger children. (13) Disabled children who are unable to access mainstream or inclusive education are at greater risk of being sent to such state institutions. (18)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Kazakhstan has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Kazakhstan's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

‡ Age calculated based on available information (25,26)

In 2021, Law No. 393-VI entered into force, which amended the criminal code to increase penalties for sexual offenses against minors, including the involvement of children into commercial sexual exploitation by means of coercion and the production or distribution of child pornography. These offenses now carry increased prison terms, and those convicted are barred from the possibility of early release and precluded from working in jobs which involve contact with children. (19,27) On December 30, 2021, the President of Kazakhstan signed a law significantly restricting the circumstances under which unannounced inspections can be performed, which will come into effect on January 1, 2023. The revised Entrepreneurial Code will prohibit unannounced inspections in all cases except in the presence of compelling grounds and supporting evidence enclosed to such a complaint, or if an inspection is mandated by judicial or tax authorities. (28,29) These restrictions will severely impact the ability of the labor inspectorate to identify and prosecute child labor offenses.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The Labor Code's protections, including the minimum age for employment and prohibitions on hazardous work, do not meet international standards because they do not cover children without a written work contract. In addition, although Article 69 of the Labor Code establishes caps on the maximum number of hours children ages 14 to 16 or 16 to 18 may work in a week, the law does not determine the activities or conditions in which children may engage in light work. (15)

Article 134 of the Criminal Code of the Republic of Kazakhstan criminalizes involving a minor in prostitution, and Article 135 of the Criminal Code criminalizes trafficking of minors, including for the purpose of sexual exploitation. No law clearly criminalizes the users (clients) of prostitution involving children. (19) However, government officials report that any users identified in the course of a prostitution investigation involving minors will be charged under Article 122, which criminalizes adult sexual relations with persons under the age of 16. (30)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Social Protection (MLSP)	Enforces child labor laws and conducts labor inspections through the Ministry's Committee on Labor, Social Protection and Migration. Implements the special social service program that funds shelters for survivors of human trafficking, including child survivors. (1,2)
Ministry of Education and Science (MOES)	Coordinates child protection activities, including response to child labor complaints. (1,2) An official from the regional-level Department of Education responds to reports of child labor and determines whether law enforcement should investigate the case. (31) If the case is in agriculture, local officials meet with parents and school officials to reinforce that children should be in school during the academic year. The Ministry's Center for the Adaptation of Minors provides assistance to survivors of the worst forms of child labor and makes referrals to appropriate government services or NGOs for further assistance. (31)
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA)	Through the Anti-Trafficking Unit, identifies and carries out initial investigation of criminal cases of the worst forms of child labor and hazardous child labor. Engages in identification and protection of human trafficking victims, including child victims. (1,2)
Prosecutor General's Office	Provides oversight of police operations related to child labor crimes to ensure compliance with all relevant protocols and legal requirements. (1,2)
Child Protection Hotlines	Receive reports of illegal child labor. There are three hotlines: one run by the MOES Child Protection Committee, one run by the Ombudsman for Children's Rights, and one run by a local NGO. (8,27)

The Government of Kazakhstan maintains mobile squads in all regions of the country to monitor and respond to child labor violations. These squads consist of internal affairs officers, officials from local administrations, state labor inspectors, health professionals, youth workers, and psychologists. (32)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Kazakhstan took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection (MLSP) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including lack of an appropriate number of inspectors.

In 2021, the MLSP conducted periodic recertification of labor inspectors, requiring competence in all facets of labor inspection, including child labor. Labor inspectors also participated in training organized by international donors. (1) Article 143, which regulates labor inspection checklists, was amended in December 2021 to include identifiers for forced and child labor. (27) However, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Kazakhstan's workforce, which includes more than 9.18 million workers. (35) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 20,000 workers in transitional economies, Kazakhstan would need to employ about 459 labor inspectors. (36,37)

A moratorium on labor inspections in small enterprises remained in effect during the reporting period. (1) Under this moratorium, an inspection can only occur at a small enterprise in cases that pose a mass threat to life and health, law and social order, or national security. (38,39) Small enterprises include businesses with fewer than 100 employees and average revenue below a government-determined threshold. (34) Under the newly revised Entrepreneurial Code, beginning in 2023, all small businesses will be exempt from inspections in their first 3 years after registration. (29,34)

Moreover, additional restrictions will come into force in 2023 that prohibit unannounced inspections unless suspected violations are supported by compelling evidence or the inspection is mandated by judicial or tax authorities. (29) This law officially codifies what has been standard practice since 2020, and is in part a response to complaints from business owners that labor inspectors use unannounced inspections as a pretext to solicit bribes. (30) Under current law, labor inspectors generally must notify entities at least 1 full day prior to a site visit or inspection unless the Entrepreneurial Code provides for an exception to this notice requirement. (1,34) Labor inspectors from the MLSP are empowered to conduct unplanned inspections on the basis of complaints, which are only considered valid if they are not anonymous. These notice requirements limit inspectors' ability to check that working conditions comply with national labor laws, including those related to child labor. (2,34) Labor inspectors are also currently authorized to conduct unannounced inspections of businesses on the basis of requests from law enforcement agencies, in response to complaints related to certain extreme health and safety hazards, and in cases in which the worksite is in a remote location. (1,2,34) In addition, labor inspectors can conduct routine inspections on the basis of risk assessment reports. (1,34)

The government also works with NGOs to conduct raids to detect child labor violations during annual, interministerial campaigns to raise awareness about, detect, and address incidences of child labor. These campaigns are widely publicized, limited in duration, and occur at approximately the same time each year. (1,2) As a result, the raids conducted during these campaigns may fail to adequately detect child labor in seasonal agriculture or at businesses that conceal violations in anticipation of these high-profile campaigns. There is also no indication of any inspections or raids specifically targeted at agriculture, which remains a high-risk sector for child labor. (6) From June 1 to 12, 2021, the Ministry of Education and Science (MOES) cooperated with other government agencies and NGOs to conduct more than 6,500 raids at more than 9,500 sites to detect child labor as part of the government's annual "Twelve Days Against Child Labor" campaign. (1,27) Raids were targeted at locations with a high risk for child labor, including markets, gas stations, and construction sites. As a result of these checks, 14 children were found to be engaged in child labor in construction and in restaurants, and their employers were fined for violations of labor legislation. (1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Kazakhstan took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal law enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2021, the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Training Center at the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA) Legal Academy in Karaganda trained 168 police officers on identification of victims of human trafficking. Of those, 68 were from juvenile police units specifically trained on countering the trafficking of minors into the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and use in illicit activities. (1) The MOIA employs 42 operational officers who work specifically on trafficking in persons, including cases involving minors. However, reports indicated that the number of officers may be insufficient to adequately enforce criminal prohibitions against the worst forms of child labor in Kazakhstan. (2)

During the reporting period, police identified and initiated prosecution of two cases of minors being coerced into commercial sexual exploitation, for which one individual was sentenced to 3.6 years in prison. Additionally, three individuals were sentenced to no fewer than 5 years in prison for trafficking minors into commercial sexual exploitation in prosecutions that were initiated in previous years. (27) During 4 anti-trafficking operations throughout the year, police uncovered an additional 10 cases of coercing minors into commercial sexual exploitation. (27) While there were no reports of minors being used for the production or trafficking of drugs, 13 minors between the ages of 16 and 17 were detained in 2021 for the sale and possession of drugs. (1)

All children identified in the worst forms of child labor in 2021 were removed from the exploitative situations and referred to NGOs and government-run shelters for social services and other assistance. The government also approved designated funding for government agencies to eliminate child trafficking. (1)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Coordination Council on Combating the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Implements the National Action Plan (NAP) for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor 2020–2022. (40) In May 2021, the Council met to discuss implementation of NAP and developed recommendations for improving prevention efforts. In February, the Council also published a report on the results of implementation activities under NAP in 2020. (1)
Interagency Trafficking in Persons Working Group	Coordinates efforts to eliminate human trafficking and recommends improvements to anti-human trafficking legislation, prevention strategies, protection of survivors, and prosecution of offenders. (41) Chaired by MOIA and MLSP on a 2-year rotational basis, its members include state bodies, international organizations, and NGOs. (41) In 2021, the working group met three times, during which it adopted a new NAP on trafficking in persons for 2021–2023 and discussed media monitoring to identify trafficking, including child pornography. (1,27)
Committee for the Protection of Children's Rights	Works to protect children from exploitation. Operates under MOES at province-level departments of education. (8) In 2021, the Committee for the Protection of Children's Rights published a report on the status of children's rights in Kazakhstan during the previous year. (1,42)
The Institute of the Ombudsperson for Children's Rights	Monitors observance of the rights of children. Receives and responds to complaints about violations of children's rights and drafts annual reports on children's rights. (1,43) In 2021, the agency received and responded to 334 complaints about violations of children's rights. (1)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2020–2022)	Addresses three priority areas, including (a) the creation of policies and laws to eliminate the worst forms of child labor; (b) the creation of programs to monitor vulnerable communities and sectors with the highest risk of child labor; and provide services to children who have been exploited in child labor; and (c) raising awareness about the worst forms of child labor. (40) During the reporting period, the government published a report on activities undertaken in 2020 to implement the National Action Plan. (1)
National Action Plan to Counter Trafficking in Persons (2021–2023)†	The Interagency Trafficking in Persons Working Group of MLSP adopted a new National Action Plan for 2021–2023 in February 2021. The new National Action Plan includes legislation improvements to provide shelter assistance to non-citizen survivors, align the legal definition of human trafficking with international standards, and improve identification procedures for front-line officials. (1) Some of the planned activities specifically target the worst forms of child labor, including efforts to prevent forced child labor, including the exploitation of child labor on cotton and tobacco fields and at construction sites; monitor and exchange data between competent agencies on advertisements of human trafficking and child pornography; and conduct human trafficking prevention and awareness campaigns for children. (1)

† Program was adopted during the reporting period.

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (2,44)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Juvenile Care Centers†	MOES-run centers for minors located throughout Kazakhstan. Provide temporary shelter and assistance to vulnerable children, including child survivors of the worst forms of child labor, and street children. (2,41) Research was unable to determine whether the centers were active during the reporting period.
Shelters for Trafficking Victims†	Funded by the government and operated by NGOs, provide legal, psychological, medical, and educational services to survivors of human trafficking, including minors, in seven provinces and two cities, including Almaty. (41,45) In 2021, the government provided funding for nine shelters for survivors of human trafficking and forced labor, and passed legislation to make shelter services available to non-citizens. (1)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT REGRESSION IN LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Program	Description
Awareness-Raising Campaigns†	Raise public awareness on child labor issues, including the annual "Twelve Days Against Child Labor" campaign, which in 2021 included thousands of social media posts and online events to raise awareness about child labor and child assistance hotlines. (1,2)
Camps for School-aged Children†	Funded by the Government of Kazakhstan, camps provide services for children during school breaks across 13,000 recreational organizations. In 2021, the program received a budget of $8.8 million and reportedly benefited 2 million children, including 500,000 vulnerable children. (1)

† Program is funded by the Government of Kazakhstan.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (46)

The government continued to take steps to identify and provide assistance to vulnerable children as a part of its 2020–2023 Roadmap to Strengthen the Protection of the Rights of Children, Counter Domestic Violence and Address Suicide among Adolescents. The MOES Committee for Children's Rights initiated changes to laws and regulations related to inclusive education, social protection of vulnerable of children, and strengthening the institution of the family. (1) More than 7,000 teachers and psychologists assisted around 2 million children and their parents and helped to resolve 150,000 crisis situations. (1)

The government also hosted a nationwide series of events dedicated to the World Children's Day and the 30th anniversary of the Independence of Kazakhstan in October and November 2021. The events focused on reaching vulnerable children, including orphans, children left without parental care due to labor migration, and children with special educational needs. (1)

Although the Government of Kazakhstan implemented programs in 2021 to protect vulnerable children and raise awareness about child labor, research found no evidence that it has carried out programs to assist children engaged in child labor in agriculture or service sectors.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2021, Kenya made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Local child labor officers in Nairobi facilitated trainings for police officers and users of the court system related to key laws protecting children from the worst forms of child labor. In addition, the government published updated information on child labor prevalence in Kenya. However, Kenya is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued to implement a practice that delays advancement to eliminate child labor. Elements within the Kenyan Defense Forces provided various forms of in-kind support—including harboring, training, intelligence-gathering, and payment of salaries—to a Somali federal member state that is strongly implicated in the recruitment and use of child soldiers. Children in Kenya are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced domestic service. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Key coordinating committees related to elimination of child labor lack adequate resources to carry out their mandates and the labor inspectorate does not have sufficient financial and human resources, affecting its ability to ensure that child labor laws are enforced.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Kenya are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and forced domestic service. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (1,2) During the reporting period, the government published and validated analysis of its 2019 Household Budget Survey to generate up-to-date data on child labor in Kenya; according to the new data, agriculture and services are the sectors in which child labor most frequently occurs. (3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Kenya.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	11.6 (1,468,203)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	93.9
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	11.5
Primary Completion Rate (%)		99.7

	Forced labor in slaughterhouses, sand harvesting, begging, street vending, domestic work, herding livestock, fishing, and agricultural work (2,15,28,34,39,44-46)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Human traffickers exploit Kenyan children in forced labor, including in domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, both within and outside the country. (39,45,46) Both boys and girls are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation in tourism-heavy areas on the Kenyan coast, and in Nairobi and Kisumu. (35,36,39,47,48) A report by International Justice Mission and other NGOs observed that commercial sexual exploitation of children is often hidden, and is facilitated by hotel and lodge owners, bar owners, local tour guides, transportation providers, and sometimes young local women who act as recruiters for younger girls. (38) Commercial sexual exploitation of children also occurs in drug production sites, near gold mines, along major highways and resting stops, and in fishing areas on Lake Victoria and the Turkana region. (27,37-39,49) There has been an increase in children subjected to the worst forms of child labor in Kenya, resulting from school closures during the COVID-19 pandemic, particularly in commercial sexual exploitation, including online sexual exploitation, and forced begging. (15,22,31,39,50,51)

Traffickers exploit children from neighboring East African countries and South Sudan to forced labor in domestic work, slaughterhouses, agriculture, and in commercial sexual exploitation. (15,52) Children with LGBTQI+ identities, moreover, are vulnerable to sexual abuse and commercialized sexual exploitation. Refugee children who identify as LGBTQI+ are particularly vulnerable to these forms of exploitation. (39,48) Moreover, traffickers increasingly exploit children with disabilities from Tanzania and other neighboring countries in forced labor, including begging. (39)

Children work at informal gold mining sites in western Kenya, using pickaxes and other dangerous tools, working underground, and carrying heavy loads. (1,25,26,53) In some instances, children working at mining sites have been trapped in collapsed mines, suffocated, or exposed to mercury poisoning. (25-27) In addition, children working in domestic work are subjected to long work hours and physical and sexual abuse. (45) Research indicates rising cases of children working in the harvesting of sand, which sometimes involves exploitation under criminal syndicates. (15,23,24) Furthermore, children participate in the harvesting and processing of khat (miraa), an addictive stimulant. (1,10)

Local elements of the Kenyan Defense Forces (KDF) maintain ongoing support of Jubbaland Security Forces (JSF), a federal member state group in Somalia, that the UN and other organizations report as recruiting and using children in armed conflict. Such support has included training, provision of transportation (including armed vehicles), intelligence sharing, payment of salaries of JSF combatants, and allowing JSF regiments to garrison in northern Kenya, near the border with Somalia, during the early months of 2021. (54-57) The UN verified at least 21 separate cases of child soldiers within the ranks of the JSF, in addition to 165 cases of child soldier use and recruitment reported from 2016 to 2020. (58-60) Local NGOs and community leaders in both northern Kenya and Jubbaland have likewise observed recruitment by the JSF, sometimes even occurring on the Kenyan side of the border, with some KDF elements providing direct training to child recruits. (57,61) Research cannot identify any screening or mitigation procedures within the KDF to ensure that children recruited by the JSF and their respective units are not benefiting from Kenyan training and other forms of tactical support. Reports also indicate that criminals involved in terrorist organizations lure children in Kenya to Somalia for use in armed conflict. (39)

The Births and Deaths Registration Act requires birth registration; however, many children living in the country are not registered at birth. As a result, non-registered children have difficulty accessing services, including education. (62-64) Kenya law mandates free basic education and prohibits schools from charging tuition fees. (37,62,65) However, the cost of unofficial fees levied by local schools, and the cost of books and uniforms, prevents some children from attending school, particularly at the secondary level. (66-69) Long travel distances, teacher and staff shortages, and sexual abuse within schools further contribute to children in Kenya dropping out of school and becoming vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (16,70-73) In addition, children seeking asylum or of refugee status are often restricted to living in designated areas, such as the Kakuma and Dadaab refugee camps. (39,74) These camps have an insufficient number of schools and existing facilities lack sufficient teachers, textbooks, electricity, and latrines. (2,27,75,76) These conditions likely contribute to heightened vulnerabilities of refugee children to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking. (39,45,74) Moreover, although Kenya has a re-entry policy for girls who become pregnant to return to school after giving birth, in some cases school administrators continue to expel pregnant girls, increasing their vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor. (74,77) In early 2021, schools fully reopened, following closures in response to the pandemic. Research, however, indicates that many children, particularly girls, have not returned to school. (78) As of October 2021, nearly 1.8 million children in Kenya were not accounted for in the school system. (79)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Kenya has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

In 2000, Kenya signed, but has not yet acceded to, the UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography. However, during the reporting period, ratification of the Optional Protocol was formally introduced for consideration by the National Assembly, marking a significant step towards ratification. (15)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Kenya's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the gap between the compulsory education age and the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Section 56 of the Employment Act; Section 12 of the Employment (General) Rules; Section 10.4 of the Children Act (65,80,81)

* Country has no conscription (86)

Kenya permits light work activities for children ages 13 to 16, including agricultural and horticultural work not exceeding 2 hours, though it does not establish limits on the number of hours for other identified activities. (81) As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (62,80,81,87) Moreover, although the Basic Education Act establishes free basic education and stipulates that children should not be denied admission to school on account of not paying fees, the law does not meet international standards because it permits schools to levy tuition for children who reside in Kenya but do not have Kenyan citizenship. (62)

The government is currently undertaking a review of regulations identifying hazardous forms of work for children under age 18. The updated list intends to highlight emerging hazardous work conditions that affect children, especially as a result of the pandemic and other situational factors. (3)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Conducts labor inspections and enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor. (1) Directs activities to promote awareness and withdraw children from child labor through its Child Labor Division. (1,15,88)
National Police Service	Investigates and enforces laws related to the worst forms of child labor, in coordination with MOL and the Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions. (1) Includes the Anti-Human Trafficking and Child Protection Unit, which carries out investigations related to commercial sexual exploitation of children, child trafficking, and other worst forms of child labor. (2,16,89,90)
Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions	Enforces laws through the prosecution of criminal offenses, including labor-related offenses. The Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions directs the National Police Service to investigate cases. (1)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection was renamed to the Ministry of Labor (MOL). The State Department for Social Protection, which formerly fell under the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection, was moved to the Ministry of Public Service, Gender, Senior Citizen Affairs, and Special Programs, under the new name of State Department for Social Protection, Senior Citizen Affairs, and Special Programs. (15) The State Department for Social Protection, Senior Citizen Affairs, and Special Programs includes the Department of Children Services, which provides services to children in need of social protection, including responding to cases of child exploitation. (91)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Kenya took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

† Data are from July 1, 2019 to June 30, 2020.

‡ Data are from July 1, 2020 to June 30, 2021.

The government published limited information on labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. (94) The government reported that it had removed 2,793 children from child labor; however, research could not confirm that these interventions were in response to findings from labor inspections, as opposed to other government entities involved in child protection. (95) While the number of labor inspectors is unknown, according to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Kenya would need to employ roughly 1,314 labor inspectors as its workforce consists of over 19 million workers. (97,98) Insufficient human resources likely constrained the labor inspectorate's capacity to meet its inspection targets, and several counties had only one labor officer to handle all matters concerning employment. (97,99) The MOL hired 95 additional labor inspectors in 2021, nearing its 2021 hiring goal of 100 new inspectors. (92) The MOL's insufficient number of labor inspectors and inadequate financial resources likely hindered their capacity to enforce labor laws, including those related to child labor. (1,94)

A high-ranking municipal official in Nairobi admitted, during a televised interview in 2020, that he employed street children for work on road construction projects in Nairobi, including overnight work. (100) The incident generated public criticism and the MOL made an informal intervention, advising the official against any further similar activity; however, no formal remedial action was taken. (96)

During the reporting period, 17 labor officers participated in trainings, facilitated by the ILO, on concepts related to child labor and human trafficking. (3)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Kenya took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including lack of training.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (34)	Unknown (15)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (34)	N/A (15)

Number of Convictions	3 (2)	Unknown (15)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (2)	Yes (101,102)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (34)	Yes (15)

The government did not provide information regarding its training of new inspectors, the total number of violations related to the worst forms of child labor, and number of convictions for inclusion in this report. The government, however, increased the number of investigations and prosecutions related to the worst forms of child labor from the previous reporting period. (101) Also, in 2021, a court in Malindi sentenced a man to 30 years imprisonment for trafficking 7 Somali nationals, 5 of them children, from the Daddab refugee camp. (102)

A report by the National Council on the Administration of Justice (NCAJ) found that magistrates lacked specialized knowledge in children's laws, policies, and rights that relate to the worst forms of child labor, including the Sexual Offenses Act and the Children Act. (89) During the reporting period, the NCAJ held country-level trainings in Nairobi on issues related to commercial sexual exploitation, human trafficking, and other child labor issues, reaching 120 police officers and users of court systems. (15) Also, the ILO trained 18 police officers in supervisory roles on concepts related to child labor and forced labor. Following the training, the officers, in coordination with the MOL, implemented a rehabilitation campaign targeting street children in Nairobi, rescuing 200 children from the worst forms of child labor and referring them to rehabilitative services. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including inefficacy in accomplishing mandates.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Oversees efforts to prevent and eliminate child labor and comprises government agencies, private employers, and workers' organizations. Chaired by the Principal Secretary for Labor, with coordination duties performed by the MOL's Child Labor Division. (15) The technical team of the National Steering Committee on Child Labor engaged in planning meetings during the reporting period, but produced no tangible new deliverables. (92)
National Council for Children's Services	Coordinates government efforts on issues related to child rights and welfare, including child labor. Comprises a chairperson, appointed by the President, and council members drawn from ministries, departments, agencies, and civil society. (103,104) The National Council for Children's Services met during the reporting period to develop the National Care Reform Strategy for Children in Kenya (2022–2032) and to develop the National Plan of Action to Tackle Online Child Sexual Exploitation and Abuse in Kenya (2022–2026). (92)
Children Area Advisory Councils	Coordinate county-level activities to eliminate child labor and related labor abuses, including forced labor and human trafficking. (3,105) Include local labor officers and child protection officials that coordinate with civil society organizations and NGOs, workers unions, and private employers. (106) During the reporting period, to strengthen local coordination around child labor, the government began harmonizing child labor issues into the work of Children Area Advisory Councils, starting with Kajiado, Kwale, and Nairobi, by integrating previously separate county-level child labor councils as subcommittees. (3,106) The Nairobi County Child Labor Coordinators also conducted case management and referral guideline training for 64 children's officers, 70 police officers, and 31 court users' committees. (15)
Counter-Trafficking in Persons Advisory Committee	Coordinates the implementation of policies related to human trafficking and provides prevention and protection services to survivors under the Counter-Trafficking in Persons Act. Led by the Counter-Trafficking in Person's Secretariat under the Ministry of Public Service, Gender, Senior Citizens, and Special Programs, and includes human trafficking and child protection specialists from multiple government agencies and NGOs. (2) During the reporting period, the Counter-Trafficking in Persons Advisory Committee met quarterly, working on draft amendments to the Counter-Trafficking in Persons Act. (101) It also participated in the development of the National Plan of Action for Children in Kenya (2022–2027). (15)

Research indicates that a lack of sufficient funding likely inhibited coordinating bodies from meeting and undertaking activities according to their mandates. (1)

The Department of Children Services maintains a Child Protection Information Management System that collects, aggregates, and reports on child protection data, including child labor violations, to assist child protection officials in tracking and reporting on child protection activities. (16,74) In 2021, approximately 237 cases of child labor were reported in the Child Protection Information Management System. However, research could not determine the number of cases that resulted from findings from labor inspections. (107) Furthermore, the number of child labor cases reported through the Child Protection Information Management System is inconsistent with other government reporting citing 2,793 children removed from child labor during the 2020–2021 fiscal year. (15,95) Research indicates that this discrepancy is the result of gaps in coordination between the Department of Children Services, responsible for rehabilitation, and the Child Labor Unit at the MOL. In many cases, children in child labor are not referred to the Department of Child Services for rehabilitation, and these cases are often not reflected in the Child Protection Information Management System. (107)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Policy on the Elimination of Child Labor	Proposes strategies to prevent and eliminate child labor, including its worst forms, while providing support and rehabilitation for children removed from child labor. Includes measures to establish child labor-free zones, increase financial support for labor law enforcement, raise awareness, improve accessibility to education and social protection programs, and integrate child labor into corporate responsibility programs. (108) The government continued to support, but did not take measures to implement the National Policy on the Elimination of Child Labor during the reporting period. (92)

Policy	Description
National Plan of Action for Children in Kenya (2015–2022)	Provides an operational framework for coordination, planning, implementing, and monitoring programs for children's welfare. Outlines programs, awareness-raising activities, and research with the goal of reducing child labor and other child exploitation cases by 50 percent by 2022. Other areas of interest include sexual exploitation of children, child trafficking, street work, online safety, and protecting children with disabilities. (104,105,109) During the reporting period, the government concluded work on an updated National Plan of Action for Children in Kenya for 2022–2027, which is awaiting presidential launch. A public version of this policy is not yet available. (15)
National Prevention and Response Plan on Violence Against Children in Kenya (2019–2023)	Identifies goals and multi-sectoral actions to address violence against children, including commercial sexual exploitation, child trafficking, and other worst forms of child labor, through laws and policies, family support, education and life skills, community awareness, response and support, and coordination. (96,111) Responsibility for implementing the National Prevention and Response Plan on Violence Against Children in Kenya was given to the Department of Children Services. In 2021, the responsible unit within the Department of Children Services launched a violence against children survey fact sheet and continues to implement other programs with development partners. (92)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (16,109,112,113)

Insufficient resources for public institutions have led to delays in both the development of new policies and the implementation of existing policies to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in Kenya. (109)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Projects to Combat Child Labor and Increase Education Access†	Government-funded programs that aim to address child labor, including its worst forms, such as commercial sexual exploitation of children and child trafficking. Child Protection and Rescue Centers temporarily house child survivors and provide counseling and reintegration services. (114) Includes the Presidential Secondary School Bursary Scheme, which provides educational assistance to orphans and vulnerable children. The Presidential Secondary School Bursary Scheme continued to be supported by the government in 2021, but it did not receive applications due to school closures during the pandemic. (15,92)
3rd Generation Decent Work Country Program (2021–2024)*‡	Government of Kenya- and ILO-supported programming to assist with employment creation, sound labor relations, social protection, and gender equality at work. (115) Outlines strategies to eliminate child labor in Kenya, including the development and implementation of an updated child labor national action plan, a child labor survey, and an expanded Child Labor Division within the MOL. (115) The government has not yet begun its work implementing the third Decent Work Country Program, though other tri-partite stakeholders including the Federation of Kenya Employers and the Congress of Trade Unions have started implementation. (92)
National Safety Net Program (2013–2026)†	Government-funded social safety net program, with support from the World Bank. (16) During the reporting period, 117,314 vulnerable and drought-affected households at high risk for child labor received support through cash transfers. (15)
USDOL-Funded Programs	USDOL-funded projects to address child labor, build government capacity, and support youth apprenticeships. Includes Capacity Strengthening of Governments to Address Child Labor and/or Forced Labor, and Violations of Acceptable Conditions of Work in Sub-Saharan Africa (CAPSA) (2019–2022), a $5.25 million project to build the capacity of the governments of Kenya and Uganda to enforce labor laws and regulations related to child labor and forced labor and approve services for survivors. In 2021, the CAPSA project supported the training of Kenyan MOL officers on concepts related to child labor, forced labor, human trafficking, and other violations of acceptable conditions of work and provided child labor concepts trainings to Children Area Advisory Councils based in Kajiado, Kwale, and Nairobi counties. In 2022, through a cost increase, the project will extend ongoing work on policy development and capacity building in Kenya to the regional level, through engagement with the East African Community and government of Uganda. (3) Also includes Better Utilization of Skills for Youth (BUSY) through Quality Apprenticeships (2016–2021), a $3 million program that established and expanded workplace-based training programs for youth vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (117,118) The BUSY project, in collaboration with the MOL, the Federation of Kenya Employers, and the Central Organization of Trade Unions–Kenya, developed a draft National Skills Development Policy to support equitable access and participation of vulnerable and disadvantaged groups in skills development as part of a national sustainable workforce development program. (119) For additional information, please see our website.

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Kenya.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (16)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The government operates five child rescue centers to support survivors of human trafficking and other crimes in Nairobi, Machakos, Garissa, Thinka, and Kisumu. (109) However, although Kenya has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, especially the commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Since 2018, Kenya has been implementing a 100 Percent Transition Policy, boosting educational spending and undertaking an educational awareness and enrollment campaign aimed at universalizing the transition of children from primary to secondary education. (13,120) Research indicates the policy contributed to a substantial increase in secondary school enrollment from 2016 to 2020. (120-122) School enrollment, however, dropped when schools reopened following pandemic closures. (78,121,122) To address this concern, the Ministry of Education undertook a campaign to identify children not attending secondary school and return them to the classroom during the reporting period. (123,124) However, constraints in school infrastructure, auxiliary educational costs, and lack of sufficient teachers may hinder the implementation of the policy. (120,122,123)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Kenya (Table 11).

In 2021, Kiribati made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the government funded a pilot program to conduct child labor inspections and collect data on the nature of child labor.

The government also provided data on labor law enforcement and criminal law enforcement efforts in 2021. Additionally, the government finalized and endorsed an interagency referral pathway that strengthens child protection case management.

However, although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Kiribati are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Existing laws do not identify hazardous occupations and activities prohibited for children. In addition, the government has not adopted a national policy to address the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Kiribati are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. (1-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Kiribati. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	14.6 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	95.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	29.7
Primary Completion Rate (%)		93.4

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2020, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (4)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6, 2018–2019. (5)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Industry	Construction and cargo loading (1)
Services	Street work, including vending and working in kava bars (6)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including on foreign fishing vessels (1-3)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)-(c) of ILO C. 182.

According to the Social Development Indicator Survey 2018–2019, 25.4 percent of Kiribati children ages 5–17 are involved in child labor, with 14.9 percent of those children working under hazardous conditions. Although the survey results did not include information on the specific sectors in Kiribati in which children are engaged in work, children living in rural areas and poorer households were more likely to be more engaged in hazardous conditions compared with children in urban areas or wealthier households. (6,7) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Employment and Human Resources (MEHR) conducted its first pilot child labor inspection, visiting 35 sites in South Tarawa, Kiribati's most populated and urban area, to collect data on the nature of child labor in Kiribati. (6)

Evidence indicates that girls are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation. (3) Underage girls were allegedly subjected to commercial sexual exploitation with crew members from foreign fishing vessels. In exchange, the girls were given cash, alcohol, food, and goods. (1,2) COVID-19 pandemic-related regulations restricting the entry of vessels into Kiribati may have had an effect on decreasing instances of commercial sexual exploitation of children by crewmembers during the reporting period. (6)

Under the Free Education Policy, the government provides free education—including tuition, stationery, and transportation—to children. Through collaborations with UNICEF and other governments, the Government of Kiribati has improved learning spaces, access, and sanitation at schools. (6) The government has worked with UNICEF to strengthen birth registrations by conducting free mobile registration clinics in outer islands, which has continued during the reporting period. (2,6) Children do not experience barriers to education due to a lack of identity documents, their disability status, or access to schools from remote islands. (6) Furthermore, in response to the COVID-19 pandemic and disruptions to children's education, which continued during the reporting period, the Government of Kiribati launched a pilot radio and digital remote learning platform for students through the Global Partnership for Education grant secured in 2020. (6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Kiribati has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Kiribati's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the identification of hazardous occupations or activities prohibited for children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Section 7 of the Education Act (11)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 11 of the Education Act (11)

† Country has no standing military. (12)

The government has not identified by national law or regulations the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. Under Article 116 of the Employment and Industrial Relations Code, the laws do not specify the activities and hours of work per week that are acceptable for children engaged in light work, or the conditions under which light work can be undertaken. (8) During the reporting period, MEHR finalized the regulations on hazardous work and light work for children, which are currently in review by the Office of the Attorney General before adoption by the Cabinet. (6,13)

In addition, the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (8,11)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5).

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment and Human Resources (MEHR)	Enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor. (6)
Kiribati Police Services	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (6) Investigates cases of human trafficking and sexual exploitation of children through a special Domestic Violence and Sexual Offenses Unit. (14)
Child Protection Officer, Ministry of Women, Youth, Sports, and Social Affairs (MWYSSA)	Removes children from harmful situations, including as a result of sexual exploitation and harsh or exploitative labor. (15) Assists with the implementation of the Children, Young People, and Family Welfare Act. Coordinates the SafeNet referral system. (6)

During the reporting period, MEHR held meetings with the Ministry of Women, Youth, Sports, and Social Affairs (MWYSSA) and the Kiribati Police Services to coordinate referrals of children found in child labor. (6)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Kiribati took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MEHR that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including lack of labor inspector training for new inspectors.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The government has a standard operating procedure that outlines how to conduct labor inspections and includes a checklist template that requires information on the ages of all workers. During the reporting period, the government conducted its first child labor inspection in the capital Tarawa—the most populous island, which focused on places at high risk of child labor. (6) Nine children ages 10 to 16 were found involved in hazardous work related to street vending and working during late hours. These children were subsequently referred to the Kiribati Police Services and the MWYSSA for further action. (13)

The labor inspectorate has a budget of $17,300 and employs 5 labor inspectors, who conducted 81 inspections in 2021, up from 63 in 2020. (6) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 in less developed countries, Kiribati would need to employ roughly 1 inspector. (16,17) However, although the number of labor inspectors meets the ILO's technical advice, the government's limited ability to inspect and report on child labor issues was further affected by geographical distances, isolation, sparse population, and Internet connectivity challenges. (1) In addition, research indicates that labor inspections have not been extended to informal and high-risk sectors where there is evidence of child labor, including its worst forms, such as fishing vessels, kava bars, domestic work, and nightclubs. (13)

Resource and capacity constraints restrict the government's services and activities related to labor law enforcement, including training for labor inspectors. In addition, due to financial constraints, requests to hire two additional labor inspectors were denied. (6) Although virtual trainings for labor inspectors were held with the ILO and the IOM during the reporting period, they were not focused on child labor issues. (6)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Kiribati took actions to address child labor. (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Kiribati Police Services that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including lack of training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (2)	No (6)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A (6)

Number of Violations Found	Unknown (2)	9 (6)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (2)	0 (6)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (2)	0 (6)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (2)	0 (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (2)	Yes (6)

Children found in hazardous work situations during the pilot child labor inspection in Tarawa were referred to the Kiribati Police Services and the MWYSSA for further action. (6,13) As the pilot inspection was conducted for awareness of the status of the worst forms of child labor in Kiribati, the cases were not submitted for prosecution, but will be used to prepare for the next round of inspections and subsequent submission of cases to the Kiribati Police Services. (18)

During the reporting period, financial resource constraints hampered the government's ability to provide trainings for criminal investigators. (6)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Kiribati National Human Rights Taskforce	Coordinates national UN reports. Comprised of MEHR and MWYSSA. (1) Active during the reporting period, although activities were hampered by the loss of the Country Focal Officer and continued border closures. (18)
Child Protection Working Group	Coordinates child protection issues with MWYSSA. Oversees the implementation of the Child, Young People and Family Welfare Act. (1) Active during the reporting period. (6)

During the reporting period, MEHR's Decent Work Advisory Board initiated discussions to coordinate child labor efforts and tasked MEHR with establishing a Child Labor Working Group. (13) In addition, the government, with support from UNICEF, finalized and endorsed the interagency referral pathway that strengthens child protection case management and referrals. (3,6)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Children, Young People, and Families Welfare System Policy, 2013	Focuses on strengthening the welfare system, in part, by implementing services to prevent the abuse, violence, neglect, and exploitation of children and young people, including in hazardous labor. (15) During the reporting period, and with support from UNICEF, the government began consultations to develop standards and procedures for registering child protection service providers. (6)
United Nations Pacific Strategy (2018–2022)	Addresses, develops, and implements strategic economic development priorities in the South Pacific, including eliminating child labor and the worst forms of child labor. This multi-national strategic framework program comprises 14 South Pacific nations. (19) During the reporting period, activities were conducted under the UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program (2018–2022). (6)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (1,2,13)

Research found no evidence of a policy that focuses specifically on addressing the worst forms of child labor. (2)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
UNICEF Pacific Multi-Country Child Protection Program (2018–2022)	Prioritizes children's rights including the elimination of the worst forms of child labor. Multi-country program in 14 Pacific Island countries aligned with the UN Pacific Strategy (2018–2022). (20) During the reporting period, UNICEF provided trainings for child welfare officers on child protection case management guidelines, and for 20 frontline service providers on mental health and psychosocial support and psychological first aid. (6)
SafeNet†	MWYSSA-coordinated program that allows government, churches, and NGOs to provide assistance to victims found in exploitative and violent situations. (21) Active during the reporting period. (6)
Hotlines†	MWYSSA- and police-supported 24-hour hotlines for children to report violations, request information, or obtain access to services. (21) Active during the reporting period. (6)

† Program is funded by the Government of Kiribati.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (6,22)

Although the government has implemented programs to assist children in exploitative and abusive situations, research found no evidence that the government has carried out programs specifically designed to assist children who are engaged in construction and street vending work, or young girls subjected to commercial sexual exploitation with crew members from foreign fishing vessels.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Kiribati (Table 11).

In 2021, Kosovo made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government adopted two administrative instructions to facilitate implementation of the new Law on Child Protection, and law enforcement agencies made use of new technologies developed specifically to track child labor cases. Government entities and civil society organizations also participated in trainings on juvenile justice and social protection for vulnerable youth, and the government continued to support a number of social programs for at-risk children. However, children in Kosovo are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work, including begging and loading and transporting goods. The Labor Inspectorate and Centers for Social Work face financial and human resource constraints, which may impede their ability to adequately address child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Kosovo are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in street work, including begging and loading and transporting goods. (1-5) No recent data were available, but the 2013 Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey determined that 5,398 children in Kosovo were subjected to child labor. (6,7) The study also found that 2,168 Roma, Ashkali, and Balkan Egyptian children were subjected to hazardous child labor practices, especially street work. (5,8) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Kosovo. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Kosovo is a source and destination country for child trafficking, especially of girls. (1,3,4,12) In addition, children are sometimes forced into labor, such as in massage parlors, by organized criminal groups. (1,4,16,17) Kosovan children and children from neighboring countries, especially Albania, are also forced into street work, including begging, primarily in Prizren and Pristina. Most of these children come from the Roma, Ashkali, and Balkan Egyptian minority ethnic groups. (1,4,5,12,16-23) Economically vulnerable Kosovan children are sometimes forced to work in construction and agriculture to support their families. (12)

Children from minority ethnic communities, especially girls, sometimes experience difficulty accessing education, in part due to a lack of native-language educational materials and insufficient subsidized transportation for rural children. In addition, according to national standards on education, children should not be excluded from schooling due to a lack of birth documentation, but some undocumented child laborers encountered challenges to school enrollment. (4,24-27) Children who do not attend school are vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (28)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Kosovo holds a unique status vis-à-vis UN recognition that complicates its ratification of international agreements (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	N/A
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A
 UN CRC	N/A
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	N/A
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	N/A
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	N/A

Article 22 of Kosovo’s Constitution incorporates the UN CRC into its national legal framework. (29) Despite Kosovo’s unique status, the country worked with the UN through the Sustainable Development Cooperation Framework (2021–2025), which was implemented by the UN Kosovo Team and focused on promoting international standards and human rights. (30)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Kosovo’s legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 7 of the Law on Labor (31)

* Country has no conscription (41)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (40)

In 2021, the Ministry of Finance, Labor, and Transfers (MFLT) began to draft amendments to two existing Administrative Instructions on the prevention and prohibition of hazardous child labor and the identification, reporting, and referral of exploitation, negligence, and abuse of children. (4) During the reporting period, the government instituted the new Administrative Instruction for the Implementation of Child-Friendly Justice in Criminal, Civil, and Administrative Proceedings. The government also began drafting the Administrative Instruction on Measures for the Protection of Children against Websites with Pornographic Content and those that Harm the Health and Life of the Child. (4) In 2021, Save the Children cooperated with the MFLT to establish secondary legislation allowing for sustained financing for child protection services, in addition to securing comprehensive shelter and residential services for children without parental care, and continuing efforts to prevent hazardous child labor. (4)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the framework of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Labor Inspectorate	Conducts inspections to enforce child labor laws, removes children engaged in hazardous work, and refers children engaged in hazardous work to regional Centers for Social Work. (4)
Kosovo Police (KP)	Enforce criminal laws on forced child labor and commercial sexual exploitation of children. Through the Anti-Trafficking Directorate, enforce laws on child trafficking. (2,3,11) Operate under the Ministry of Internal Affairs. (4)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Justice	Enforces criminal laws on forced child labor, child trafficking, and commercial sexual exploitation of children through special anti-human trafficking coordinators and mechanisms. (11)
Ministry of Education, Science, Technology, and Innovation	Conducts education inspections regarding the balance of students' school and work hours. (42)

There is limited inter-ministerial communication between the Ministry of Internal Affairs and other government entities on issues concerning policymaking and enforcement related to child labor. (3,4,25) Multiple entities have reported that there is insufficient institutional capacity at the central and municipal levels and a need to improve funding and human resources for the Centers for Social Work (CSWs). This lack of institutional commitment compromised the ability of CSWs to address cases of child labor in a competent and adequate manner. (4,15,43-45) In March 2021, the Ministries of Infrastructure and Environment, Economy, and Health, and MFLT were tasked with the duties of the former Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare. (4)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Kosovo took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Labor inspectors have the authority to inspect private farms; however, due to a lack of human resource capacity to adequately cover all sectors and regions, the CSWs, which also face human resource and budgetary constraints, typically conduct these inspections. (4,28,46,47)

During the reporting period, the Labor Inspectorate continued to operate under its comprehensive strategy for conducting child labor inspections. (4,11,48,49) Labor inspectors receive initial training when hired; however, these initial trainings do not cover child labor as a separate category. (11,49)

The Labor Inspectorate's mandate allows it to investigate employment contracts for working children between ages 15 and 18 who have entered into an employment contract for a limited period. When child labor is discovered, the Labor Inspectorate issues the penalty and works with the Kosovo Police (KP) to remove the child from child labor. (4,31-33) In addition, the Labor Inspectorate coordinates inspections with CSWs for suspected abuse of children under age 15. According to NGO and media reports, the number of cases reported does not fully reflect the actual number of child labor cases due to the high level of labor market informality. (11,12,50)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Kosovo took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of training for criminal investigators on the identification of forced begging cases.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (11)	No (4)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (11)	No (4)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (11)	Yes (4)

The KP tracks children referred to CSWs as a result of investigations conducted by its domestic violence and human trafficking units. (11,51) In 2021, the KP received a number of trainings related to child labor, including trainings on the protection of children who commit criminal offenses and proper procedures for assisting refugee and migrant children, as well as a workshop for police about the standard operating procedures followed by social workers. In addition, the Kosovo Justice Academy provided a workshop on the worst forms of child labor for judges and prosecutors, and the Ministry of Justice participated in a regional conference on strengthening protections for children who have come into conflict with the law. (4,52)

In 2021, the KP identified 19 children as victims of human trafficking and forced labor in commercial prostitution and 3 children as victims of child pornography. Furthermore, the KP reported that 124 new investigations were opened against suspected human traffickers and that 13 cases from the previous year were still under review. (4) During the reporting period, 306 children were identified as having taken part in child begging by the KP through both targeted operations and routine traffic inspections. One individual was indicted on charges of trafficking in persons for the purpose of forced labor after allegedly forcing seven children to engage in street vending by selling small items in Pristina. (4) However, authorities did not consistently identify cases of forced begging, which are instead typically classified as parental neglect or abuse. (11,16,43)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Committee for Prevention and Elimination of Hazardous Forms of Child Labor	Coordinates government policies to combat child labor. Oversees and provides policy guidance for activities to prevent and eliminate child labor. (11) Chaired by the Minister of Finance, Labor, and Transfers. (4) Comprises representatives of government agencies, KP, trade unions, and an NGO. (2) Met twice during the reporting period. In 2021, the Committee drafted a revised action plan to facilitate coordination of efforts to prevent hazardous child labor at the central and local levels of government, in addition to creating sub-legislation related to the 2020 Law on Child Protection. (4)
Child Labor Monitoring System	Addresses child labor at the municipal level, identifies and provides existing child services, documents child labor trends, and evaluates local responses to child labor. (3) During the reporting period, child labor monitoring efforts included moving digital management of child labor cases from the government's social services database to the purview of the newly formed Ministry of Finance, Labor, and Transfers. (4)
National Agency Against Trafficking in Persons (NAATIP)	Coordinates policy implementation, and monitors and reports on actions to combat child trafficking through a National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator (NATC). (17) NATC is a deputy Interior Minister. (50,53) Includes representatives from the government, judiciary, municipal offices, NGOs, and the international community. (53,54) During the reporting period, NAATIP continued to hold regular meetings. (55)
Municipal Local Action Committees	Aim to prevent and eliminate child labor; report to the Child Labor Monitoring System. Members include representatives from schools, municipal education departments, and KP. (11) Research was unable to determine whether the municipal local action committees were active during the reporting period.

Since 2013, the government has been collecting and processing data on labor violations, which it then makes available to all ministries and law enforcement bodies. (3)

During the reporting period, the Inter-Ministerial Committee for the Rights of the Child met to discuss efforts to reduce child poverty, expand protections for children with disabilities, and improve children's health services. (56) The MFLT also finalized materials dictating the roles and standard operating procedures necessary for prevention, identification, data gathering, referral, and treatment of children found to be engaged in hazardous child labor. The MFLT also began to use a new digital case management system for child labor, replacing the previous system which was under the government social services system. (4) The Ministry of Agriculture has also conducted awareness-raising activities for parents and children highlighting the risks of child labor. (45,57)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Children's Rights Action Plan (2019–2021)	Aimed to improve social, economic, and legislative rights and the protection of children through developing institutions at the local and national levels. (58,59) Included an accompanying Children's Rights Strategy (2019–2023). (45,58,59) Active in 2021. (4)
Strategy on the Rights of the Child (2019–2023)	Calls for a comprehensive framework of policies for the protection of children's rights, including the prevention, protection, and reintegration of children involved in hazardous child labor practices such as street work and underground ore extraction. (11) Active in 2021. (4)
Strategy for the Inclusion of Roma and Ashkali Communities (2017–2021)	Focused on employment, social issues, healthcare, and housing for the Ashkali and Roma communities. Aimed to strengthen individuals' rights and full integration into society. (3) Included targeted components that promoted inclusive education for children from the Ashkali and Roma communities. (60) Active in 2021. (4)
Kosovo Education Strategic Plan (2017–2021)	Emphasized the inclusion of vulnerable minorities in the education system, especially for preschool children of the Roma, Ashkali, and Balkan Egyptian communities. Established regulations at the municipality level to facilitate preschool enrollment and raise awareness of school attendance and enrollment. (61) Active in 2021. (4)
Regulation on the Implementation of the Rights of Children Through a Child-Friendly Municipal Governance System	Protects and promotes the rights of children. Ensures that municipalities are child friendly and guarantees that all children benefit from social services, education, and safety. (62) Active in 2021. (4)

During the reporting period, the National Strategy Against Human Trafficking (2020–2024) was partially implemented through awareness campaigns, trainings for law enforcement and the judiciary, and raids initiated by the KP. (4)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor, which cover the main sectors where child labor has been identified in the country (Table 10).

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Hope and Homes for Children†	Government-funded NGO shelter. Accommodates child victims of abuse and human trafficking. (47) Active in 2021. (4)
UN Sustainable Development Cooperation Framework (2021–2025)*	Funded and implemented by the UN Kosovo Team. Promotes international standards and human rights safeguards of migrants and the social protection and educational inclusion of the Roma, Ashkali, and Balkan Egyptian communities. (30) Prioritizes four areas: (1) accountable governance; (2) inclusive and non-discriminatory social policies and services; (3) resilient, sustainable, and inclusive economic development; and (4) social cohesion. (3,11) Active in 2021. (4)
UN Kosovo/UNICEF Program (2021–2025)*	Aims to increase availability of early childhood education opportunities, inclusion of children with disabilities, and justice for children through data generation and evidence-based policymaking. (30,63) Active in 2021. (4)
The Helpline‡	Government-operated hotline for victims of domestic violence and human trafficking. (16) Active in 2021. (4)
Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP 16) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor	USDOL-funded global project implemented by ILO to (1) improve the knowledge base on child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking; (2) improve awareness of these issues through the use of data-driven techniques; (3) strengthen policies and improve the capacity of governments and other stakeholders to combat child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking through national, regional, and global initiatives; and (4) strengthen partnerships to accelerate progress in combating child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking. In Kosovo, the project aims to build the capacity of the government and other stakeholders to address child labor. Additional information is available on the USDOL website. (64)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of the Republic of Kosovo.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (4,65,66)

Social services professionals in Kosovo estimate that approximately 4,300 children receive assistance per year. (44) In 2021, the government continued to provide social assistance for at-risk families and provided educational support through virtual education initiatives and providing textbooks for children impacted by school closures due to the ongoing COVID-19 pandemic. (4)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Education, Science, Technology, and Innovation (MESTI) and Save the Children began implementation of a program supporting early childhood education opportunities for children throughout Kosovo. Save the Children's programming includes special consideration of the educational needs of children with disabilities and children from vulnerable communities. (4,67) In addition, the Kosovo Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Rural Development (MAFRD) made an action pledge for the International Year for the Elimination of Child Labor in which the agency committed to work with enforcement agencies to prevent and detect child labor in agriculture and forestry, and to refer child laborers to services. As part of this commitment, the Kosovo Forestry Agency (a sub-agency of MAFRD) began to require inclusion of a clause prohibiting hazardous child labor in forestry in all contracts it issues. (68,69)

In October 2021, the Program for Protection and Promotion of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms (2021–2025) was adopted to establish affirmative measures to assist marginalized communities, including vulnerable children. The program seeks in part to provide compensation for child victims of trafficking in persons, and also includes measures to provide mediation for child offenders. (4)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Kosovo (Table 11).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2021, the Kyrgyz Republic made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The President of the Kyrgyz Republic signed a decree to improve children's access to and the quality of primary and secondary education. The Ministry of Labor, Social Development, and Migration and the Ministry of Internal Affairs also continued development of the 2022–2025 National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons, and in December 2021, finalized and sent it to the Cabinet of Ministers for review and consideration for adoption. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, the Kyrgyz Republic is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued to implement a law and practice that delays advancement to eliminate child labor. Although the government's moratorium on labor inspections expired on January 1, 2022, the moratorium remained in place throughout 2021. The government amended this moratorium in 2020 to permit labor inspections based on formal complaints; however, the Ministry of Economy was required to approve worksite visits associated with such inspections, and in practice, it announced these visits in advance. The restrictions placed on unannounced inspections may have allowed potential violations of child labor laws and other labor abuses to go undetected in workplaces. The COVID-19 pandemic and a large-scale reorganization of government ministries further restricted the government's ability to address child labor issues. The government did not provide complete information on its labor or criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. Children in the Kyrgyz Republic are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. Protections to children granted in the Labor Code, such as the minimum age of employment, are not extended to children engaged in non-contractual employment, and research indicated that labor law enforcement efforts are not targeted to all sectors in which children are vulnerable to child labor, especially agriculture. In addition, the scope of social programs to address child labor is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in the Kyrgyz Republic are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation. (1-3) Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. (1,3-5) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in the Kyrgyz Republic. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	34.0 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	38.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		108.1

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Cultivating or harvesting cotton, walnuts, tobacco,† rice, potatoes, beans, dried fruits, and onions (1,4,5,8-13) Herding cattle (1-3)
Industry	Coal mining† (1,4,14) Brickmaking (12,14) Construction, including lifting and portering construction materials, and cutting metal sheets for roofs (1,4,5,12,15)
Services	Working in bazaars and markets, including portering, shining shoes, and selling items, including food and beverages (8,11,14) Washing and repairing cars (1,5,12) Working in restaurants and cafes (5,8,12,14) Street work, including begging and shoe shining (10,11) Domestic work, including child care (4,5,10,16)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation (3,12,17) Use in illicit activities, including trafficking drugs, as a result of human trafficking (18)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Child labor, including hazardous child labor, is most prevalent in Naryn and Osh provinces. (4) Children from the Kyrgyz Republic who travel to Kazakhstan to work, either with their parents or unaccompanied, cannot attend school due to a lack of documentation. These children engage in child labor in Kazakhstan in construction, farming, herding, or selling products in markets; some fall victim to forced child labor. (16,19) Within the Kyrgyz Republic, children of labor migrants have been identified engaging in child labor in markets. (20)

The inability to enroll in school makes children from a variety of circumstances vulnerable to child labor. School registration documentation requirements continue to prevent some children from enrolling in schools, particularly children whose parents are labor migrants. (1) According to UNICEF, an estimated 650,000 to 750,000 citizens of the Kyrgyz Republic work abroad, and an additional 1 million are internal migrants. Some children, who have either migrated to the Kyrgyz Republic with their parents or were left behind when their parents migrated to work in other countries or other areas of the Kyrgyz Republic, cannot access their birth certificates or guardianship documents, which are required for school enrollment. (9,21) Children living in rural areas, and those with disabilities also have difficulty accessing education. (1,12) In rare cases, some parents prevent children from attending school for religious reasons. (1,9,22)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

The Kyrgyz Republic has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in the Kyrgyz Republic's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Articles 6 and 18 of the Labor Code (23)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 294 and 446 of the Labor Code; Article 72 of the Code on Administrative Liability; Article 15 of the Code on Children (23-25)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Article 294 of the Labor Code; Decree 565 on the List of Works Prohibited for Persons Under Age 18 (23,26)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 10 and 446 of the Labor Code; Article 15.2 of the Code on Children; Article 1 of the Law on Preventing and Combating Human Trafficking; Articles 166 and 170 of the Criminal Code (23,24,27,28)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 1 of the Law on Preventing and Combating Human Trafficking; Articles 166 and 167 of the Criminal Code (27,28)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	No		Articles 166–168 of the Criminal Code; Articles 5 and 15 of the Code on Children (24,27)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 19, 180, 181, 282, and 283 of the Criminal Code; Articles 5 and 15 of the Code on Children (24,27)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 24.1 of the Law on Military Service (29)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Articles 17.1 and 22.1 of the Law on Military Service; Article 392 of the Criminal Code (27,29)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 392 and 395 of the Criminal Code (27)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	17‡	Article 16 of the Law on Education (30)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 16 of the Law on Education (30)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (30)

In December 2021, the President of the Kyrgyz Republic published the decree “On Urgent Measures to Secure the Constitutional Right of Children,” which establishes a framework to improve access to primary and secondary education, as well as the quality of that education. The decree requires government bodies to identify and enroll children who are below the minimum age for education but not enrolled in classes, and to draft legislation holding parents and guardians responsible for interfering with a child's access to education. (1,31) The decree also tasks the Ministry of Labor, Social Development, and Migration to identify vulnerable children and provide assistance in the form of school uniforms and supplies. (1,31)

The labor law governing the minimum age for work is not in compliance with international standards because it does not apply to informal work. According to Article 6 of the Labor Code, protections to children granted in the Labor Code, such as the minimum age for employment, are not extended to children engaged in non-contractual employment. (23) In addition, as the minimum age for work stated in the Labor Code is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (30,32)

Article 18 of the Labor Code prohibits children age 14 from working during school hours, and requires that parents give written permission for children age 14 to work. Children age 15 may work only for employers who have received permission from a worker's organization or a government regulatory body. (23) Articles 91 and 95 of the Labor Code also restrict the number of hours that children under age 16 may engage in light work. Children ages 14 and 15 may not work more than 24 hours per week, and daily shifts may not exceed 5 hours during school breaks or 2.5 hours when school is in session. (23) However, the Kyrgyz Republic does not have a list of activities in which light work may be permitted. (33)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Although Article 166 of the Criminal Code criminalizes the involvement of children in prostitution, no law clearly criminalizes the users (clients) of prostitution involving children. In addition, prohibitions under Article 167 against offering children for prostitution do not cover children ages 16 and 17. (27,34)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, the absence of unannounced inspections conducted at the national level in the Kyrgyz Republic may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Social Development, and Migration	Monitors worksites and refers child laborers to social services. Coordinates with the Inspectorate for Minors' Affairs in the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA), the Prosecutor General's Office, and regional State District Administration authorities to enforce child labor laws. (1,12,14,32) In 2021, the State Inspectorate on Ecological and Technical Safety was dissolved and its labor inspection functions were transferred to the newly expanded Ministry of Labor, Social Development, and Migration. (1)
Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA)	Enforces criminal laws related to child labor, including its worst forms. Conducts independent inspections and joint raids with the Ministry of Labor, Social Development, and Migration to identify violations, which can be referred to the Prosecutor General's Office for prosecutorial action. (1,12)
Prosecutor General's Office	Implements and enforces state policy and law related to child protection, including guaranteeing children's rights and enforcing laws prohibiting the worst forms of child labor by identifying and prosecuting offenders. (1,2)
National Referral Mechanism	Establishes procedures and policies for (a) identification of victims of human trafficking, (b) referrals for and provision of social services to victims, and (c) protection of victims' personal data. (35,36)
Helpline for Children	Hotline operated by the Ministry of Labor, Social Development, and Migration through which children, parents, and legal guardians can report child abuse and exploitation, including the worst forms of child labor, and receive referrals for services. (37,38)

In 2021, the COVID-19 pandemic and an extensive government reorganization severely limited the capacity of several ministries as resources were diverted from many areas to address the ongoing crisis. (1,19)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, lack of authorization to conduct unannounced inspections in the Kyrgyz Republic may have impeded the enforcement of child labor laws (Table 6).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The government extended a 2019 moratorium on inspection of business enterprises until January 1, 2022. The moratorium was revised in 2020 to permit labor inspections, but only on the basis of a formal complaint and with 10 days advance notice to the employer. (1,43-46) Although the moratorium expired at the beginning of 2022, during the reporting period, these restrictions on unannounced inspections severely limited the State Inspectorate's ability to detect violations of labor laws, including those related to child labor. (1,8) The government did not provide information regarding a number of labor inspection metrics, including the budget of the labor inspectorate, number of inspectors, and number of inspections conducted in 2021.

Although the inspection moratorium continued to prevent labor inspectors from performing routine and unannounced inspections, the Ministry of Internal Affairs (MOIA) conducted a series of independent, unannounced raids to identify and assist children engaged in child labor, including those subjected to its worst forms. (1) In 2021, the MOIA reported conducting 39 raids between January and September, through which authorities identified 103 child labor violations. Information was unavailable regarding the number of violations that MOIA referred to the Ministry of Labor, Social Development, and Migration and whether penalties were imposed in response to child labor violations identified during these raids. (1)

Research was unable to determine the number of inspectors employed by the Kyrgyz Republic in 2021. However, in 2020, the State Inspectorate employed 27 labor inspectors, and it is likely that the number of labor inspectors remains insufficient for the size of the Kyrgyz Republic's workforce, which includes more than 2.5 million workers. (8,39,47) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 20,000 workers in transitioning economies, the Kyrgyz Republic would employ about 128 labor inspectors. (48,49) Sources also report that the majority of enforcement activities to detect child labor is concentrated in markets in Bishkek and Osh, with few inspections or raids undertaken to detect child labor in agriculture. (39) The Prosecutor General's Office noted that enforcement agencies rarely undertake efforts to detect child labor in rural areas, in which children are vulnerable to child labor in crop cultivation and cattle herding. (2) Observers have expressed concern that the labor inspection authority lacks sufficient funding to carry out inspections, although the government does not publicly release information on the level of funding for labor inspection activities because it is deemed classified. (14,39)

Research was unable to determine whether inspectors received training on child labor during the reporting period. Although the Code on Children formally provides for a child labor complaint mechanism, reports indicate that a lack of institutional capacity among labor inspectors and social workers may hinder adequate implementation of this mechanism. (12,24)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in the Kyrgyz Republic took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including prosecution planning.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The government did not provide comprehensive information on its 2021 criminal law enforcement efforts related to child labor for inclusion in this report. However, between January and September 2021, criminal enforcement agencies reported that they initiated a total of three pretrial investigations into the worst forms of child labor for violations of Criminal Code Article 173 pertaining to forced/slave labor. (1) All three cases were dismissed for lack of evidence. (1) In order to address commercial sex operations, including the sexual exploitation of children, Kyrgyz law enforcement conducted searches of 34 saunas in Bishkek and Osh in June 2021. The government reported that 63 different crimes were discovered during these raids but did not indicate if human trafficking was among the offenses. (19)

Reports suggest that Kyrgyz police officers engage in misconduct, including allegations that police threaten and extort sex trafficking victims, including minors; reports also indicate that police accept bribes from alleged traffickers to drop cases. (18) Judicial officials have also been reported to be an obstacle to prosecution of human trafficking offenses, including those involving children, by prosecuting cases under lesser statutes, accepting bribes, or warning suspects prior to raids. (3)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Children's Affairs Commission	Assesses the needs of children in difficult situations, including child laborers; creates individual development plans; and monitors services delivery. Members include social workers from regional Departments of Child Protection of the Ministry of Labor, Social Development, and Migration and law enforcement authorities. (14) Operates according to the Regulations on the Procedure for the Identification of Children and Families in Difficult Situations. (51) Research was unable to determine whether the Commission was active during the reporting period.
Coordination Council for Social Protection and Children's Rights	Develops policies and programs to enhance the provision of social services and guarantee children's rights. Chaired by the Deputy Prime Minister and includes members from both government and civil society. (52) Research was unable to determine whether the Coordination Council was active during the reporting period.
Anti-Trafficking in Persons Task Force	Parliamentary group that coordinates and oversees work to eliminate human trafficking. (53) Research was unable to determine whether the Task Force was active during the reporting period.
Regional Trafficking in Persons Coordination Councils	Coordinate local implementation of the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons in all seven provincial governments and the city of Osh. (54) Research was unable to determine whether the Regional Coordination Councils were active during the reporting period.

Reports indicate that the Children's Affairs Commission lacks adequate procedures to conduct needs assessments for traumatized children, such as those who have been subjected to commercial sexual exploitation or other worst forms of child labor, hindering its ability to effectively accomplish its mandate. (20,55) Observers have also noted that the inability of social services providers to participate in child labor investigations impedes the ability of the Children's Affairs Commission to fulfill its mandate. (39)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Program for the Support of Family and Protection of Children (2018–2028)	Includes action items on addressing child labor, including revising the hazardous work list for children, enhancing social services for vulnerable children and families, and creating an Action Plan on the Prevention and Elimination of Child Labor. (56) Research was unable to determine whether the Program was active during the reporting period.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In November 2021, the Ministry of Labor, Social Development, and Migration was designated as the new coordinating agency for the government's National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons. The Ministry of Labor, Social Development, and Migration and the MOIA continued development of the 2022–2025 National Action Plan and in December 2021, finalized and sent it to the Cabinet of Ministers for review and consideration for adoption. (19)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Cash Transfer Program†	Government-funded cash transfer program for families living in difficult situations, including families with children engaged in child labor. (39) However, based on available information, the amount of assistance appears to be low, and some families face barriers to accessing these benefits. (59,60) Research was unable to determine whether the Cash Transfer Program was active during the reporting period.
Ministry of Education and Science (MOES) National School Attendance Database†	Unified online database maintained by MOES to monitor school enrollment and attendance. Based on these data, government ministries and local government officials can identify and assist children who may be vulnerable to child labor. (9,39) Research was unable to determine whether the MOES Database was active during the reporting period.
Shelters for Human Trafficking Victims‡	Includes two 24-hour shelters funded by the government and operated by NGOs that serve victims of violence of all ages, including child trafficking victims. One center is located in Bishkek and the other is in Osh. (37) MOIA also operates two daytime children's shelters, also located in Bishkek and Osh. (37) Research was unable to determine whether the shelters were operating during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of the Kyrgyz Republic.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (61)

Although the Kyrgyz Republic has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, particularly in commercial sexual exploitation and in agriculture, including cultivating cotton.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in the Kyrgyz Republic (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested

	Strengthen the labor inspection system by providing child labor training for new labor inspectors and provide to all labor inspectors refresher courses on child labor that include information about changes to child labor laws.	2014 – 2021
	Ensure that child labor violations identified by criminal enforcement agencies are appropriately referred to the Ministry of Labor, Social Development, and Migration.	2020 – 2021

In 2021, Lebanon made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. A United Nations Children's Fund-funded project trained police officers in Tripoli to identify child labor and refer children to social services. However, children in Lebanon are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including use in the production and trafficking of drugs, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced labor in agriculture. Children also engage in child labor in the production of potatoes and tobacco. Furthermore, government officials continued to indicate that funding is insufficient to properly carry out their duties. In addition, labor inspectors can only conduct inspections in formal places of employment, in which child labor is nearly non-existent, and social programs targeting child labor remained insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Lebanon are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including use in the production and trafficking of drugs, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in forced labor in agriculture. (1,2) Children also engage in child labor in the production of potatoes and tobacco. (3,4) Data on key indicators on children's work and education are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Food service, † including working as waiters (3)
	Working in small shops and groceries (2,3,7,12,16,19)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor ‡	Use in illicit activities, including the production and trafficking of drugs, and arms dealing (2,4,16)
	Forced begging (1,10,15,16)
	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2,12,20,21)
	Forced labor in agriculture (1,3,4,9,12)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

Multiple crises have converged on Lebanon that have increased the rate of child labor, including a national economic crisis that began in 2019 and continued to worsen throughout the reporting period, the prolonged presence of Syrian refugees, and the COVID-19 pandemic, which has created new barriers to education and accelerated economic decline. (7,13) Multi-dimensional poverty in Lebanon has increased from 42 percent in 2019 to 82 percent in 2021, including virtually all of Lebanon's refugee population. (22) As a result of worsening conditions, UNICEF reported that the rate of child labor has increased from 2.6 percent to 4.4 percent, with agriculture and street work making up most of the increase. (7,23) In addition, 12 percent of families report sending at least 1 child to work and 7 times more Lebanese households have a working child than in previous years. (22)

UNHCR estimates that there were 1.5 million Syrian refugees in Lebanon as of November 2021 with 90 percent living in extreme poverty, making Syrian refugee children vulnerable to exploitation. (24) Child labor is also prevalent in other refugee communities in Lebanon, including the Palestinian and Iraqi communities. (13) Syrian refugee children are subjected to forced labor in agriculture. (1,3,12) Some Syrian refugee children and their families in the Bekaa Valley are kept in bonded labor in agriculture to pay for makeshift dwellings provided by landowners. (25,26) An estimated 75 percent of Syrian refugee children working in the Bekaa Valley do so in agriculture. (27) Adult Syrian refugees face legal restrictions that allow them to work only in agriculture, construction, and sanitation. (12,28) These restrictions on adults make children vulnerable to child labor. (9)

Children in Lebanon, particularly Syrian refugee children, face barriers to accessing education, including the cost of transportation and supplies, fear of passing checkpoints or of violence, lack of private sanitation facilities for girls, discrimination, bullying, corporal punishment, and a different curriculum in Lebanon than in their country of origin. (3,4,7,29) In 2021, the government continued its policy of admitting all refugee children regardless of whether they have the required documentation for school enrollment. (7) However, the public school system in Lebanon lacks the capacity to accommodate the large number of school-age Syrian refugee children. (13) Despite the official policy of schools being open to all, in practice, some refugees have been denied access to schools. (4) In addition, children with two Lebanese parents are sometimes prioritized in school enrollment over children with a non-Lebanese father. (30) Students without transcripts are only eligible to receive a certificate, rather than a diploma, causing some undocumented students to drop out. (4)

Before the pandemic, more than 50 percent of Syrian refugee children and 35 percent of Palestinian refugee children were not enrolled in formal education. (16,31,32) Children with disabilities, particularly refugee children, were unable to attend school due to insufficient accessibility or inadequacy of facilities, lack of specialized facilities, or unavailability of tailored services for children with disabilities. (29,33) In addition, the economic crisis has precipitated a movement of Lebanese children from private schools to public schools, putting further strain on an overburdened system. (2,7) Lebanese and refugee children who work in agriculture often do not attend school during harvesting and planting seasons. (34) One local organization observed a direct correlation between school dropout rates and an increase in child labor. (16)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Lebanon has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Lebanon's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the prohibition of commercial sexual exploitation of children.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Article 22 of the Labor Code (35)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Articles 1-2 and Annex 2 of Decree No. 8987 (36)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Annex 1 of Decree No. 8987 (36)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 8 of Decree No. 3855; Articles 569 and 586.1 of the Penal Code (37,38)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 586.1 and 586.5 of the Penal Code (38)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 506, 523, 525–527, 586.1, and 586.5 of the Penal Code; Decree No. 8987 (36,38)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 586.1, 586.5, and 618 of the Penal Code; Article 13 of the Law on Drugs (38,39)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 30 of the National Defense Law (40)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 586.1 of the Penal Code; Annex 1 of Decree No. 8987 (36,38)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 49 of the Education Law (41)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 49 of the Education Law (41)

* Country has no conscription (42)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (41)

The Labor Code only applies to workers who perform work in industrial, trading, or agricultural enterprises and excludes domestic work and non-industrial, non-trade agriculture. (35) This does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected by the minimum age for work.

In Lebanon, basic education is compulsory. (41) Children generally complete basic education at age 15. (41) The minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor	Enforces child labor laws through desk review and workplace inspections. (4) The Ministry's Child Labor Unit acts as government focal point for child labor issues and raises public awareness about child labor and the right to education. Receives complaints of child labor violations on its Child Labor Unit hotline. (4)
Internal Security Forces (ISF)	Enforce laws regarding child labor through the Anti-Human Trafficking and Moral Crimes Unit. (4)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes violations of the Penal Code in coordination with ISF. Maintains general data and statistics on criminal violations involving child labor. (4) Refers at-risk children to shelters and protection services. Coordinates, through signed agreements, with civil society organizations to provide social workers who oversee court proceedings involving juveniles and deliver services to them, including children engaged in begging. (4)
Directorate of General Security	Focuses on immigration and border protection. Works with the farmers' union to address child labor in agriculture. (4)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Lebanon took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including the lack of a mechanism to assess civil penalties.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2020	2021

In 2021, labor inspections were only conducted for emergency cases, which are received through an MOL-operated hotline or the Child Labor Unit webpage. (7) According to local observers, the MOL's hotline is not fully functional and works for a limited number of hours on official workdays. It does not have a system to register incoming calls. (16) The MOL did not receive any emergency complaints regarding child labor during the reporting period. (43) In addition, government officials in the past have expressed frustration that they can only conduct inspections in formal places of employment, in which child labor is nearly non-existent. (4, 12, 13, 45) Government officials continued to indicate that funding is insufficient to properly carry out their duties. (2) The MOL had only one car and two inspectors in each district. (43) In 2021, the labor inspectorate curtailed the number of inspections it conducted due to the ongoing economic crisis and concerns over the government's ability to pay salaries. (2)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Lebanon's workforce, which includes more than 2.1 million workers. (4) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Lebanon would need to employ about 144 labor inspectors. (46,47)

The government does not publicly release information on its labor law enforcement efforts. (12)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Lebanon took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (7)	Yes (2)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A	N/A

Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (7)	Unknown (2)
Number of Convictions	1 (7)	Unknown (2)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (7)	Unknown (2)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (7)	Yes (2)

In 2021, a UNICEF-funded project trained police officers in Tripoli to identify child labor and refer children to social services. In addition, NGOs provided training to the Internal Security Forces (ISF) and local police to help authorities address the needs of street children. (2) The ISF's anti-trafficking unit is reportedly underfunded and understaffed, and it has no field offices outside Beirut. (1) The Ministry of Justice has stated that a lack of sufficient human resources hindered the government's ability to address child labor. (13)

The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report.

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including lack of efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Raises awareness; coordinates efforts among government agencies; establishes standard practices; develops, enforces, and recommends changes; and ensures that government agencies comply with the law. Led by the Minister of Labor, includes representatives from six other ministries and other institutions and international organizations. (13) Active in 2021. (43)
National Steering Committee on Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates efforts against human trafficking, including child trafficking. Based at the Ministry of Labor and meets on a monthly basis. (13) Active in 2021. (43)
UNICEF and UNHCR	Coordinate efforts to address the needs of children affected by the Syrian refugee crisis in Lebanon. UN representatives identify crucial concerns, including factors that make children vulnerable to child labor. (13) Make recommendations to the government on the use of resources, including referral services. (13) UN agencies and international and local NGOs coordinate child protection efforts through Child Protection Working Groups. (12) Active in 2021. (24)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to End Street Begging by Children	Seeks to end child begging by ensuring legal protection for street children, building capacity to protect street children, rehabilitating and reintegrating street children, and conducting outreach regarding the problem. (4) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Action Plan to End Street Begging by Children during the reporting period.
Policy for the Protection of Students in the School Environment	Protects children's right to education and promotes non-violence in schools by establishing mechanisms to receive complaints of violence, mistreatment, and bullying; and addresses those cases while safeguarding children's privacy. Trains school staff and officials on identifying risk factors. (48,49) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Policy for the Protection of Students in the School Environment during the reporting period.
Work Plan to Prevent and Respond to the Association of Children with Armed Violence in Lebanon	Provides the policy framework for the prevention of children's involvement in armed conflict. (50) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Work Plan to Prevent and Respond to the Association of Children with Armed Violence in Lebanon during the reporting period.

The National Action Plan on the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor expired in 2019, and the government has not renewed it.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Protection Program	Joint program by UNICEF and the Ministry of Social Affairs. Addresses child labor through interventions, including a non-formal education program for children, child protection services, skills development, and social assistance. (4) Active in 2021. (51)
Reaching All Children with Education (RACE II) (2017–2021)	Donor-funded, 5-year project, implemented by the Ministry of Education and Higher Education and partners to ensure quality educational opportunities for children ages 3 to 18, regardless of nationality, through holistic interventions that address the demand and availability of quality public education, including non-formal education. (52) Active in 2021. (53)
National Poverty Alleviation Program†	Funded by the government and foreign donors, this program housed at the Prime Minister's Office and the Ministry of Social Affairs provided WFP food vouchers ($27 per month) for each member of poor families. It also provided school tuition and book costs for secondary school students from 43,000 poor families. (33) This program closed in 2021. (54)

† Program is funded by the Government of Lebanon.

Although Lebanon has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including in construction and forced child labor in agriculture. Moreover, some officials are reluctant to remove children trafficked by their families due to a lack of adequate social services. (10)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

In 2021, Lesotho made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Lesotho's Multisectoral Committee on Combating Trafficking in Persons launched the National Referral Mechanisms in Trafficking in Persons. The Government of Lesotho also created standard operating procedures for responding to human trafficking violations, with the Home Affairs Ministry distributing the documents in the 10 districts of the country. In addition, the labor inspectorate significantly increased the number of inspections conducted during the reporting period. However, children in Lesotho are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in animal herding. Lesotho's compulsory education age is below the minimum age for work, leaving children in between these ages vulnerable to child labor. The government also lacks effective coordination mechanisms to address child labor, and labor inspections are not conducted in high-risk sectors, including the informal sector.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Lesotho are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks related to animal herding. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Lesotho. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	30.1 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	93.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	32.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		85.6

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2016, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (3)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2018. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Herding animals, including cattle† (1,2,5,6)
	Farming, including planting, applying pesticides, and harvesting (5-11)
Services	Domestic work (1,2,5,6)
	Street work, including vending, and trading (5,7)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, and animal herding, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2)
	Use in illicit activities, including burglary and theft (7,12)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Lesotho is a source, transit, and destination country for human trafficking. Children involved in animal herding are exposed to harsh weather conditions, sometimes leading to death. (1,2,8,12) Children, especially orphans,

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

sometimes voluntarily travel to other countries, including South Africa, for domestic work, and upon arrival they are subsequently detained in prison-like conditions and sexually exploited. (1,12)

The Lesotho Population-based HIV Impact Assessment showed that in 2017, the HIV rate in adults (ages 15–59) was 25.6 percent, the second-highest HIV rate in adults worldwide. (7,13) Due to the high rate of HIV among adults, many children in Lesotho become orphans and are vulnerable to human trafficking. (1,2,10,14) Children, mostly orphans driven by poverty, migrate from rural to urban areas to engage in commercial sexual exploitation. (1,10)

In Lesotho, primary education is free; however, secondary education incurs a fee that is cost prohibitive for many families. (1,5,15,16) Many children face limited access to education due to a shortage of teachers and schools, which causes them to travel long distances. In addition, the absence of sanitation facilities in schools remains a barrier for many children to access education. (1,5,6) Children with disabilities also encounter difficulties with ill-equipped educational facilities and untrained teachers. These factors increase a child's vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor, such as human trafficking. (1,17)

UNICEF reported a 43 percent rate of birth registrations at the national level. NGOs confirmed that the low number of birth registrations results in children becoming stateless, which makes them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (18,19) According to the Ministry of Social Development, children must produce copies of birth certificates to qualify for the Orphans and Vulnerable Children program that provides school fees and uniforms for orphans and vulnerable children. Absence of birth certificates prevents vulnerable children from obtaining support from the Ministry of Social Development. (6)

During the reporting period, the prevalence of the COVID-19 pandemic hindered some children from accessing education. While the government offered on-line classes, these were inconsistent and children from poor households with limited or no Internet capabilities could not access them. (5,6) The government has introduced a new school year calendar to cover for the lost time. (6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Lesotho has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Lesotho's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Article 228(1) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Article 124(1) of the Labor Code (15,20)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 230(1) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Article 125(1) of the Labor Code (15,20)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 230(3) and 231 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (15)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 7(1) of the Labor Code; Article 9(2) of the Constitution; Article 5 of the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Act (20-22)

Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 77 of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act; Articles 10–14 of the Sexual Offenses Act (15,24)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 45(b) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (15)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 22(o) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (15)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*		Article 22(o) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (15)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 22(o) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (15)
Compulsory Education Age	No	13‡	Article 3 of the Education Act (16)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 3 of the Education Act; Article 22(k) of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act (15,16)

* Country has no conscription (15)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (16)

In 2021, the Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE) continued to update the Lesotho Labor Code, which has been drafted by the Parliamentary Council. The draft Labor Code maintains the minimum age of 15 for labor and strengthens provisions to address the worst forms of child labor. (1,5,25)

Education is compulsory in Lesotho through age 13, which makes children age 14 particularly vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to be in school and have not reached the minimum age for work. (15,16,20)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Employment (MOLE)	Enforces minimum age requirements under child labor laws, including for hazardous occupations, and assesses compliance with child labor laws as part of general labor inspections. (25) Assigns labor inspectors to operate a Child Labor Unit within the ministry and provides recommendations that support the expansion of inspections. (25)
Trafficking in Persons and Migrant Control Unit	Manages all trafficking in persons-related cases within the Lesotho Mounted Police Service. (26)
National Police, Child and Gender Protection Unit	Investigates criminal child labor violations and works in conjunction with MOLE to enforce child labor laws, including those related to hazardous and forced child labor. (26)
Public Prosecutor's Office	Prosecutes child labor law offenders. (25)
Children's Court	Enforces criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (25)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In addition to the domestic enforcement agencies, there are also cross-border enforcement mechanisms between Lesotho and the Republic of South Africa. The enforcement entities are coordinated by different ministries—Home Affairs, Local Government, or Police and Public Safety respectively. (6) There is, however, lack of coordination between these bodies, which negatively impacts implementation as some efforts are duplicated, while unclear lines of responsibility mean that other efforts are not undertaken. (6)

The Ministry of Social Development submitted drafting instructions to the Parliamentary Council for amendments of the Children's Protection and Welfare Act of 2011. (1) These recommendations support the authorization of the labor inspectorate to conduct inspections in the informal sector; however, the recommendations have not yet been implemented. (7)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Lesotho took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MOLE that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$796,465 (5)	N/A (6)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (5)	Yes (6)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (5)	Yes (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (6)

Lesotho has a referral mechanism that is maintained through the collaboration of different ministries. If a case of child labor is found by MOLE, the Ministry's inspectors will refer the case to NGOs and the Ministry of Social Development. (5) NGOs usually provide immediate material assistance, such as food, cash, or shelter, and the Ministry of Social Development conducts site and family visits and assists eligible children to register for a child grant program. (5) MOLE also receives walk-in complaints daily, as well as whistleblower complaints. In addition, the Ministry of Social Development has a child help line that addresses general child protection issues. (6)

MOLE was allocated $3.4 million; however, the budget allocated to the labor inspectorate was not specified, and the budget for activities was limited as a large share was used to pay for salaries. (6) Reports indicate that funding is inadequate for the labor inspectorate to carry out inspections. In addition, labor inspections are not conducted in high-risk sectors, including the informal sector. (5,6,25)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Lesotho took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including limited funding and personnel.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (5)	No (6)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (5)	N/A (6)

Number of Violations Found	0 (5)	0 (6)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (5)	0 (6)
Number of Convictions	0 (5)	0 (6)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (5)	No (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (6)

The National Police's Child and Gender Protection Unit does not have guaranteed funding; rather, it receives funding from the general operations budget of the National Police. Research found that the Child and Gender Protection Unit has limited personnel and receives insufficient or no funding to carry out child labor investigations. (6)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Program Advisory Committee on Child Labor/ National Task Team	Led by MOLE's Child Labor Unit, the team includes representatives from government ministries, trade unions, NGOs, and international organizations. (5) Held a meeting in February 2021 to present the Inception Report on the Worst Forms of Child Labor Survey. (6)
National Orphans and Vulnerable Children Coordinating Committee	Strengthens coordination on issues related to orphans and vulnerable children at the national level. During the reporting period, the committee participated in the development of the Persons with Disability Equity Act, 2021, which has been passed into a law. (25)
Multisectoral Committee on Combating Trafficking in Persons	Spearheads anti-trafficking in persons initiatives and approves legislation and policies to prevent human trafficking. Chaired by the Commissioner of Refugees, includes government ministries, local government members, and representatives from NGOs, international organizations, and faith-based organizations. (28) During the reporting period, the Multisectoral Committee on Combating Trafficking in Persons launched the National Referral Mechanisms in Trafficking in Persons and the standard operating procedures in October. The Home Affairs Ministry distributed these operating procedures to the 10 districts of the country. (6) In addition, the committee held 9 meetings centrally and 10 meetings across the country. In partnership with the International Organization for Migration (Lesotho IOM), the committee conducted training on the introduction and dissemination of the National Referral Mechanism and the Law Enforcement Standard Operating Procedures for responding to Trafficking in Persons for 160 government and non-government participants. (29)
District Child Protection Teams	Coordinate child protection matters, including those related to child labor, at the district level. Led by the Ministry of Social Development, include representatives from the government, private sector, NGOs, and community support groups. (28) Held two public gatherings in two villages on child labor in March. (6)
Community Coordination Teams	Monitors, addresses, and refers instances of at-risk children or those involved in hazardous work. (1) In 2021, a community Council Child Protection Team was established at Mhlakeng Community Council. (6)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including implementing a new national child labor action plan.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Anti-Trafficking in Persons Strategic Framework and Action Plan (2021–2026)	Supports national and international obligations and commitments regarding human trafficking in line with the vision to eliminate all forms of trafficking in persons in Lesotho. Provides victim protection, guidance for the successful arrests and prosecutions of offenders, and preventive measures. (25,30) During the reporting period, the government opened a bank account for implementation of the National Anti-Trafficking in Persons Strategic Framework and Action Plan (2021–2026). The government approved $32,679 toward the plan, but funds have not yet been disbursed. (31)
Kingdom of Lesotho: Poverty Reduction Strategy Paper–National Strategic Development Plan (2018–2023)	Identifies child protection services (from the Child and Gender Protection Unit, social welfare and health agencies, and the justice system) and their capacity to respond adequately to cases of violence, abuse, and exploitation of children, including child labor. Outlines prevention measures. (1,32) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Social Development officially relaunched the Child Helpline Lesotho initiative. The initiative provides 24-hour services, emergency assistance, and long-term resources to children who have experienced any form of violence and need care. (31)

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (1,7,25)

The government released a draft labor policy in 2018 that proposed harmonizing existing legislation with international labor standards regarding child labor. Currently, the Labor Code review process is at the final drafting stage by the Parliamentary Council Unit and is awaiting final approval by the National Advisory Committee on Labor before the draft bill can be tabled before the cabinet. (1,5,7,31)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to fully address the scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Orphans and Vulnerable Children Scholarship Program†	Government program that pays for tuition, uniforms, supplies, and boarding fees for orphans and vulnerable children. (1) The program benefited over 26,000 orphan and vulnerable children during the reporting period. (6)
School Feeding Program	Provides incentives for primary school children from impoverished backgrounds to attend school and improves retention. (1) The program has provided meals to over 390,000 pupils during the reporting period. (6)
Child Grant Program	Provides social cash transfers to the impoverished and households with orphans and vulnerable children with the aim of increasing access to basic needs such as food, health, and education. The program is implemented by the Ministry of Social Development and funded by the EU with technical support from UNICEF. (1,33) The program benefited 50,000 households during the reporting period. (6)

† Program is funded by the Government of Lesotho.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (1)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Lesotho (Table 11).

In 2021, Liberia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. During the reporting period, the government ratified the International Labor Organization Convention No. 138: Convention Concerning Minimum Age for Admission to Employment and passed amendments to the 2005 Anti-Human Trafficking Law that remove the requirement of force, fraud, or coercion in child sex trafficking cases. In addition, it removed 38 children from situations of labor exploitation or endangerment and referred them to the Ministry of Gender, Children and Social Protection for social services or placement in shelters. However, children in Liberia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the production of rubber and the mining of gold and diamonds. Liberia has yet to accede to the United Nations Committee on the Rights of the Child's Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict or the Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution, and Child Pornography. Moreover, social programs are not sufficient to address the scope of the problem in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Liberia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work. (1,2) Children also perform dangerous tasks in the production of rubber and the mining of gold and diamonds. (3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Liberia.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The National Commission on Child Labor (NACOMAL) did not collect any data on child labor in 2021 and the data collected in 2016–2017 for an updated labor force survey have not yet been released by the Ministry of Labor (MOL). Research was unable to determine whether data from the 2017 labor force survey, which reportedly includes a child labor component, were analyzed in 2021. (3,7,9,14,15) While the government has yet to collect comprehensive data on child labor activities to inform policies and social programs, there are reports that children in rural communities engage in rubber tapping and coal burning activities, while children in cities and surrounding urban communities crush rocks, engage in domestic work, and sell goods. There are also reports that some children are subjected to hazardous labor in the artisanal mining of gold and alluvial diamonds with tasks that include washing gravel, processing ore, and working in mining shafts. (3,6) There have been anecdotal reports that children are also used to sell illicit drugs within the country by adults as a cover to evade arrest by law enforcement. (3,6) Human traffickers generally operate independently and are often family members or respected members of the community who promise poor rural relatives and neighbors better economic or educational opportunities for themselves (in the case of young women) or their children, but instead they are subjected to domestic servitude, forced begging, forced labor, street vending, and sex trafficking. Children are also transported from Liberia to Côte d'Ivoire, Guinea, Nigeria, and Sierra Leone for work. (1,3,14) In addition, there are reports that children residing at various orphanages within the capital of Monrovia and in other parts of the country are vulnerable to sexual exploitation due to a lack of basic necessities at the orphanages, including food. (6)

Section 9 of the Children's Law mandates free basic education from grades one to nine, but the cost of registration fees, uniforms, transportation, books, and school supplies limits access to education for some children. In addition, family members often require children to work long hours, denying them the ability to attend school, even if they could afford to do so. (3,6) In schools throughout rural communities, few teachers are on the official Ministry of Education payroll; in many cases, it is only the principal. Communities must supplement their school's teaching force by recruiting and paying small stipends for volunteer teachers who may not be qualified or committed to showing up to teach. (16) For secondary school students (grades 10–12), reports indicate there is a shortage of teachers, insufficient learning materials, a lack of educational facilities, and inadequate transportation, all of which limit access to education. (3,6,7) In addition, some teachers sexually exploit students in exchange for the promise of good grades, resulting in children avoiding or dropping out of school. (3,6,7) Research also indicates the ongoing practice of temporarily removing boys and girls from formal schooling to participate in initiation rituals that transition a child into adulthood. Many children may not return to school after their participation in these initiation ceremonies, making them more vulnerable to child labor. (3,6,7)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Liberia has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

	Convention	Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Liberia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the lack of a comprehensive hazardous work list.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Free Public Education	Yes		Article 3, Section 9 of the Children's Law (19)

* No conscription (24)

On September 7, 2021, the Liberian legislature passed an amendments to the 2005 Act to Ban Trafficking in Persons Within the Republic of Liberia that removed the requirement of force, fraud, or coercion in child sex trafficking cases and prescribed penalties for adult trafficking that are sufficiently stringent and commensurate with the penalties for other grave crimes, which now include prison sentences not less than 20 years and fines up to $200,000. (3,20) In addition, an updated version of the hazardous work list continues to be in draft form and has not yet been endorsed by the MOL. (6,18)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Conducts worksite inspections and addresses child labor violations. (3,6)
Ministry of Gender, Children and Social Protection (MOGCSP)	Acts as the lead advisory agency on policy formulation, coordination, and monitoring of child protection through its Children Protection and Development Division. Monitors the government's efforts on compliance with the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the UN Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women, the UN CRC, and the African Union protocols on women and children. (7,15)
Ministry of Justice (MOJ)	Promotes and executes the rule of law for public safety, including the prosecution of child labor perpetrators. (9)
Women and Children Protection Section (WACPS)	A division within the Liberia National Police (LNP) that investigates child endangerment cases and human trafficking in cooperation with the LNP's Anti-Trafficking Unit and the Liberia Immigration Service. (6)

During the reporting period, the labor inspectorate of MOL reported that it had conducted 43 child labor-specific investigations and removed 38 children from situations of exploitation or endangerment. These children were referred to the Ministry of Gender, Children and Social Protection for social services or placed in protective shelters. (3) It is unknown how many children were removed specifically from child labor situations. (3) Law enforcement officials have reported that, due to lack of funding, officials who identify child labor or human trafficking cases are often expected to become personally responsible for the victims' welfare, whether by providing financial support or taking the children into their own homes. (16)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Liberia took actions to address child labor. However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation (Table 6).

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Labor Inspectorate Funding	Unknown (6)	$25,000 (3)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (6)	Yes (3)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	No (6)	No (3)

Generally, labor inspections are conducted in the formal sector and not in the informal sector in which children are more likely to be engaged in child labor. Inspectors are not legally able to inspect private farms or homes for domestic child laborers. (6,10) In addition, the lack of funding and logistical support results in the underutilization of the labor inspectorate's complaint mechanism. (3,7,14) Although inspectors cannot assess penalties, they can impose corrective measures, such as issuing notices of compliance and filing a complaint with the hearing board. (6,7) However, the lack of penalty assessment authorization, limited funding, and insufficient fines, combined with poor opportunities for revenue generation, hamper the labor inspectorate's enforcement of child labor laws. (3,7,10,14,19)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Liberia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (6)	Yes (3)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (6)	Yes (3)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (6)	Yes (3)
Number of Investigations	2 (6)	8 (3)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (6)	Unknown (3)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	3 (6)	Unknown (3)
Number of Convictions	1 (6)	Unknown (3)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (6)	Unknown (3)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (6)	Yes (3)

Although the MOL maintains a human trafficking hotline that can receive calls related to child labor, very few child labor calls come in and the hotline is irregularly staffed. (6)

Research indicates that the Liberia National Police's Women and Children Protection Section had limited training, financial, and physical resources, which hampered its ability to carry out investigations and other enforcement duties. (14) In addition, child labor is typically addressed as an issue of child endangerment, thereby causing a lack of reliable data on violations of child labor laws. (10)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of financial support.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission on Child Labor (NACOMAL)	Coordinates government and civil society activities concerning child labor. Led by MOL and comprising representatives from 16 organizations, including international and civil society organizations. (3) Assists in coordinating child labor investigations. (3) Seeks to reform national child labor laws and create a national child labor database, which would assist surveys on the extent of child labor issues in Liberia. (25)
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Implements child labor policies. Chaired by NACOMAL and comprising government officials and workers' organizations; includes four subcommittees on resource mobilization; advocacy; training and legal development; and monitoring and evaluation. (15) The National Steering Committee met four times during the reporting period (on February 9, March 23, May 13, and November 2), and celebrated the World Day Against Child Labor, with the theme "Act Now to End Child Labor," to raise sensitivity and increase the commitment of government and its partners in the fight against child labor. (3)
Child Protection Network	Coordinates child protection efforts, including child labor and human trafficking, and refers child survivors of abuse to social services providers with support from international and national organizations. Chaired by the MOGCSF, and comprising the MOL, the Ministry of Health and Social Welfare, the LNP's WACPS, civil society organizations, and several NGOs. (15) The Child Protection Network met consistently throughout the year, with these meetings helping to promote coordination between investigating authorities and service providers for child trafficking and child labor cases. (3)
Anti-Human Trafficking Task Force	Coordinates anti-trafficking activities. Co-chaired by the MOL and the MOJ, comprising representatives from Liberia Immigration Services, LNP, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the MOGCSF, the Ministry of Internal Affairs, and civil society organizations. (7) The Task Force met approximately once a month, sometimes virtually, to share interagency information related to human trafficking cases. These meetings helped promote coordination between investigating authorities and service providers in at least four suspected cases of human trafficking. (3)

NACOMAL reported insufficient funding to pursue their mandates. (6)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The government has a draft referral mechanism for child labor, but due to resource, capacity, and coordination constraints, cases were mostly handled outside the formal pathways and in an ad hoc manner. (6)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor	Aims to reduce child labor and the worst forms of child labor by 50 percent by 2030 through three strategic objectives, including increasing public awareness on the causes and consequences of the worst forms of child labor; strengthening the legal and institutional frameworks to reduce child labor; and increasing social services and protection for children of vulnerable households. (26) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor during the reporting period.
National Action Plan for Trafficking in Persons (2019–2024)	Outlines the government's anti-trafficking efforts, including those for child victims, and creates benchmark goals related to human trafficking. (9,27) Establishes roles and responsibilities for coordinating government assistance to human trafficking victims and provides shelter and care to children who may have been victims of human trafficking. (27) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Action Plan for Trafficking in Persons during the reporting period.
National Child Welfare and Protection Policy	Focuses on the implementation and enforcement of existing child protection laws. (7) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Child Welfare and Protection Policy during the reporting period.
National Social Welfare Policy	Prioritizes the development of action plans and policies that target children subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking. (28) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Social Welfare Policy during the reporting period.

Child labor elimination and prevention strategies are not included in the Revised National Youth Policy, the Education Sector Plan, the Rubber Industry Master Plan, nor the National Employment Policy. (23,29-34)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Anti-Trafficking Awareness Campaign†	Aims to raise public awareness of human trafficking through the use of radio and billboard messages. With significant international support, Liberian security institutions conducted events around World Day Against Trafficking in Persons, which included training security officials on human trafficking. (6)
Liberia Social Safety Nets Project (2017–2021)	$10 million World Bank-funded 4-year project implemented by MOGCSP that aims to establish key national safety net delivery systems and provide support for low-income households. (35) During the reporting period, as part of project's efforts to establish the key building blocks of a basic national safety net delivery system, the Liberia Household Social Registry has profiled and collected data for over 200,000 households in Bomi, Bong, Maryland, and Nimba Counties. The Social Cash Transfer has provided income support to 18,286 households, via mobile money, in 3 counties out of the targeted 27,500 households. (35)
Shelters†	MOGCSP-operated shelters for vulnerable street children in Lofa and Nimba Counties. (7,15) During the reporting period, the program provided shelter for approximately 35 children who were victims of abuse along with an additional 15 victims of gender-based violence. In addition, the government established a shelter for victims of human trafficking and child labor with capacity to accommodate at least eight victims at a time, with five additional mattresses on standby. (36) The Government of Liberia also made financial resources available for the establishment and management of a new shelter for victims of child labor and human trafficking, and agreed to provide nighttime security services for the shelters. (6)
Attaining Lasting Change for Better Enforcement of Labor and Criminal Law to Address Child Labor, Forced Labor and Human Trafficking (ATLAS) Project	USDOL-funded project implemented by Winrock International and partners Verité and Lawyers Without Borders to build the capacity of the government to address child labor. During the reporting period, the MOL participated in trainings that helped develop guidelines for child labor monitoring systems. (3) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

Program	Description
U.S. Government-Funded Projects	Projects that aim to improve access to education and improve child protection. Includes Accelerated Quality Education for Liberian Children and the McGovern-Dole International Food For Education and Child Nutrition Program, implemented by USDA. (15) In addition, International Development Law Organization (IDLO), with funding from the USDOS Bureau of International Narcotics and Law Enforcement Affairs, built the capacity of 170 law enforcement officers from the Liberia Drug Enforcement Agency, Liberia Immigration Service, LNP, MOJ, and MOL on trafficking in persons prevention and response. (3)

† Program is funded by the Government of Liberia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (37)

Although the government funds social programs, they are not sufficient to address all sectors in which child labor occurs, including in domestic work, the production of rubber, and the mining of gold and diamonds. (15)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Liberia (Table 11).

In 2021, Madagascar made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government released studies measuring the prevalence of child labor in mining and street begging and officially launched its action plan to target child labor in the mica sector. Criminal law enforcement officials also secured arrests and convictions for cases involving child pornography and commercial sexual exploitation of children. In addition, the government initiated a new program in collaboration with UNICEF to improve, among other targets, education and child protection. Although Madagascar made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas, the government failed to investigate reports of some officials accepting bribes to produce and issue false identity documents to facilitate commercial sexual exploitation of minors. Children in Madagascar are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in domestic servitude and commercial sexual exploitation. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the mica mining sector and in agriculture, including in the production of vanilla. Limited resources for the enforcement of child labor laws may impede government efforts to protect children from the worst forms of child labor, and social programs to address child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Madagascar are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and domestic servitude. Children also perform dangerous tasks in the mica mining sector and in agriculture, including in the production of vanilla. (I-3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Madagascar. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Children in Madagascar, particularly those from rural and coastal regions and from poor families, are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation, domestic servitude, forced begging, and forced labor in mining, fishing, and agriculture. (3,7,20) Girls in particular are lured by peers, family members, and pimps to engage in commercial sexual exploitation in tourist locations, cities, vanilla-growing regions, and mining areas. (3,7,15,17) Children from rural villages are often sent to larger cities as domestic workers, in which they are subjected to harsh working conditions, including long hours, poor accommodations, and low salaries. Girls working in domestic service are also more vulnerable to being raped by their employers. (7,8,10) In addition, children recruited by agencies into domestic work are sometimes subsequently subjected to commercial sexual exploitation. (20,21) Reports also suggest a recent increase in the commercial sexual exploitation of boys. (3,20) Children in cities are subjected to online sexual exploitation in which parents or relatives are coerced into making children perform sexual acts on the Internet, with payment received through international money transfers. (10) Sources indicate that some local government officials in tourist areas such as Nosy Be issue false identity documents to minors in exchange for bribes from tourists in order to facilitate child commercial sexual exploitation. (3,18,22) Child protection observers in Toliara have made similar claims against local birth registration officials. (22) Despite these allegations, there have been no reports of government actions to investigate or prosecute public officials who participate in or facilitate child sex tourism. (3,18,22)

An estimated 47 percent of children ages 5 to 17 are engaged in child labor, with 32 percent working in hazardous conditions. The Matsiatra Ambony and Androy regions have the highest rates of working children. (8,23) Estimates from the ILO suggest that children work primarily in the informal sector and in agriculture, and perform hazardous work in agriculture, mining, and fishing. (7) During the reporting period, the Ministry of Population conducted a study of street children in Antananarivo which found that almost half lived off of street begging. (10)

In addition to economic challenges brought about by the COVID-19 pandemic, drought and famine-like conditions in the southern region of Madagascar have exacerbated poverty conditions and pushed more than 100,000 children to the brink of starvation, prompting them to abandon school to beg or forage for food. (10,24) The combination of economic insecurity, hunger, and lack of education may put more children at risk of labor exploitation.

Recent reports indicate that an estimated 10,000 children work in the mica sector in the southern region of Madagascar, including in constructing mines, extracting and sorting mica, and hoisting loads of mica out of mines. Young girls are also vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation around mica mining sites. (2,7,20) An estimated 50 percent of those working in mica mines are between the ages of 5 and 17, according to a study conducted by the Ministry of Mining in 2021. (10) Children as young as age 10 are involved in mining gold and sapphires in the regions of Analamanga, Anosy, Ilakaka, and Vakinankaratra. Children in the mining sector suffer from respiratory problems due to inadequate protective equipment, use heavy and dangerous tools, and work in the hot sun. (7,12,15,17) In addition, children working in the production of vanilla in Madagascar are exposed to extreme temperatures and work for long hours. (6) There are reports that children are increasingly recruited by adults to engage in vanilla theft because they are less likely to be pursued by security forces or subjected to mob retaliation. (9) In fishing, children dive deep underwater with no protection or breathing devices, while children involved in stone quarrying use dangerous tools with no protection and work in the outdoor heat. (8)

Although the Constitution guarantees free compulsory education, in practice, access to education is often limited for some children. Barriers to education include a lack of school infrastructure, unqualified teachers, limited transportation to schools in rural areas, costs for school fees and supplies, and school violence, all of which leave children vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (6,7,10,25,26)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Madagascar

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Civil Services and Labor's Division for the Prevention, Abolition, and Monitoring of Child Labor (PACTE)	Enforces child labor laws, trains inspectors, and coordinates and evaluates efforts to eliminate child labor. Also oversees national and regional child labor coordination committees. (7,35,36)
Ministry of Justice	Enforces laws pertaining to violence against children, including human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (7,35) Works with Department-level courts to prosecute child labor cases. (7,8,37)
Ministry of Public Security's National Civil Police Force Morals and Minors Brigade	Investigates criminal cases involving minors, including issues pertaining to human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation in urban areas. (7,35,38) Employs an all-female police unit (Proximity Female Brigade) that works with victims of violence, including child workers, by conducting investigations, directing victims to social services, and raising awareness. (7)
Ministry of National Defense's National Gendarmerie Morality and Child Protective Services	Investigates criminal cases involving children, including those related to the worst forms of child labor in rural areas. (7,35,39)
Ministry of Population, Social Protection, and the Promotion of Women (MPPSPF)	Develops and implements programs to protect vulnerable children, including victims of the worst forms of child labor. (7) In collaboration with UNICEF, manages over 700 child protection networks to protect children in all 22 regions of Madagascar. (3,7,40)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Madagascar took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Civil Services and Labor that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial and human resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Labor Inspectorate Funding	$31,820 (7)	$27,000 (10)

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (7)	Yes (10)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (7)	Yes (10)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (7)	Yes (7)

The government did not provide information regarding child labor law enforcement efforts during the reporting period and acknowledged a general lack of labor inspectorate data. (10) Further, the government did not provide information on the number or types of inspections conducted, nor on the number of violations identified for inclusion in this report.

A labor inspector strike over back pay and the authority to assess penalties that began in November of 2020 continued into the reporting period, though due to the famine situation in the south, inspectors in September agreed to end the strike without obtaining concessions from the government. (7,10)

The government increased the number of labor inspectors during the reporting period, but the number is still likely insufficient for the size of Madagascar's workforce, which includes almost 14.5 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed economies, Madagascar would employ about 362 labor inspectors. (41) The government itself has noted that the current number of inspectors is insufficient, indicating that its inspector workforce is not even able to cover the formal sector, much less the informal sector, in which most child labor occurs. (10) In addition, the concentration of labor inspectors in the capital hampers the enforcement of child labor laws in rural areas. (42) The government has indicated that funding was not sufficient to effectively carry out inspections nor cover the expenses of regional offices, most of which do not have transportation to travel to worksites. (7)

Even though the labor inspectorate has the authority to conduct proactive unannounced and routine inspections, in practice, most inspections occur in response to complaints received. (7,8)

While child labor-related training is provided to new inspectors, the Division for the Prevention, Abolition, and Monitoring of Child Labor (PACTE) has indicated that the course is only 20 hours and insufficient to cover all relevant issues, particularly because refresher courses are not provided. (8,10) In addition, although Madagascar's list of hazardous occupations for children was expanded in 2018, reports indicate that the government was slow to disseminate the law's new requirements and has not taken steps to enforce it. (9) Madagascar has a complaint mechanism via a national child abuse, "147," hotline; however, most of the calls received are related to general violence against children. There is no recordkeeping system to track calls specifically related to child labor issues. (7,8,10)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Madagascar took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial and human resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (7)	Yes (10)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (7)	N/A
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (7)	No (10,43)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (7)	Unknown
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (7)	Unknown
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (7)	Unknown
Number of Convictions	Unknown (7)	Unknown
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (18)	Yes (10)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (7)	Yes (10)

During the reporting period, authorities identified 22 child trafficking victims after investigating complaints through the national "147" hotline. All the identified children were referred to social services, but the cases did not generate criminal investigations. (22) Meanwhile, the National Office to Combat Human Trafficking (BNLTEH) identified 20 child trafficking victims in its database. UNICEF's Child Protection Network also reported identifying 630 forced labor and sex trafficking victims under the age of 18, all of whom were referred to social services. (22)

In June 2021, authorities arrested a 42-year-old woman for recruiting and using underage girls in the production of pornographic films. The investigation and subsequent arrest included close cooperation with U.S. FBI officials. (10,22) Meanwhile, a court in Toliara convicted three individuals, including a foreign tourist, on commercial sexual exploitation charges stemming from the 2020 arrest of seven individuals. The individuals were sentenced to 5 years in prison. (10,22) In addition, two foreigners and a Malagasy woman were arrested and prosecuted for drugging female victims, including underage girls, and forcing them into prostitution. (22)

Madagascar

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The government did not provide complete information on its criminal law enforcement trainings, investigations, violations found, prosecutions, or convictions related to the worst forms of child labor for inclusion in this report. However, during the reporting period, BNLTEH provided training for police officers to improve investigations of child sex tourism. (22)

Research found that there is a lack of funding, trained staff, equipment, and transportation at all levels of government to adequately conduct criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor. (8,18) Furthermore, weaknesses across Madagascar's court system hamper efforts to prosecute perpetrators of the worst forms of child labor. (18) For example, trafficking cases involving children are often investigated as child abuse and thus outside the purview of courts with human trafficking expertise. In addition, criminal appeals procedures often result in suspects being released from custody and eventually evading imprisonment. (18)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Council to Combat Child Labor (CNLTE)	With PACTE participation, coordinates programs and advises on child labor legislation and regulations. (17,44,45) During the reporting period, the council commemorated the World Day Against Child Labor with an event in July to officially launch the joint action plan to combat child labor in the mica sector. (10)
Regional Committees in the Fight Against Child Labor	Coordinate, monitor, and evaluate all activities relating to the elimination of child labor in each of Madagascar's regions. Identify activities to promote the elimination of child labor and compile, analyze, and report child labor data to PACTE. (35,45) During the reporting period, the Sava regional committee provided trainings to local members and assisted in developing child labor action plans, as well as conducted public awareness campaigns. (10) Meanwhile, the Atsimo Andrefana regional committee implemented a mapping project to identify child labor among street children that resulted in the identification of 100 such children. The committee is working to connect the identified children to appropriate social services. (10)
National Office to Combat Human Trafficking (BNLTEH)	Coordinates anti-human trafficking efforts in Madagascar and is responsible for implementing the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons. Chaired by the Office of the Prime Minister, includes representatives from the Ministries of Civil Services and Labor, Justice, and MPPSPF. (3,32,44) During the reporting period, continued maintaining the trafficking in persons database launched in 2020 and took steps to coordinate progress on implementing the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons. (10)
National Child Protection Committee	Guides and coordinates national child protection policy and programs. Chaired by the Minister of MPPSPF, comprises a steering committee and a technical commission of specialists. (35,46) Due to the pandemic, plans to revise the decree establishing the committee were delayed until late 2021 and thus members of the committee did not meet during the reporting period. However, in 2021, the MPPSPF launched a new initiative to strengthen the child protection system and established a ministerial technical committee to work with other ministries, civil society organizations, and social worker groups to monitor progress on the new initiative. (10)

Although the National Council to Combat Child Labor (CNLTE) developed a national strategy that identifies the roles various ministries would play in addressing child labor in the mica sector, the government amended its budget in 2020 to redirect funds intended for child labor activities to other priorities deemed more important during the pandemic. Overall, the CNLTE, the Regional Child Labor Committees, and the National Bureau to Combat Human Trafficking lack sufficient funding to effectively operate and coordinate efforts to address child labor. (6,7,9,19,20,22,25,37)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Joint Action Plan to Address Issues Affecting Children and Households in Mica Exploitation in the Anosy Region†	Developed through a joint initiative between the Ministries of Mines, Labor, and Population, aims to reduce child labor in the production of mining in the southern region. Drafted in collaboration with international and civil society organizations. (7,47) Launched by the Ministry of Labor in July 2021, included field visits during the year. Due to limited funds, no other actions were taken to implement the policy during the reporting period. (10)
Code of Conduct for the Protection of Children in the Tourism Industry	Aims to prevent the commercial sexual exploitation of children in the tourism industry. Implemented by the Ministry of Tourism and supported by the ILO and UNICEF. (48,49) In 2021, the Ministry of Tourism announced a new strategy to address issues in the tourism sector, which includes revisions to the code of conduct. The ministry also continued to implement public awareness campaigns to remind travelers about prohibitions on child sex tourism. (10,22)
National Social Protection Policy	Aims to protect children from abuse, violence, and exploitation, and promotes improved access to education and livelihood services for vulnerable children. Led by MPPSPF and supported by international donors. (44,50) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Social Protection Policy during the reporting period.

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (51)

Madagascar's National Action Plan to Eliminate the Worst Forms of Child Labor expired in 2019. Although no steps have been taken to develop a new action plan, the CNLTE conducted a limited assessment of the plan in 2021 but was unable to finalize its review due to restrictions related to the pandemic and consequent budgetary changes. (10) Similarly, the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons expired in 2019, and a draft version has yet to be finalized. (10)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Social Support and Reintegration Centers‡	Government program that provides social and reintegration services for victims of child labor and child exploitation. Includes the Manjary Soa Center, the Vonjy Centers in Antananarivo, Toamasina, Nosy Be, and Mahajanga, and the Centre d'Accueil d'Urgence emergency shelter. (7,17,21) The various centers remained active during the reporting period. (22)
Social Safety Net Programs	Cash transfer programs targeting vulnerable children and families, including UNICEF's Let Us Learn program that provides conditional cash transfers to help families overcome barriers to educational access; the Development Intervention Fund that provides conditional cash transfers requiring project participants to enroll their children in school; and funds dispersed via an agreement between the World Bank* and the government in 2021 providing cash transfers to families impacted by the COVID-19 pandemic and drought conditions in the south. (10)
Elimination of Child Labour in Madagascar's Mica Sector*	Launched in 2021, targets child labor in the mica sector in southern Madagascar by removing children from mines and providing families with income-generating alternatives. Implemented by Terre des Hommes, Netherlands, UNICEF Netherlands, UNICEF Madagascar, and VDL, also aims to provide technical assistance to the Government of Madagascar by generating a database of mining activities in the country. (52)
UNICEF Country Program (2021–2023)*	UNICEF-funded $202.7 million program that supports the government's efforts to improve education, health, nutrition, and protection for children in Madagascar. (53,54)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Madagascar.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (35,55)

The Ministry of Population, Social Protection, and the Promotion of Women (MPPSPF) manages a child protection network in coordination with other ministries, including the Ministry of Civil Services and Labor's regional child labor committees, to address child exploitation and provide social and health services to child victims. (3,7,22) While the network remained active during the reporting period, research has shown that the government does not adequately fund the network or provide access to public hospitals and health units, requiring the network to rely heavily on international organizations to provide services. (3,7,22,56)

Madagascar

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Although Madagascar has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to address the extent of the problem, particularly in agriculture, commercial sexual exploitation, domestic work, and mining. (25,57)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Madagascar (Table 11).

In 2021, Malawi made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Office of the President assented to legislation amending the Employment Act, establishing provisions that abolish the tenancy system. The tenancy system, which causes tenant farmers and their families to fall into debt bondage, has been a source of forced labor, including for children. In addition, the government launched the National Child Labor Advocacy and Communication Strategy to support the implementation of the National Action Plan on Child Labor and published a Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey, which included updated statistics on the prevalence of child labor in Malawi. However, children in Malawi are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in the harvesting of tobacco and in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Minimum age laws do not meet international standards because protections do not extend to children working in private homes and on non-commercial farms. The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor for inclusion in this report. Moreover, gaps continue to exist in labor law enforcement related to child labor, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Malawi are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced labor in the harvesting of tobacco and in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1) In 2021, the Government of Malawi, with the support of UNICEF, supported a Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey, which included modules on child labor and children's participation in hazardous work activities. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Malawi. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	22.9 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	89.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	26.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		80.3

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6, 2020. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of tea (1,5-7)
	Planting and harvesting tobacco,† including cutting and bundling, weeding, and plucking (1,5,6,8-10)
	Herding livestock (1,11)
	Fishing (1)
Industry	Brickmaking† (11)
	Construction† (1,11)
Services	Domestic work (1,12,13)
	Begging† (1)
	Vending (1,14,15)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,6,8,16,17)
	Forced labor in herding goats and cattle, farming including tobacco, fishing, brickmaking, domestic work, and work in small businesses such as rest houses and bars (1,6,17-19)
	Forced begging (17)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Malawi are engaged in hazardous work in the production of tobacco. (1,21-23) Children who handle tobacco risk illness from nicotine absorption, including green tobacco sickness. (22,24) They are exposed to pesticides, chemicals, and harsh weather conditions; they also utilize sharp tools. (22) Some children work alongside family members who are tenants on tobacco farms. (8,22,25) In the tenancy system, tenants’ pay is based on the quantity and quality of the tobacco sold to farm owners after the harvest season, and parents have an incentive to use their children to increase their earnings. Tenants often incur loans from farm owners during the growing season; in many cases, they are unable to repay these debts, resulting in them, and often their families, falling into debt bondage. (8,26,27) Many children working under these conditions do not attend school. (22)

Most child trafficking for labor in Malawi takes place within the country. (28) Traffickers transport teenage boys from southern Malawi to the central and northern regions for forced labor on tobacco farms, herding of goats and cattle, and brickmaking. (17,28,29) Children in Malawi are subjected to human trafficking to other countries, including Mozambique, South Africa, Tanzania, and Zambia. (30,31) Traffickers may charge children for their clothing and housing; children may be forced to work in debt bondage because of these charges. (32) Girls from rural areas sometimes move to larger cities in search of work. In some cases, they receive clothing and lodging from brothel owners and bar owners; if unable to find other work, the brothel owners may exploit them as bartenders or in commercial sex work to pay off their debts. (8,17,29) Girls living in the Dzaleka Refugee Camp are vulnerable to commercial sexual exploitation. (17)

Primary education is tuition-free and, since 2018, the government has abolished secondary school fees to facilitate access to secondary education. (33,34) However, considerable barriers to education exist, including families’ inability to pay required school-related expenses, such as books and uniforms. (1,35) Long distances, a lack of teachers, poor school infrastructure, and the lack of water, electricity, feminine hygiene products, and sanitation facilities also negatively impact children’s attendance at school. (1,12,13,23,35) In addition, safety concerns may negatively affect attendance; reports indicate that children are sometimes survivors of sexual assault at school by both peers and teachers. (35) Additionally, many girls in grades six to eight are withdrawn from school to perform domestic work at home. (13) Orphaned children and children with family members with HIV/AIDS may need to assume responsibility as heads of their households, including working to support their families. These children, especially those who become orphaned, are at increased risk of leaving school early and entering into the worst forms of child labor. (36,37)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Malawi has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Malawi's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including lack of legal protections for children working in private homes and on farms.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Section 21 of the Employment Act (38)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Section 22 of the Employment Act; Section 23 of the Constitution (38,39)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Sections 1–9 and Paragraph 6 of the Employment (Prohibition of Hazardous Work for Children) Order (40)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Section 4 of the Employment Act (2021); Section 27 of the Constitution; Sections 140–147 and 257–269 of the Penal Code; Sections 79 and 82 of the Child Care, Protection and Justice Act; Sections 2 and 14–16 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (39,41–44)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Sections 140–147 and 257–269 of the Penal Code; Section 79 of the Child Care, Protection and Justice Act; Sections 2 and 15–16 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (41–43)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Sections 137–138, 140, 142, 147, and 155 of the Penal Code; Sections 23 and 84 of the Child Care, Protection and Justice Act; Sections 15 and 20 of the Trafficking in Persons Act (41–43)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Section 19 of the Defense Force Act (45)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Article 13 of the Education Act (33)
Free Public Education	Yes		Articles 2 and 13 of the Education Act (33)

* Country has no conscription (45)

In 2021, the President assented to amendments to the Employment Act to ban the use of tenant labor, the final step for legislative approval. (1,29) Under the new law, any person who enacts or imposes forced or tenancy labor will be liable for a fine of $6,000 and 5 years imprisonment. (44) Families working under the tenancy system are particularly vulnerable to debt bondage because loans advanced to farmers operating under this arrangement are often of a higher value than the profits farmers receive from crop yields. (26,27)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Section 21 of the Employment Act sets the minimum age for employment at age 14 for agricultural, industrial, or non-industrial work. (38) The minimum age does not extend to workers in private homes, such as in domestic work, or non-commercial agriculture sectors in which children work. (38,46) The minimum working age also is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (33) Malawian law does not have criminal provisions for the use of children in illicit activities, such as the selling of drugs. Furthermore, although non-state armed groups are not known to recruit children for military activities in the country, Malawi law does not meet international standards because it does not explicitly prohibit this practice. (47)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MOL)	Performs inspections and investigates all labor complaints, including those related to child labor. Through its Child Labor Unit, monitors and implements child labor law compliance through child labor monitoring visits. (1,48) Coordinates with the Ministry of Homeland Security and the Ministry of Gender, Children, Disability and Social Welfare (MGCDWSW) to investigate and refer children for social services, respectively. (1)
District Labor Offices	Enforce child labor and trafficking in persons laws at the district level. (1)
Malawi Police Service	Investigates suspected cases involving the worst forms of child labor. Analyzes and operationalizes systems to track human trafficking trends. (1)
Ministry of Homeland Security	Leads criminal law enforcement and prosecution related to human trafficking laws, coordinating with MGCDWSW on protection and child trafficking issues and MOL on monitoring labor conditions. (29)
Ministry of Justice	Prosecutes criminal offenders of the worst forms of child labor. (1,49)
Tobacco Commission	Oversees regulation of the tobacco industry and enforcement of the Tobacco Industry Bill, including child labor issues. Receives annual reports from tobacco growers on child labor issues in their supply chains, including efforts to prevent and eliminate child labor, and may penalize, including canceling the registration of growers who fail to satisfactorily report on child labor in their annual reports to the Commission. (1,50)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Malawi took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Under Malawian law, child labor is a criminal offense and, as such, labor investigators refer violations related to child labor to criminal law enforcement authorities for investigation and the imposition of penalties. (38) The government did not provide information on its labor law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report; however, research indicates that funding resources are likely inadequate to enforce laws related to child labor. (1,8) While the number of labor inspectors is unknown, according to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in least developed economies, Malawi would need to employ about 123 labor inspectors as its workforce consists of more than 5 million workers. (54,55) Due to personnel and resource constraints, most labor inspections take place in or near major towns where district labor enforcement offices are located, leaving workplaces in remote and rural locations less protected. (1,5) To increase monitoring of the tobacco sector, the MOL and tobacco companies have an MOU that includes industry support for training of labor inspectors and financing of labor inspections on tobacco farms, such as covering transportation costs to inspection sites. (1) The MOU also establishes a complaint mechanism by which field technicians working for tobacco companies report child labor findings to labor officers for follow-up investigation and response. (5,56)

Although research could not determine the total number of child labor violations identified through labor inspections during the reporting period, there were 111 child labor violations for the period of July 2021 to February 2022; of this total, 98 children were withdrawn from child labor, of which 44 were sent back to school, 4 were placed in vocational training, and 41 received other rehabilitation measures. (53) Similarly, in fiscal year 2020–2021 (July 2020 to June 2021), there were an estimated 553 children withdrawn from child labor, of which 241 were returned to school, 62 were repatriated, and 11 received rehabilitation measures. There is no publicly available information on the whereabouts of the remaining children. (1) The MOL has a program for individuals to report potential labor law violations through phone calls, social media, and at labor offices. The MOL also maintains a labor information management system to capture and store information on labor law violations, including child labor cases. (1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

Research did not find information on whether criminal law enforcement agencies in Malawi took actions to address child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (5)	Yes (1)

The government does not operate a hotline, rather it works with a local NGO that operates a 24-hour National Helpline Service; during the reporting period, the NGO received 119 calls related to human trafficking, of which 51 pertained to children. (1) The government did not provide comprehensive information on its criminal law enforcement activities for inclusion in this report. (1) Although the Malawi Police Service reported 78 arrests, involving 133 victims, and 7 convictions during the reporting period for crimes related to trafficking in persons, research could not verify the ages of the victims and whether the cases pertained to the worst forms of child labor. (57)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Many children in Malawi lack birth certificates. The inability of law enforcement officials to verify the ages of child survivors of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation may have impeded efforts to prosecute traffickers under the Child Care, Protection and Justice Act, and the Trafficking in Persons Act. (58) In addition, police sometimes arrest and detain child sex trafficking survivors alongside adults. In some instances, these children fall victim to abuse, including sexual extortion, by the police. (1,17)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of standardized guidelines for coordination across agencies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee on Child Labor	Provides policy guidance to support the elimination of child labor and implementation of the National Action Plan on Child Labor. Chaired by the Ministry of Agriculture, with MOL acting as the main technical advisor and secretariat, and includes representatives from government ministries, including Homeland Security and MGCDSP, as well as trade unions, employers, development partners, and civil society organizations. (1,36,59) Also includes the National Technical Working Group on Child Labor and Protection, which oversees child protection issues and development of child labor elimination strategies for approval by the National Steering Committee on Child Labor. (60) Active during the reporting period. (1)
District and Community Child Protection Committees	Coordinate all child protection activities at the district and community levels and improve local coordination of child protection issues. Trained 80 district child protection workers in case management and psychosocial support; 18 case workers were active during the reporting period. (1,61)
National Coordination Committee Against Trafficking in Persons (TIP)	Coordinates and oversees investigations and prosecutions, training, survivor care, and human trafficking data collection. Mandated by the Trafficking in Persons Act of 2015. (62) In 2021, oriented 118 senior traditional leaders on TIP and the smuggling of migrants; sensitized 35 representatives of faith-based organizations on TIP and the smuggling of migrants; trained 82 labor officers, 78 journalists, and 34 investigative journalists on their roles in addressing TIP; carried out meetings to review progress and plans; and conducted monitoring and evaluation of the activities of districts coordination committees in order to strengthen the district level response to TIP. (63)

MOL officials, District Child Protection Committees, and Community Child Protection Committees lack standard guidelines for training on child labor issues, leading to lapses in case management and coordination of child labor responses. The MOL is coordinating with Winrock International to develop uniform guidance and training procedures to respond to child labor. (5)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of harmonization of child labor into key national policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan (NAP) on Child Labor (2020–2025)	Outlines the government's strategies for the elimination of the worst forms of child labor, with a focus on six critical areas: (1) laws and policy; (2) the institutional and human resource capacity of stakeholders in child labor elimination; (3) public education and awareness; (4) prevention, withdrawal, rehabilitation, and social re-integration of children in child labor; (5) mitigating HIV/AIDS and other chronic illnesses; and (6) improving the availability of information on child labor. (64) NAP also includes the Child Labor Mainstreaming Guide, which provides guidance to government ministries, departments, and agencies, as well as other stakeholders in addressing child labor. (65) During the reporting period, the government launched the National Child Labor Advocacy and Communication Strategy under NAP. (1) The Strategy aims to coordinate media messaging to raise awareness and sensitize parents to the risks of child labor. (66)
National Children's Policy (2019–2025)	Aims to facilitate the coordination of all policies related to the needs of children to ensure child protection, including the prevention of child labor and trafficking. (67) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Children's Policy during the reporting period.
National Action Plan for the Child (2019–2025)	Reinforces child labor elimination through awareness raising and vocational training for vulnerable children and children withdrawn from child labor. (51,60) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Action Plan for the Child during the reporting period.
National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons (2017–2022)	Outlines objectives to counter trafficking in persons: (1) strengthen prevention; (2) provide support and protection for human trafficking survivors; (3) strengthen detection, investigation, and prosecution of offenses; (4) encourage partnership and coordination; and (5) conduct research, monitoring, and evaluation. (68,69) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons during the reporting period.

Although the Government of Malawi has adopted a National Youth Policy and a National Education Sector Plan, child labor elimination and prevention strategies have not been integrated into these policies. (70,71)

The government is reviewing a draft Child Labor Policy, which will guide the direction of Malawi's efforts to address child labor, including the National Action Plan. The draft policy also includes a light work framework. (5) The government also has drafted an updated National Action Plan for Vulnerable Children, which expired in 2019, but has yet to launch or make these policies available to the public. (5,60)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including lack of implementation of programs.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Child Labor Monitoring System†	MOL system in pilot districts that identifies working children. Collects various data, including school attendance. (1) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Child Labor Monitoring System during the reporting period.
National Social Cash Transfer Program†	MGCDSW-led program that supports low-income families in high-risk districts to enable children to stay in school. (1,5) In 2021, the government made monthly social cash transfers to 292,000 households across the country, a slight increase from the previous reporting period. (5)
Education Assistance Programs†	Government-funded programs to provide educational assistance and support for vulnerable families. (5) Includes the Complementary Basic Education Program, a $1.1 million project that promotes school enrollment for children removed from child labor. (1) As of 2020, the government had 12,000 early childhood development centers, providing services to 2.4 million children through the program; in addition, 2,158,428 primary school learners receive assistance with school meals. (5) Also includes MGCDSW's Early Childhood Development (ECD) Program. The ECD Program supports preschools and parenting groups, supporting 60 government-constructed preschools and plans for construction of an additional 100. (1) To date, 2.7 million children are enrolled in the program. (1)
Orphans and Vulnerable Children Intervention†	$4.9 million USAID and President's Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief-supported program with MGCDSW, that provides education, child protection services, birth registration, and shelter and care to vulnerable children from birth to age 17 through the establishment of community-based care centers. (1) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Orphans and Vulnerable Children Intervention program during the reporting period.

Program	Description
ILO-funded Programs	Multiple-country programs, totaling $9.7 million, aimed at promoting employment, inclusive growth, and social protection; acceleration of progress towards Sustainable Development Goals; elimination of child labor; addressing decent work deficits in the tobacco sector; and other issues related to work and social protection. (72) Include Accelerating Action for the Elimination of Child Labor in Supply Chains (ACCEL), a partnership with the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Netherlands, targeting the elimination of child labor in the coffee and tea sector by addressing the root causes of child labor; strengthening knowledge sharing and collaboration among supply chain actors; and improving policy, legal, and institutional frameworks. (51,73,74) In 2021, the project launched a joint program with the Tea Association of Malawi to advance policies and a code of conduct, including child labor elimination, in the tea sector; presented research on the tenancy system to MOL; and entered into an agreement with the Teachers Union of Malawi to advance school improvements and educational access. In addition, the project supported an updated Occupational Safety and Health Profile that mainstreams child labor issues. (72,75,76) The Decent Work Country Program assisted with updates to Malawi's Occupational Safety and Health Profile and conducting a national dialogue on decent work in the tobacco sector. (1) Also include Addressing Decent Work Deficits and Improving Access to Rights in Malawi's Tobacco Sector (ADDRESS), a 4-year project, with support from the Government of Norway, to address decent work deficits in Malawi's tobacco sector. During the reporting period, the project, with partial support from USDOL's MAP-16, began a quantitative assessment of workers and their families under the tenancy system. (72) Finally, through the Research to Action (R2A) program, ILO, with funding from USDOL, engaged in discussions with the Government of Malawi to map policies and knowledge gaps to develop a National Research Agenda to inform evidence-based policymaking. (77)

† Program is funded by the Government of Malawi.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (5,78,60,79-83)

The government, with the European Union, UNICEF, and the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, supports programs to increase birth registration and data collection in various districts across the country. (80,84) During the reporting period, the government, with support of the ILO, the World Food Program and UNICEF implemented a short-term urban cash transfer program aimed at protecting children and vulnerable urban populations affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. Urban cash transfers reached 53,000 people in 7 towns. (85,86) The government has issued birth registration certificates to approximately 60 percent of the population. Preliminary figures indicate that 1.13 percent of children were issued birth registration certificates during the reporting period. Most of these registrations occurred in urban areas. (87)

An evaluation of the National Social Cash Transfer Program found that, although the program provided benefits for other aspects of children's well-being, it had achieved little reduction of child labor as the work of children only shifted from external employment to labor within the household farm, resulting from families using funds from the program to expand their household agricultural activities. (88) Although Malawi has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem in all relevant sectors, including in domestic service and commercial sexual exploitation.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Malawi (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

In 2021, Maldives made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government enacted the Second Amendment to the Prevention of Human Trafficking Act and established an Anti-Trafficking in Persons Office to implement the Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan 2020–2022. Moreover, after the newly opened permanent shelter for survivors of trafficking was damaged in a storm, the government opened a different temporary shelter. However, although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Maldives are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work, illicit activities, and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in domestic work. The law does not sufficiently prohibit the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Moreover, the government does not have a policy or program to address all relevant worst forms of child labor in the country.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Although research is limited, there is evidence that children in Maldives are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work, illicit activities, and commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in domestic work. (1-4) Information on children's work is limited because a national survey on child labor has not been conducted. Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Maldives.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	3.9 (2,364)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	79.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	4.0
Primary Completion Rate (%)		91.7

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (5)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey (DHS), 2009. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Domestic work (4)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2-4,7-9)
	Forced labor in domestic work (1,4)
	Use in illicit activities, including the trafficking of drugs (2,4,7,10)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Maldivian children from the outer islands are brought to the capital, Malé, for domestic work. Once there, some of these children from impoverished families may be more vulnerable to sex trafficking. (4,11) In addition, some girls from Bangladesh are believed to be victims of human trafficking to Maldives for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation. (4) There are also reports of foreign tourists engaging in commercial sexual exploitation of children. (4,9)

The right to free primary and secondary education is provided to all children, but there is a shortage of trained teachers in Maldives. (8,12,13) In addition, while there are primary schools on all islands, some students must travel to other islands to attend secondary school. In these instances, some children participate in domestic work in exchange for room and board; however, this practice has decreased in recent years. (7)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Maldives has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Maldives' legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including failure to prohibit the use, procurement, and offering of a child for pornographic performances.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	16	Sections 6 and 12 of the Employment Act; Article 26 of the Child Rights Protection Act; Section 8 of the General Regulation on Child Rights Protection (10,12,14)

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 36(b) of the Constitution of the Republic of Maldives; Article 14 of the Education Act; Section 21 of the Child Rights Protection Act (12,13,20)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 36(b) of the Constitution of the Republic of Maldives; Article 5(b) of the Law on the Protection of the Rights of Children; Articles 17–20 of the Education Act (13,20,21)

* Country has no conscription (22)

Adopted in 2020, the General Regulation on Child Rights Protection established guidelines on children's participation in their family's line of work, along with a list of work in which children may not participate. (10)

In April 2021, the Second Amendment to the Prevention of Human Trafficking Act was enacted. The amended Act expressly criminalizes the trafficking children across borders and internally for purposes of exploitation. (17) The definition of exploitation in the Act includes forced labor, forced marriages, and forced engagement in sexual activities or prostitution. (4,8,10,17) However, the laws prohibiting forced labor in Maldives are not sufficient overall as they do not criminalize slavery. Laws prohibiting child trafficking are also insufficient because they require the use of threats, the use of force, or coercion for the crime of child trafficking. (16,17) Moreover, laws in Maldives do not sufficiently prohibit commercial sexual exploitation, because the use, procurement, and offering of a child for pornographic performances are not criminally prohibited. (12,17,18)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Labor Relations Authority, Ministry of Economic Development	Enforces the Employment Act, including child labor provisions. Conducts labor inspections and issues fines for violations. (10,14)
Maldives Police Service (MPS)	The Family and Child Protection Department investigates complaints of child labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Refers cases to the Prosecutor General's Office for prosecution and to the Ministry of Gender, Family, and Social Services to provide victim services. (23) Employs eight officers in Malé to investigate child labor cases, including child commercial sexual exploitation and child pornography cases. (23) The Anti-Human Trafficking Department investigates human trafficking-related offenses and enforces laws prohibiting trafficking in persons, including cases of child trafficking. (4,7) During 2021, led two awareness sessions for 151 MPS officers on human trafficking investigations, target areas, and the second amendment to the Prevention of Human Trafficking Act. (24)
Prosecutor General's Office (PGO)	Independent office established to raise charges and oversee the conduct of criminal matters on behalf of the State. Investigates cases of child exploitation referred by MPS. (2,10) In cases regarding child exploitation and domestic violence, a victim support officer from the PGO's Witness and Victims Support Service Unit and a prosecutor will join the case to ensure the safety of the child victim by identifying imminent threats or probable risks. (2) Research was unable to determine whether activities were conducted during the reporting period.
Children's Ombudsperson	Has oversight functions to ensure that the rights of children are not violated. (2) Tasked with determining the extent to which state institutions adhere to the Child Rights Protection Act and the UN CRC, enforcing the implementation of the Act and the CRC, and monitoring and evaluating institutions and personnel involved in protecting children's rights. (25) In 2021, conducted an analysis of the legal framework concerning child labor and disseminated it to key stakeholders. Focus group discussions have been conducted for key stakeholders to identify pathways for collaboration and to highlight gaps in the Child Rights Protection Act and the relevant regulations. (10)
Child and Family Protection Service (CFPS), Ministry of Gender, Family, and Social Services	Oversees efforts to protect children; receives referrals of children who have been exploited, including in commercial sexual exploitation and drug trafficking; investigates cases; and provides care for survivors. (7,10,26) In 2021, the Family and Child Protection Service was absorbed into the CFPS, which has a broader mandate of safeguarding and promoting the interests of children. (26) During the reporting period, two child labor cases were referred to the CFPS. (10)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Maldives took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Labor Relations Authority (LRA) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of training on new laws related to child labor.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2020	2021

During the reporting period, new recruits received on-the-job training and were assigned mentors. Refresher trainings were held for all inspectors and officers; however, labor inspectors were not trained on the new laws related to child labor. (10,24) In addition to labor inspectors, the LRA also utilizes eight investigations officers to conduct inspections. All labor inspections look for child labor violations related to minimum age requirements as well as forced labor and hazardous work, but there are no officers dedicated to child labor issues. (10) The LRA reported that the number of inspections conducted in 2021 was limited due to the COVID-19 pandemic; however, in 2021, the LRA identified 14 children who were not working within the requirements of Section 10 of the General Regulation on Child Rights Protection. (10)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Maldives took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Family and Child Protection Department of the Maldives Police Service (MPS) that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of resources for investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (2)	Yes (10)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (2)	Yes (10)

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (2)	Unknown (10)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (2)	Yes (10)

Four cases of child exploitation involving the use of children to commit criminal offences have been prosecuted since the enactment of the Child Rights Protection Act in November 2019. (10,15) During the reporting period, the MPS held two trainings on human trafficking investigations, target areas, and the second Amendment to the Prevention of Human Trafficking Act. In total, 151 officers participated in the trainings. (24)

The MPS also held 12 refresher sensitization trainings, reaching 400 officers. (24) Moreover, members of the National Anti-Human Trafficking Steering Committee and eight frontline MPS officers participated in a virtual regional training workshop for professionals working in law enforcement agencies, focused on preventing child sexual abuse, exploitation, and child trafficking. Ten participants each from Bangladeshi and Sri Lankan law enforcement agencies also participated. (8) However, the MPS lacked sufficient resources and trained staff to be able to conduct investigations focused on child labor. (8)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Anti-Human Trafficking Steering Committee	Manages all anti-human trafficking activities and implements the country's Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan. Chaired by Ministry of Defense leadership and consists of 10 participating government agencies. (11,16,28) During the reporting period, members participated in a regional training workshop on the prevention of child sexual abuse, exploitation and child-trafficking conducted and funded by ECPAT International and aimed at professionals working in law enforcement agencies. (8) The committee also began implementing the Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan and held five virtual meetings. (29)
Council for Protecting the Rights of the Child	Established under the Child Rights Protection Act to inform the Minister on policies related to the rights of children and care provision, observe adherence to the CRC, advise the Minister on measures to stop violence against children, determine which child rights protection policies achieve the objectives of the Act, and bridge the gap between civil society organizations and policymakers on issues related to protection of children's rights. (10,26) During the reporting period, the council held 18 meetings focused on strengthening child state care mechanism policies and infrastructure, and on formulating action plans and programs to protect the rights of children. (30)
Anti-Trafficking in Persons Office (ATO)*	Established at the Ministry of Defense to implement the Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan and undertake prevention efforts. In 2021, the ATO received a budget of $129,450, secured a dedicated office premises, hired a policy and outreach consultant, and began implementing the National Action Plan. (24)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Anti-Human Trafficking National Action Plan (2020–2022)	Establishes the government's goals to address human trafficking, including creating institutions, coordinating activities, raising awareness, and building capacity. (31) During the reporting period, the National Anti-Human Trafficking Steering Committee worked to revise the Prevention of Human Trafficking Act to align the definition of human trafficking with that of the 2000 United Nations Trafficking in Persons Protocol. It also established a dedicated office (ATO), hired a consultant to conduct policy and outreach work, secured a temporary shelter for survivors of trafficking after the newly constructed shelter was damaged due to weather, and engaged in public awareness efforts with Public Service Media, the IOM, and Mission for Migrant Workers Maldives to improve awareness of human trafficking issues. (8,10,24)

NGOs have stated that the lack of cohesive standard operating procedures that lay out specific roles for all agencies may have resulted in a lack of referrals and the possibility that victims were not identified, given the large number of migrant workers present in the country and the small number of victims identified. (8) However, during the reporting period, the government worked with IOM Maldives to revise the draft Victim Support and Shelter Guidelines, now renamed the Victims Assistance and Shelter Service (VASS) Regulation. The Guidelines aim to create standard operating procedures for victim identification, protection, and reintegration; shelter operations and victim services; and a formal referral system for victims that have been identified. (8) It is anticipated that the Guidelines will be published in 2022. (8)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Research found no evidence of a policy designed to address other relevant forms of child labor, such as forced labor in domestic work or drug trafficking.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Family and Children's Service Centers†	Nineteen Ministry of Gender, Family, and Social Services-operated centers that provide psychosocial support for child victims of abuse and exploitation, four of which provide temporary shelter for victims. (2,32) While reported to be active during the reporting period, research was unable to determine what activities were undertaken.
National Victim Support Hotline (Number 1696)†	24-hour hotline dedicated to receiving reports of human trafficking and child labor. Formerly operated by the MPS but is in the process of being relocated to the ATO. (26) During the reporting period, the hotline was suspended as funding and operations for the line were being discussed between the ATO and the International Police and Line Foundation. (8)
Child Helpline (Number 1412)†	Ministry of Gender, Family, and Social Services-operated helpline established with the support of the MPS and UNICEF to provide advice on social support services and receive reports of violence against children. (26,32) During the reporting period, the Helpline was active 24 hours per day, 7 days a week and received 12,927 calls. A total of 430 new referrals were made to Family and Children's Service Centers. (30)

† Program is funded by the Government of Maldives.

Family and Children's Service Centers and shelters lack adequate financial and human resources, and staff are inadequately trained to deal with cases involving abused and exploited children. (32) During the reporting period, the government established a temporary human trafficking victim shelter in Gulhifalhu on Malé Atoll and launched social and digital awareness campaigns to mark World Anti-Trafficking in Persons Day and International Migrants Day. (10)

However, existing social programs do not specifically address commercial sexual exploitation of children, use of children for drug trafficking, or forced labor in domestic work. Furthermore, no actions were taken to reduce demand for commercial sex or child sex tourism during the reporting period. (8)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Maldives (Table 11).

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2021, Mali made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The transition government imposed and collected penalties for child labor violations, and published data on its labor law enforcement efforts, including the number of labor inspections conducted. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Mali is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continues to implement a practice that delays advancement to eliminate child labor. The government provided support to a non-state armed group that recruited and used child soldiers in Mali. Children in Mali are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in hereditary slavery and in armed conflict. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, particularly in the production of cotton and rice, and in artisanal gold mining. Although Mali's 2012 Trafficking in Persons Law criminalizes trafficking for the purpose of slavery, it does not more broadly criminalize the act of slavery. Malian law also does not explicitly prohibit using, procuring, or offering of children for illicit activities, and allows children under the age of 18 to be penalized as a direct result of forced recruitment by armed groups. In addition, a new National Plan to Eliminate Child Labor has not been finalized or implemented, and social and rehabilitation services remain inadequate for victims of the worst forms of child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mali are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in hereditary slavery and in armed conflict. (1-6) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, particularly in the production of cotton and rice, and in artisanal gold mining. (3,5,7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mali.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children, especially of the Bellah community (black Tuareg), are subject to hereditary slavery in northern and southwestern Mali. (1,3,11,14,19,25,26) Some children are born into slavery, while others are born free but remain in dependent status. As a result, these children, along with their parents, are forced to work for their parents' former masters in exchange for food, money, and lodging. (25) Enslaved children perform agricultural or domestic labor, and are often sexually abused. (25) In 2021, at least 46 displaced child slaves were identified in Mali. (11)

Children, particularly those of Songhai ethnicity, work in debt bondage in the northern salt mines of Taoudenni. (25) As many as 45,753 children in the north, south, and west are also involved in artisanal gold mining, in which they are exposed to toxic substances and extreme temperatures, transport heavy loads of water and minerals, and work long hours. (3,5,11,17,18,27) Research indicated that around mining sites, children are also victims of commercial sexual exploitation and domestic servitude. Research also found that children working in mining sites are involved in the trafficking of narcotics, and that they do not go to school. (5,11) Many of the children working in mines are from neighboring countries in the region. (11)

Some boys placed in the care of Koranic teachers for education are forced by their teachers to beg on the street or work in fields, after which they must surrender the money they have earned to their teachers. (3,25) Research indicates that children forced to beg were not only from Mali, but also from neighboring countries, including Burkina Faso, Senegal, and Côte d'Ivoire. (5,11) While the government frequently encounters cases of child begging, it does not have the capacity or the appropriate facilities to provide shelter and social services to these children, given the widespread nature of this issue in the country. (5,11)

During the reporting period, there was an increase in child trafficking, forced child labor, and forced recruitment of children by non-state armed groups in Mali due to insecurity from armed conflict, the COVID-19 pandemic, and deteriorating socioeconomic conditions. (11) Also in 2021, terrorist and armed groups recruited children as combatants, spies, laborers, and in other capacities, particularly in northern and central Mali. (28) In addition, armed groups controlled some artisanal gold mines in northern Mali and used children for forced labor at those locations. (5,14,27) As in past years, children continued to be forcibly recruited and used by the Platform, the Coordination of Movements for Azawad, Macina Liberation Front, and Dan Na Ambassagou, among other groups; in 2021, there were at least 352 verified cases of children recruited by these groups, compared with 284 the previous year, with 66 eventually rescued. (6,11) Despite banning the military from recruiting for and using children in armed conflict in 2020, a general in the Armed Forces of Mali (FAMa), El Hadji Ag Gamou, also leads the Imghad Tuareg and Allies Self-Defense Group (GATIA), a subgroup of the pro-government signatory armed group coalition, Platform, which splintered in 2019. (13,14,18,29) During the reporting period, the government continued to provide in-kind support to GATIA, overseen by General Gamou, and to other non-state armed groups that recruited and used children in armed conflict. (12,14,30-32)

Although the Constitution guarantees free and compulsory education, many children, especially girls, do not attend school because parents are expected to pay fees for registration, uniforms, transportation costs, and supplies, as well as teachers' additional salary payments, all of which are cost prohibitive for many impoverished families. (3,7,11,13,33,34) Long distances between villages and schools, and lack of schools, classes, and teachers, are also significant barriers to education. (5,11) In addition, many children in Mali are not registered at birth, which may prevent them from accessing services such as education. (3,7,33,35) Research indicates that there are hundreds of thousands of children in Mali without birth certificates, and that while lack of documentation does not exclude children from schooling, these students may not be allowed to take national exams. (5,11) Evidence also suggests that incidences of physical, psychological, and sexual abuse, including corporal punishment, prevent some children from remaining in school. (19,33) Furthermore, internally displaced children faced interruptions in their education and barriers to enrolling in school after fleeing their homes. (5,11)

During the reporting period, the pandemic, teacher strikes, and insecurity due to terrorist activity significantly affected the education of hundreds of thousands of children throughout Mali. Teaching was postponed for several months due to a series of teacher strikes. (11) A second COVID-19 wave also prompted the government to close schools in 2021. Research indicates that in December of 2021, close to 1,600 schools remained closed due to insecurity, with 120 verified attacks on schools, resulting in 478,500 students without access to education, mainly in the northern and central regions of the country. (6,11)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mali has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Mali's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including recruitment by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation

Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	No		Article 183 of the Penal Code; Articles 18 and 50 of the Child Protection Code (41,42)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 17 of the Child Protection Code; Articles 31.23 and 31.31 of the Penal Code; Article 5 of the Military General Statute (41-43)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 17 of the Child Protection Code; Articles 31.23 and 31.31 of the Penal Code; Article 5 of the Military General Statute (41-43)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No		Articles 31.23, 31.31, and 32 of the Penal Code (41)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Articles 26 and 34 of the Law of Education (44)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 18 of the Constitution (34)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (41)

In 2021, Mali worked to adopt an implementation decree for the amended Labor Code, which was sent to the Ministry of Labor, Civil Service and Social Dialogue (MOL) for signature. (11) Additionally, the National Directorate in Charge of Registering Births, Marriages, and Deaths drafted a law to permit a special session aiming to register and deliver birth certificates and other identity documents, with registrations expected to begin in 2022. (11)

The Ministry of Justice, in collaboration with UNODC, revised the 2012 Anti-Trafficking Law to provide aggravated penalties if human trafficking is committed against anyone under the age of 18, whereas previously aggravated penalties were only applied if the child was under the age of 15. However, drafts of the anti-trafficking law and the migrant smuggling law, which aims to harmonize Malian law with the UN Protocol Against the Smuggling of Migrants, remained pending. (5,7,11,14,30,45,46)

Articles 189.35 and 189.36 of the Labor Code allow children between the ages of 12 and 14 to perform domestic or light seasonal work, as long as it does not impede school attendance or exceed 4.5 hours of work per day. (36) The light work framework does not meet international standards because it applies to children under the age of 13. In addition, the law does not specify the conditions under which light work may be undertaken. (37,47)

Although Mali's Trafficking in Persons Law criminalizes human trafficking for the purpose of slavery, it does not more broadly criminalize the act of slavery, and Mali's Labor Code, while prohibiting forced labor generally, does not specifically prohibit hereditary slavery. In addition, Malian law does not prohibit using, procuring, or offering a child for the production and trafficking of drugs as established by international standards. (1,7,40,42)

While the Child Protection Code provides protection for children under age 18, and the Penal Code establishes criminal penalties for several of the worst forms of child labor, some offenses included in the Child Protection Code do not carry criminal penalties, such as the prohibition of military recruitment by non-state armed groups. (41,42,48) Although the Child Protection Code prohibits children under age 18 from participating in armed conflicts or joining the armed forces, it only provides for imprisonment of perpetrators in the case of repeat offenses. Meanwhile, the Penal Code only provides criminal penalties if the children are under age 15. (41,42)

Article 28 of the Penal Code states that crimes committed out of self-defense or under a force that could not be resisted should not be penalized as prescribed by the Penal Code. Although a 2013 Interministerial Circular on the Prevention, Protection, and Rehabilitation of Child Soldiers states that Article 28 of the Penal Code is applicable to children involved in armed conflict, the Circular does not define the age range of the children it covers. (41,49) This means that some children under age 18 who are affiliated with non-state armed groups may be penalized as a direct result of being a victim of the worst forms of child labor. (41,49)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Civil Service and Social Dialogue (MOL)	Enforces labor laws and investigates Labor Code infractions, including those regarding child labor. (13,33,50)
National Unit to Fight Against Child Labor (CNLTE)	Coordinates and enforces Mali's efforts to eliminate child labor, especially its worst forms. Chaired by MOL and includes representatives from other government ministries, civil society, and worker and employer organizations. (7,13,51,52) One labor inspector in each region is designated as the point of contact for CNLTE to facilitate regional coordination. (3,5,7,53)
Ministry of Justice's Special Judicial Office and Specialized Investigation Brigade	Enforce criminal laws, including those related to child labor, child trafficking, child commercial sexual exploitation, the recruitment and use of child soldiers, and the use of children in illicit activities; initiate and coordinate with courts the implementation of laws related to the worst forms of child labor with the support of several other ministries, including the Ministries of Security, Territorial Administration, Child Promotion, Defense, and Labor. (3,5,11,13,25,50)
Ministry of Security's Police Brigade for the Protection of Morals and Children, and the Brigade to Fight Migrant and Human Trafficking	Investigate crimes against children, including human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (3,7,11,22) The Narcotics Brigade of the National Police ( Brigade des Stupéfiants ) is responsible for investigating the use of children in drug trafficking. (11)

The National Unit to Fight Against Child Labor (CNLTE) received a budget of $55,000 (32 million CFA) in 2021. (11) During the reporting period, the CNLTE carried out several activities to address child labor, including commemorating the World Day Against Child Labor. Several awareness campaigns about slavery and artisanal gold mining were conducted, and a TV advertisement for the state cotton company encouraging producers to send children to school was produced. (11) The CNLTE provided training on child labor to unions, held a workshop for organizations involved in child labor issues, and held two meetings of the National Guiding Committee on Child Labor. The CNLTE considers its budget insufficient, given the extent and severity of the child labor problem in Mali, as it lacks funding to meet its office needs and it does not have a vehicle or fuel for its staff to carry out its mission. (5,11)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Mali took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MOL that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial and human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Research indicates that there are 15 inspectors and comptrollers dedicated to child labor issues. (11) The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Mali's workforce, which includes approximately 6.5 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed countries, Mali would need to employ about 161 inspectors. (53,54) Although all regions have labor inspectors, government services are limited or non-existent in some areas due to the insecurity caused by the presence of non-state armed groups. (3,7,53) In addition, reports indicate that a lack of trained staff, equipment, vehicles and other transportation, and funding hampered both CNLTE and the labor inspectorate's ability to conduct child labor inspections and legal proceedings, especially in remote areas of northern Mali. (3,13,33,53,55) Research indicates that the government rarely collects statistics on the matter, and that there is no central database to maintain any data related to worst forms of child labor. (14)

Research indicates that the reported number of child labor victims is likely lower than the actual number of victims, given the widespread nature of child labor and inadequate enforcement of child labor laws in Mali. (3,5) However, the government did not provide specific data for this report regarding the number of child labor law violations found. (11)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mali took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient financial and human resource allocation.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (5)	No (11)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (5)	N/A (11)

Research indicates that the number of law enforcement agents working for the Brigade for the Protection of Morals and Children (BPMC), 54 personnel, is inadequate given the prevalence of the worst forms of child labor in the country. (3,11) Furthermore, Mali lacks trained staff, equipment, transportation, and funding to adequately conduct criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor, particularly in remote areas. (3,25,53) Reports indicate that because of political instability, which hinders labor and criminal law enforcement efforts in western and northern Mali, the prevalence of hereditary slavery, forced labor, and trafficking in persons has worsened since the conflict began in 2012. (3,13,25,33,53,56) Research showed that the BPMC budget was insufficient, and the force had only three vehicles to conduct inspections and very limited amounts of fuel for each quarter in 2021. Additionally, there were reports that staff did not receive office materials and had to use personal resources for official documents and furniture. (11) Research indicates that in 2021, ten children associated with armed groups were detained by the transitional government, seven of whom were released to civilian partners. Five children were still detained at the end of 2021. (6,28,57)

During the reporting period, the Brigade to Fight Against Migrant and Human Trafficking (BFMHT) saw an increase in staff to 47, up from 17 in 2020. In 2021, the BFMHT dismantled a trafficking network operating at an artisanal gold mine in Yanfolilla and also intervened in several other locations. (11) In 2021, 98 suspected human traffickers were arrested, with some of the victims being children. (11)

During the reporting period, the government did not provide information on whether new criminal investigators received initial training, whether refresher courses were provided, the number of investigations carried out, whether violations were found, whether prosecutions were initiated, the number of convictions, or imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor. In 2021, the BPMC investigated 16 reported cases of mistreatment of children working as domestic staff. (11) Many justice sector actors noted government officials' interference in cases involving slavery-related practices in an effort to have the charges dismissed. (30)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of clarity about the roles of coordinating bodies.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Coordinating Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Associated Practices	Coordinates government efforts to address human trafficking. Chaired by the Ministry of Justice and includes various government agencies and civil society groups. (7,22,58,59) While the National Coordinating Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Associated Practices was active during the reporting period, research could not identify its specific activities. (14)
Ministry for the Promotion of Women, Children, and the Family (MPFEF)	Develops and implements programs to protect vulnerable children and monitors alleged violations of child labor laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. (3,50,60) During the reporting period, MPFEF continued to support and manage agencies responsible for child protection. (11,13)
Interministerial Committee to Prevent Grave Violations Against Children	Led by MPFEF, conducts awareness-raising campaigns to prevent the recruitment and use of children in armed conflict and implements reintegration programs for former child soldiers. (7) Conducts joint missions with international partners to determine the presence of children in armed conflict. (13,50) During the reporting period, the Committee continued to carry out its mission. (13)
Directorate for the Promotion of Children and Family (DPCF)	Led by MPFEF, coordinates issues related to child labor and child protection. Implements the National Policy for the Promotion and Protection of Children. (5,13) During the reporting period, DPCF supported agencies responsible for birth registrations and supported the process of reuniting children with their families who were affected by the crisis in the north. (11)
Artisanal Gold Mining Summit Committee	Monitors recommendations, including the ban on child labor in artisanal gold mines, from a summit on artisanal mining, and comprises gold mining associations and local government officials. (13) Research was unable to determine whether the Artisanal Gold Mining Summit Committee was active during the reporting period.

During the reporting period, the Ministry for the Promotion of Women, Children, and the Family's Directorate for the Promotion of Children and Family (DPCF) continued to support other government departments involved in formally registering children at birth, particularly in the north. Research indicates that children born in the midst of security crises are often unable to acquire a birth certificate. (11) Furthermore, the DPCF also worked to reunite children affected by the security crisis in the north with their families. (11)

Reports indicate that there is confusion with regard to roles and a lack of coordination between the CNLTE and the National Coordinating Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Associated Practices. (13,25,56,61)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation of a new national child labor action plan.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Plan of Action to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2018–2022)	Aims to enhance the legal framework to prevent human trafficking, improve implementation of the laws, and provide effective protection and care for survivors. Led by the National Coordinating Committee for the Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Associated Practices. (62) Calls for the establishment of a formal body to coordinate government efforts to address human trafficking and allocates a budget of $10 million for the 5-year period, or $2 million per year. The government has pledged to contribute $350,000 annually and intends to mobilize development partners and the private sector to provide the remaining financial support needed to implement the plan. (27,61) During the reporting period, several anti-trafficking trainings and community outreach events were carried out. (13)
Interministerial Circular and the Protocol on the Release and Transfer of Children Associated with Armed Groups and Armed Forces	Provides a framework that highlights the responsibility of the government to prevent children's involvement in armed conflict, and to protect and reintegrate those children who become involved. (7,63-65) During the reporting period, at least 31 child soldiers were removed from armed groups. (11)
National Strategic Education Sector Plan (2017–2026)	Sets out a comprehensive map to improve the quality of and access to basic and secondary education, especially in conflict-affected areas of northern Mali. Led by the Ministry of Education and supported by international donors. (13,50) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Strategic Education Sector Plan during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (3,7,66-69)

In 2020, the National Plan to Eliminate Child Labor (PANETEM) ended. While a new PANETEM was being developed during the reporting period, it has not been finalized, and it is expected to be finalized in 2022. The CNLTE organized several regional consultations, and a national workshop to reach final approval was expected to be held at the end of 2021. (11) In November 2021, the Minister of Justice issued a statement directing all public prosecutors to investigate and prosecute perpetrators of hereditary slavery to the fullest extent of the law. (28)

The “Child Travel Card” program (Titre de Voyage pour Enfant), created by the DPCF in 2002, remained a part of the directorate's efforts to address child trafficking by facilitating proper identification of children traveling within and outside Mali. Failure to show a child travel card will prompt follow-up actions to confirm whether the child is a victim of trafficking for forced labor, commercial sexual exploitation, or forced migration. (11) Research indicates that this program does not cover foreign citizens. (14)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Mali Government and NGO-Implemented Programs‡	The Education for All Program ( Le Programme d'Education pour Tous ) is funded by the Global Partnership for Education ( Partenariat Mondial pour l'Education ), which receives funding from multiple agencies, including USAID and the Government of Mali, and is implemented by the Ministry of Education. This program was active during the reporting period. (5,14) The Mali Girls Leadership and Empowerment through Education (2018–2021) (Mali GLEE), a $15 million project implemented by Winrock International, aims to provide educational opportunities to girls by lowering barriers to education, improving girls' safety in school and their communities, and increasing their knowledge and adoption of positive health behaviors. (5,11) Caritas Mali, an NGO that operates three reception centers in Bamako—including a center for boys—provides assistance to girls who are victims of or at risk of commercial sexual exploitation and girls living on the streets. (11)

Program	Description
ILO-Implemented Projects to Combat Child Labor	ILO-implemented projects to address child labor and forced labor in supply chains. These projects include the Clear Cotton Project on Child and Forced Labor (2019–2022), an $8.5 million EU and Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO)-funded global project to address child labor and forced labor in cotton and textile supply chains, and ACCEL Africa, a $26.5 million Government of Netherlands-funded regional project to address child labor in gold mining and cotton supply chains. (11,53,70-72) The South-South Project on Decent Work ( Programme Sud-Sud sur le Travail Décent ) is funded by Brazil ($400,000) and its implementation by ILO started in 2020. The program aims to provide labor inspection training and capacity building to labor inspectors and improve working conditions in cotton production areas by promoting decent work principles and providing social protections to producers. (5)
National Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Program	$25 million UN Multidimensional Integrated Stabilization Mission in Mali-implemented program that aims to provide reintegration services to former combatants in Mali, including children. (7,65) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Disarmament, Demobilization, and Reintegration Program during the reporting period.
Global Action Against Trafficking in Persons and the Smuggling of Migrants (GLO.ACT)	$13 million EU-funded global project implemented by UNODC, UNICEF, and IOM to address human trafficking and migrant smuggling. (73,74) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the GLO.ACT during the reporting period.
Foreign Government and Company-Implemented Programs	Fighting Child Labor in the Value Chain of the Cotton, Clothing, and Textile Industries ( Lutte contre le Travail des Enfants dans la Chaîne de Valeur Coton, Textile, et Habillement ) is a project funded by the EU and FAO and implemented by the ILO between 2018 and 2022. The project reinforces the national legal framework for addressing child labor and forced labor in the cotton sector. (5) The project includes mapping the supply chain of cotton and clothing, taking into account gender considerations. It also includes a quantitative survey of child labor and forced labor in the cotton sector, and involves activities and policies at the local, regional, and national levels. (5) Promoting the Principles and Fundamental Rights in the Cotton Supply Chain Work Environment (2018–2022) was extended until 2022, and is a project funded by Inditex, a Spanish multi-national company working in the cotton sector. This project targets cotton producers in the cotton-producing region of Sikasso and aims to promote a favorable work environment for the protection of fundamental worker rights. (5,11) Includes awareness campaigns and trainings for relevant partners, local associations, and community leaders to develop a monitoring system to ensure respect for fundamental worker rights in the cotton sector. The program also promotes women's rights and women's leadership in cotton producer organizations and cooperatives. (5) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Foreign Government and Company-Implemented Programs during the reporting period.
U.S. Government-Funded Programs	USDOS-funded program to Combat Descent-Based Slavery implemented by the American Bar Association and ILO to address hereditary slavery and forced child labor in Mali. (2,11,30,75,76) The project aims to improve knowledge and awareness of slavery and slavery-based discrimination, increase access to economic empowerment, and strengthen policy, laws, and implementation mechanisms to address slavery and slavery-based discrimination. (11)

† Program is funded by the Government of Mali.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (3,7,77,78)

During the reporting period, Mali continued to carry out a national survey on child labor, which began in October 2020 and is expected to be completed in February 2022. (11) In 2021, the transition government funded an NGO-run training of 60 Koranic teachers (marabouts) on addressing trafficking in persons to raise awareness on the issue, and the transition government also conducted a training for community leaders and marabouts in the capital city, Bamako. (28) In collaboration with the UN, the transition government trained soldiers and law enforcement authorities on how to treat child soldiers as victims and to refer them to the appropriate rehabilitative centers. (28)

While Mali does not fund or participate in programs to address child labor in domestic work, forced begging, or commercial sexual exploitation, it provides in-kind and financial support to NGOs working on these issues. (13,79)

In August 2021, both factions of the Platform armed group signed action plans with the UN to end the recruitment and use of child soldiers, committing to releasing children and supporting their reintegration with their families and back into society. (11,80)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

An informal referral mechanism exists among NGOs, UN bodies, police, and other government agencies to allow withdrawal of children from armed conflict and to provide social services to survivors of the worst forms of child labor. (3,53,61) Despite these efforts, reports indicate that resources and facilities available to social services agencies are inadequate. (3,5,33,53)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED POLICY AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2021, Mauritania made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In January 2022, the Ministry of Labor and Professional Education enacted a decree creating a hazardous work list, identifying 44 forbidden activities.

Further, in a major shift in policy, anti-slavery non-governmental organizations were formally registered, allowing them to operate officially and legally. Lastly, Mauritania reported for the first time the number of labor inspections conducted. However, despite new initiatives to address child labor, Mauritania is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued to implement a policy and a practice that delays advancement to eliminate child labor. Although there were indications of progress, criminal law enforcement authorities did not make adequate efforts to address slavery and its vestiges during the reporting period. In addition, since 2011, the government has required proof of marriage and biological parents' citizenship for children to obtain a birth certificate. As a result, children born out of wedlock and many Haratine and Sub-Saharan ethnic minority children, including those of slave descent, have been prevented from being registered at birth. Because birth certificates are required for enrollment in secondary school in Mauritania, children as young as age 12 cannot access education, making them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. Children in Mauritania are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in indentured and hereditary slavery. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, particularly in herding cattle and goats. The government did not make sufficient efforts to enforce some laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including laws on hereditary slavery. In addition, a lack of financial resources and mitigation measures intended to limit the spread of the COVID-19 pandemic severely limited the government's ability to fully implement policies. Furthermore, social programs to address child labor are insufficient to adequately address the extent of the problem. Moreover, the government did not publish comprehensive information about its labor law enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mauritania are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in indentured and hereditary slavery. (1-4) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, particularly in herding cattle and goats. (1,5-7) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mauritania.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Mauritania, especially from the Haratine ethnic minority, continue to be exploited as slaves and endure slave-like practices, particularly in rural and remote areas of the country. Some children are born into slavery; others are born free but remain in a dependent status and are forced to work with their parents for their former masters in exchange for food, money, and lodging. (3-6,22) Enslaved children herd animals, such as cattle and goats, and perform domestic labor. (3,4,7,10,16,17) Young girls from poor families of Haratine, Wolof, Halpulaar, and Soninké communities are sometimes forced to work as domestic servants in Mauritania’s urban areas. (7)

In Mauritania, it is a traditional practice to send children to Koranic teachers (marabouts) to receive an education. However, some Koranic teachers force their students (talibés) to beg on the streets for long hours and to surrender the money they have earned. (4,7,10,14,18,21)

Mauritania requires proof of marriage and a copy of the national identity cards of the parents or caregivers to obtain a birth certificate. This may have prevented children born out of wedlock and many Haratine and Sub-Saharan ethnic minority children, including from families of slave descent, from being registered at birth. (7,19,24,25) Although all families are required to register children for birth certificates, research found that the civil registration process, including obtaining birth certificates, is confusing and time consuming. Moreover, applicants have faced additional hardship due to the closure of registration centers outside the capital and a lack of training for registration center staff. (24-27) In early 2021, Mauritania canceled the requirement for students to possess a national identity card to take part in the national examinations to obtain the Certificate of Primary Education Studies (CEP). However, national identity cards are still required to take exams necessary to enroll in high school. (7,12,16) Because both birth certificates and the CEP are required to enroll in secondary school in Mauritania, many children as young as age 12 cannot access secondary education, making them more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (6,10,11,19,25,28)

To address some of these challenges, the Ministry of Social Affairs, Childhood, and the Family (MASEF); and the National Child Protection Council have established representation in all regions in Mauritania, and work to identify cases of citizens—including children—who are unable to register birth certificates, and provide them with the support needed to complete the registration process. (29) The government also appointed a special committee, headed by a presidential adviser, to review cases of unregistered applicants and facilitate documentation processes for marginalized and vulnerable communities. As part of the committee’s efforts to facilitate documentation processes, its members have conducted site visits to civil registration centers during which they have provided support to individuals who have encountered difficulty in the civil registration process. (29,30) During the reporting period, the government continued to collaborate with UNHCR to issue birth certificates to Malian refugee children. (10,14,18,31,32)

In Mauritania, the lack of school infrastructure and limited availability of teachers, especially in rural areas, also impede access to education, which may increase children's vulnerability to the worst forms of child labor. (5,7) In addition, children from families of slave descent, especially from the Haratine ethnic minority, face barriers to accessing education due to ethnic discrimination. (11,22,33) Furthermore, refugee children may have difficulty accessing education or finding available classrooms, which makes them particularly vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (4,7,10,12,34,35)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mauritania has ratified most key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Mauritania's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including with the compulsory education age.

In January 2022, the Mauritanian Ministry of Labor and Professional Education (MEFP) enacted a hazardous work list. The list identified 44 types of activities that are prohibited for children, including street vending, domestic work, and stone crushing. (12,37) In addition, in January 2021, the government adopted a new NGO Law (No. 2021-004) to ease NGO registration requirements and move oversight of NGOs operating in Mauritania from the Ministry of the Interior to the Commissariat for Human Rights, Humanitarian Action, and Civil Society Relations. (7,47,48) In October 2021, the government adopted implementation procedures for the law, and in December 2021, the NGO Resurgence of the Abolitionist Movement (IRA) was officially registered by the government. (49) The IRA had been previously blocked from being registered and its members were arrested. (50) Several other human rights NGOs working on non-slavery issues were also officially registered, and have begun to operate officially. (49-51)

The Labor Code allows children ages 12 and older to perform light work as long as it does not impede their school attendance, does not exceed 2 hours per day, and is authorized by the Ministry of Labor. (36) However, the Labor Code does not specify the activities in which light work may be permitted. (52) In addition, children in Mauritania are required to attend school only up to age 14. This standard makes children ages 14 through 16 vulnerable to child labor because they are not required to attend school but are not legally allowed to work. (27,46)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor and Professional Education's Directorate of Labor and Inspection	Enforces labor laws and investigates labor code infractions, including violations related to minimum wage and hazardous work. (33,53)
Ministry of the Interior's Special Brigade for Minors	Investigates crimes against children, including human trafficking, and monitors religious schools ( mahadras ) to ensure that children are not forced to beg on behalf of their teachers. Mainly operates in the capital, Nouakchott. (6,33,54) During the reporting period, continued to employ 30 officers. (7)
Ministry of Justice's Directorate of the Judiciary for the Protection of Children	Assists with the enforcement of child protection issues and oversees tribunals responsible for sentencing offenders of laws related to children. (17)
Anti-Slavery Courts	Prosecute crimes related to slavery and provide free legal assistance to victims, including children. Located in Nema, Nouakchott, and Nouadhibou. (4,55-57)
National Commission for Human Rights (CNDH)	Serves as an independent ombudsman body that advocates for the eradication of slavery, receives human rights complaints, and conducts investigations on human rights violations, including the worst forms of child labor. (6,7,33)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED POLICY AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Interior created the Central Office for the Suppression of Migrant Smuggling and Human Trafficking. This unit is tasked with disrupting irregular migration, and actively searching for trafficking indicators among migrants. (12,49) In November, the National Commission for Human Rights (CNDH) conducted an informational campaign caravan on anti-slavery laws in the northern region of the country in collaboration with the local authorities, the NGO SOS Esclaves, and the UN Human Rights Office. (49)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Mauritania took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the MEFP that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2021, the government hired an additional 161 new labor inspectors. (7) New inspectors receive training on the Labor Code, child labor laws, and on all labor-related conventions the country has ratified. (58) During the reporting period, labor inspectors also received training on child protection issues and on the new List of Hazardous Work Forbidden to Children. (7) Mauritania carried out 570 inspections; this is the first time that these data have been provided for inclusion in this report. However, none of the inspections were carried out in the informal sector, in which child labor is known to occur. (7)

Research found that the MEFP lacked equipment, training, transportation, and funding to conduct inspections, especially in remote locations and in the informal sector, which employs more than 40 percent of the workforce. (5,7,53,59,60) The government did not provide information on its labor law enforcement efforts, including the number of child labor violations found, the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed, the number of child labor penalties imposed that were collected, and whether routine inspections were targeted for inclusion in this report. (10)

Labor inspectors prepare reports when they find a labor violation and may include a recommendation for a penalty, but they are not empowered to assess penalties; they then are required to file the reports with the Ministry of Justice (MOJ). The MOJ, in turn, assesses the penalty for the violation. (7,16)

During the reporting period, the MASEF, in coordination with the MEFP and UNICEF, organized roundtables nationwide to sensitize against child labor and promote the role of inspectors in deterring child labor. Also during the reporting period, the Federation of Artisanal Fisheries organized two campaigns in Nouadhibou and

Nouakchott to sensitize fishing communities on the importance of protecting children from apprenticeship activities in the fishing sector. (7)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mauritania took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient investigation and prosecution of criminal cases related to hereditary slavery.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (10)	No (7)

Number of Investigations	N/A (10)	Unknown (7)
Number of Violations Found	N/A (10)	Unknown (7)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (10)	Unknown (7)
Number of Convictions	0 (10)	2 (12)

During the reporting period, the UNODC coordinated four 5-day training sessions that covered identifying, investigating, and prosecuting human trafficking cases. Trainings benefited a total of 56 magistrates, 18 gendarmes, 14 police officers, and 14 representatives of civil society. (49) Furthermore, the MOJ established legal aid offices throughout the country, tasked with providing legal assistance to trafficking victims. The legal aid offices are managed by representatives from the local government, MASEF, and the Mauritanian Bar Association. (49) However, efforts made by criminal law enforcement authorities to address the worst forms of child labor, including hereditary slavery, remained inadequate given the magnitude of the problem. (61) Research indicates that some police, prosecutors, and judges do not investigate cases of slavery in response to complaints, and that the government has prosecuted cases as lesser offenses to avoid bringing a slavery case to trial. In some cases, this may be due to corruption, lack of political will to prosecute suspected slaveholders, or misunderstanding of the 2015 Anti-Slavery Law. (7,14,61,62) There are also reports that investigative judges who receive anti-slavery cases unlawfully dismiss cases by civil society organizations representing victims of slavery, and that they may try to pressure victims to drop their cases, accept mediation in lieu of prosecution, or reclassify cases as a lesser crime. (10,15,59,60,63) In addition, there are reports that some cases of slavery are resolved through social mediation rather than through the criminal justice system. (14,21)

During the reporting period, the Anti-Slavery Courts handed down two convictions for slavery-related offenses and processed five cases overall. (7,12) Enforcement authorities, including the Anti-Slavery Courts, lack personnel, funding, and training to adequately coordinate and enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (3,4,11,14,55,57,59,64,65) Slavery victims also encounter obstacles when filing complaints, including pressure from judges to drop their complaints. The government's failure to adequately investigate these cases may be due to the insufficient allocation of resources for prosecutions or to a lack of training for judicial officials. (15,59,60,63) During the reporting period, criminal and anti-slavery courts were closed for several months due to the COVID-19 pandemic, resulting in a decline in total cases processed. (49)

The government did not provide information on the number of investigations, number of violations found, number of prosecutions initiated, number of convictions, or imposed penalties for violations related to the worst forms of child labor for inclusion in this report. (7) Furthermore, research found that there was little to no coordination among enforcement agencies. (15,66)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor. (Table 8) However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of inclusion of all relevant agencies to address all forms of child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Ministry of Social Affairs, Childhood, and the Family (MASEF) Office of Childhood	Develops and implements programs to protect vulnerable children and to monitor alleged violations of child labor laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. Manages the Centers for the Protection and Social Integration of Children. (6,53) The Ministry continued to run seven children's shelters during the reporting period. (7)
Human Rights Inter-Ministerial Committee	Created in 2020, and led by the Prime Minister with bimonthly meetings planned. Tasked with coordinating anti-trafficking efforts, implementing the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons, carrying out USDOS Trafficking in Persons Report recommendations, and monitoring the human rights situation in the country. (7,16,20,49) The Committee met at least once during the reporting period. (12)
Inter-Ministerial Technical Committee on Human Rights	Coordinates and monitors government efforts to promote human rights in Mauritania, including those related to UN CRC. Led by the Commissioner for Human Rights, Humanitarian Action, and Civil Society Relations and includes representatives from Taazour , CNDH, and other ministries. (53,67) The Technical Committee was active during the reporting period. (12)
Commissariat on Human Rights, Humanitarian Action, and Civil Society Relations	Coordinates the development and implementation of government policies related to human rights, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. (4,53,68,69) Carries out awareness-raising campaigns to combat slavery and human trafficking and acts as a semi-autonomous body under the supervision of the Office of the Prime Minister, which is also a member of the Human Rights Inter-Ministerial Committee. (4,16,53,68,69) As part of the new government's restructuring, the mandate of the National Agency to Combat the Vestiges of Slavery, Integration, and Fight Against Poverty's ( Tadamoun ) to act as a civil party on behalf of victims of slavery was transferred to the Commissariat on Human Rights, Humanitarian Action, and Civil Society Relations. (14,30,70) In 2021, the Commissariat led the Inter-Ministerial Committee, which met twice. (49) It also worked with the Mauritanian Association for Maternal and Children's Health (AMSME) to operate a hotline for human trafficking and gender-based violence. The hotline has been operational since 2020, and AMSME reported that 546 people called and benefitted from services. The Ministry of Social Affairs also ran radio and television advertisements to promote the hotline. (49)
National Child Protection Council (NCPC)	Aims to develop and implement policies and programs to eradicate all forms of violence against children, including child labor. Chaired by the Prime Minister's adviser on social affairs, includes government and civil society stakeholders that address children's rights. (26,63,71-74) During the reporting period, NCPC met regularly. (12)
General Delegation for National Solidarity and the Fight Against Exclusion ( Taazour )	Coordinates and implements government programs to provide social cohesion, education, economic opportunity, and health services to vulnerable and marginalized populations, including communities of slave descent. (14,75-77) During the reporting period, the government continued to fund Taazour . (49)

During the reporting period, the Commissariat on Human Rights, Humanitarian Action, and Civil Society Relations funded six awareness-raising campaigns on human trafficking in partnership with anti-slavery NGOs such as SOS Esclaves and Flambeau de la Liberté. (49) Between April and July of 2021, the Commissariat also organized 15 workshops with 760 participants to raise awareness and train administrative, judicial, and security authorities. The trainings touched on several criminal law enforcement topics, including Mauritania's legal and institutional framework for combating human trafficking; Mauritania's national commitments to combatting human trafficking; the National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2020–2022); the establishment of the National Authority to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Smuggling of Migrants; and the complaints mechanism of the Office of the Commissioner for Human Rights, Humanitarian Action and Relations with Civil Society. (49) In June, the Commissariat organized a roundtable discussion on the application of the anti-slavery law with participants that included UNHCR, the ILO, the MOJ, the CNDH, the General Prosecutor's Office, the Supreme Court, the presidents of specialized anti-slavery criminal courts, and CSO representatives. Recommendations from the sessions included: appointing someone at the MOJ to be a point of contact on all slavery-related cases, as well as more training sessions for those charged with implementing the anti-slavery law. (49) Additionally, the MOJ, the Commissariat on Human Rights, and the ILO created a follow-up committee to ensure that slavery cases were processed and recommendations from the June roundtable were implemented. (49)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED POLICY AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

From June 9 to 13, the Union for the Republic—President Ghazouani’s ruling political party—held workshops throughout the country that discussed slavery. The workshops not only allowed for open debate on the issue, but they also helped spread awareness about the country’s anti-slavery laws. (49)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including insufficient funding.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Strategy for Accelerated Growth and Sustainable Development (SCAPP) (2016–2030)	Aims to reduce poverty, promote sustainable development, and increase access to fundamental social services. Overseen by the Ministry of Economic Affairs and Development. (78,79) Integrates strategies to increase birth registration and access to compulsory education, strengthen social protection systems for children, and support efforts to combat slavery, including its vestiges. (78) During the reporting period, the government held a regional and a national workshop to evaluate and further define the second phase of the SCAPP. (12)
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2020–2022)	Adopted in March 2020, aims to address forced child labor, forced child begging, forced prostitution, slavery, and other forms of child exploitation. Overseen by the Commissariat on Human Rights, Humanitarian Action, and Civil Society Relations with a budget of $145,946 (5.4 million MRU) for implementation. (20,80) During the reporting period, the government carried out trainings on trafficking in persons, and ran awareness campaigns for government officials and civil society. (12)
National Child Protection Strategy (2020–2025)	Aims to protect children against violence, exploitation, abuse, and neglect. Specifically includes children exploited at work and victims of human trafficking, children living on the streets, and children who are victims of violence or sexual exploitation. (10,81) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Child Protection Strategy during the reporting period.

While the National Action Plan to Eliminate Child Labor (PANETE-RIM) ended in December 2020, the government and the ILO approved a draft PANETE-RIM II in December 2021, which will replace the original plan. (7) Efforts to implement most of the key policies related to child labor continue to be delayed due to insufficient allocation of resources. (12,15,63,82,83)

Mauritania continues to be a Pathfinder country under Alliance 8.7, an international partnership with 22 member countries, and facilitated by the ILO Secretariat. This involves a commitment toward achieving Sustainable Development Goal Target 8.7, which calls for the eradication of forced labor, modern slavery, human trafficking, and child labor by 2025. (84)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Program to Eradicate the Effects of Slavery†	Government program that supports the reintegration and rehabilitation of former slaves. (85) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Program to Eradicate the Effects of Slavery during the reporting period.
Cash Transfer Tekavoul (2015–2025)†	A $45 million Taazour program, supported by the World Bank, the Adaptive Social Protection Program for the Sahel, and co-financed by the German and Mauritanian governments. Provides cash assistance to families with school-age children, conditioned on children’s school attendance. (58,76,77) Was extended for an additional 5 years and allocated an additional $72 million in 2020 to reinforce efforts in the social protection system. (58) Contributes to the G5 Sahel’s Emergency Development Program, as part of new phase. (58) During the reporting period, about 200,000 households in extreme poverty benefited from the program, and 100,000 households were provided with free health insurance. (12)
Centers for the Protection and Social Integration of Children†	MASEF-operated program that provides short-term food, shelter, education, and vocational training to vulnerable children, many of whom are talibés . Operates seven centers in Aleg, Kiffa, Nouadhibou, Rosso, and Nouakchott. (5–7) With financial support from an NGO, managed seven centers around the country in 2021, offering short-term protection and social integration services to vulnerable children, including potential human trafficking victims. (7)

Program	Description
Model Mahadras Program†	Ministry of Islamic Affairs-funded program that provides monthly cash transfers of approximately $27 to parents whose children are enrolled in model mahadras . Also operates adult literacy classes for 8,000 religious leaders ( imams ) across Mauritania to raise awareness of children's rights, including information on child labor and child trafficking. (21) The Ministry continued to implement the Model Mahadras Program during the reporting period. (12)
UNICEF Country Program (2018–2022)	A $13.8 million UNICEF-funded program that supports government efforts to improve education, birth registration rates, social inclusion, and protection for children, including refugees. The program was active during the reporting period. (10,12,86)
Decent Work for Migrant Youth in the Fishing Sector (2017–2024)	A $17 million ILO- and Government of Germany-funded project that aims to promote decent work among youth working in the artisanal fishing sector in Mauritania by reaching at least 9,000 recipients and conducting an analysis of child labor in the fishing sector. ILO continued to implement the program during the reporting period, and the program was extended to 2024. (10,12)
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL-funded global projects implemented by ILO to support global and national efforts aimed at countering child labor and the forced labor of adults and children. Include From Protocol to Practice: A Bridge to Global Action on Forced Labor (The Bridge Project); and the Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP 16) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor (2019–2021), a $300,000 program. (14,87,88) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

† Program is funded by the Government of Mauritania.

Although Mauritania has social programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, especially in agriculture, herding, domestic work, and for children in hereditary and indentured slavery. (7,14,15,53) Moreover, some government officials do not acknowledge that slavery continues to exist. (2,3,21,53,64,89) In addition, the lack of recent data on slavery limits the government's ability to develop effective social programs to comprehensively address this issue. Existing social programs for formerly enslaved persons and awareness of the national laws on slavery are insufficient. (2)

- 89 U.S. Embassy- Nouakchott. Reporting. November 26, 2019.

In 2021, Mauritius made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The Ministry of Gender Equality and Family Welfare enacted the long-awaited Children's Act, which includes more robust provisions related to child prostitution and child pornography violations. The government also enacted the Children's Court Act, which sets out to ensure a child-friendly environment during court proceedings and establishes a Criminal Division with jurisdiction over sexual offenses against children. In addition, the government enacted the Child Sex Offender Register Act, which establishes the Child Sex Offender Register that will assist in monitoring, tracking, and investigating sexual offenses against children. However, children in Mauritius are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities. Children also engage in child labor in construction and street work. There are many barriers to education access, including conditions created by the COVID-19 pandemic, that place children at greater risk of child labor. In addition, gaps remain in the implementation of key policies and social programs related to child labor, including the worst forms of child labor.

Agalega Islands, Cargados Carajos Shoals, and Rodrigues are not shown.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mauritius are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities. (1,2) Children also engage in child labor in construction and street work. (2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mauritius. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Some children in Mauritius are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation by their peers or family members, or through fraudulent offers of other employment. (1,7) There are reports that some children in Mauritius are sexually abused and exploited through online channels. (2,10) Mauritius has never conducted a national child labor survey; accordingly, information on the prevalence of child labor in the country is limited. (2,11,12)

During the reporting period, the COVID-19 pandemic created conditions that put children at more risk of child labor, including school closures in March, April, and November. (2,13,14) The Ministry of Education provided online and televised classes during school closures, but children from low-income households lacked the resources to keep up. (2,15) There are reports of an increase in child labor activities during school closures and the holiday season (November and December), including street work and other informal work. (2,7,16) In addition, children with disabilities faced significant barriers to education due to discrimination and a lack of special services and resources. (17,18)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mauritius has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓

On July 1, 2021, the government ratified ILO C.190, which obligates each Member State to respect, promote, and realize the fundamental principles and rights at work, including the effective abolition of child labor. (19,20) The Convention entered into force for Mauritius on July 1, 2022. (21)

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Mauritius's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the military recruitment of children by non-state armed groups.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

In January 2022, the government enacted three laws aimed at reinforcing the legal framework on the protection of children. (2,31) The long-awaited Children's Act replaced the Child Protection Act with a more comprehensive and modern legislative framework. The Children's Act aims to address the limitations of the Child Protection Act by aligning with international standards on children's rights and includes more robust provisions addressing the offenses of child prostitution and child pornography than the Child Protection Act. (28) The second law is the Children's Court Act, which aims to establish a dedicated court that provides a child-friendly environment in the best interest of the child during court proceedings, and establishes a Criminal Division with jurisdiction over sexual offenses against children. (32) The third law, the Child Sex Offender Register Act, seeks to reduce the risk of sexual offenses against children by establishing a Child Sex Offender Register that will assist in monitoring, tracking, and investigating sexual offenses against children. (33) The Ministry of Social Security is also currently drafting a Disability Bill, which aims to address different forms of discrimination based on disability and support inclusion for disabled persons. (34)

The Workers' Rights Act specifies that a child under age 16 may not be employed to work in any occupation but allows for children to do light jobs in family businesses that are not harmful to their health, development, or education. However, the law does not limit the number of hours for light work. (11,22)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Human Resource Development and Training (MOLHRDT)	Enforces all labor laws, including those related to child labor. (2,18,35)
Office of the Ombudsperson for Children	Investigates any suspected or reported cases of child labor or violation of a child's rights, proposes laws and policies to advance children's rights, and implements trainings on child protection laws and prevention. (10,36,37)
Police Brigade for the Protection of Minors (Family Protection Brigade)	Investigates crimes related to the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking, use of children in illicit activities, and commercial sexual exploitation. (2,5) Maintains a database of all human trafficking incidents involving children and refers all cases of commercial sexual exploitation to the Child Development Unit. (38)
Office of the Director of Public Prosecutions	Undertakes criminal proceedings on laws related to the worst forms of child labor in coordination with the Family Protection Brigade and the judicial courts. (2,39,40)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The Office of the Ombudsperson for Children implemented multiple activities to advance children's well-being during the reporting period, including data collection and disseminating more than 60,000 brochures in June and July 2021 to sensitize the public against online commercial sexual exploitation. (2,10) The Family Protection Brigade conducted 250 awareness-raising sessions at primary and secondary schools, youth centers, and community organizations, reaching a total of 52,036 attendees. (34)

Section 34 of the Children's Act imposes a mandatory reporting obligation on persons performing professional or official duties with respect to children, including health care professionals, employees of childcare institutions, and social workers. Failure of these professionals to report cases in which a child has been or is likely to be exposed to harm makes them liable to a fine of up to $4,500 and to imprisonment of up to 5 years. (28,41)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Mauritius took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Human Resource Development and Training (MOLHRDT) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient coverage in inspection planning.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

‡ Data are from January 2021 to December 2021.

In 2021, the MOLHRDT held 20 training sessions for new recruits and 50 sessions for other officers. The ministry's Labor and Industrial Relations Division also received training on child labor regulations enumerated in the Workers' Rights Act. (2) This division is responsible for enforcing child labor law compliance and manages complaints—including those related to child labor—at 17 regional labor offices. However, the hotline service operated by MOLHRDT did not receive any calls related to child labor during the reporting period. (2) Research indicates that the one child labor violation imposed with penalties collected during the reporting period was from a 2019 case. (2) The government did not provide information on the number of child labor violations found during the reporting period for inclusion in this report. (2)

Research found approximately 15 cases of children between the ages of 12 and 14, and 30 cases of children between the ages of 15 and 16, engaging in child labor activities on construction sites and in street vending, domestic work, animal rearing, agriculture, and the transportation sector. (2) NGOs noted that children were exposed to risk health hazards and accidents while working without personal protective equipment or doing work not suitable for their age, including a 14-year-old who reportedly was burned while working for a mechanic. (2) No inspections were made during the pandemic confinement period from March 10 to April 30, and inspections remained lower than their pre-pandemic rates. The MOLHRDT reported that no children were removed from child labor due to labor inspections during the reporting period. (2) Although the government conducted labor inspections during the reporting period, it is unknown whether the government adequately verified whether children were found to be involved in child labor or hazardous work. (5) While the Workers' Rights Act permits unannounced inspections, the MOLHRDT has previously reported that labor inspections are not carried out on private properties with small farms unless the farm is registered as a business; otherwise, labor inspectors are required to receive permission from the owner to conduct an inspection. (2,5,42,43)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mauritius took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including lack of training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (5)	Yes (2)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (5)	Yes (2)

Number of Prosecutions Initiated	0 (5)	0 (2)
Number of Convictions	1 (5)	2 (2)

Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (5)	Yes (2)

The Ministry of Gender Equality and Family Welfare (MOGE) reported 23 cases (9 males and 14 females) of alleged child labor during the reporting period. Of these, 17 cases involved commercial sexual exploitation, 7 cases involved child trafficking, and 5 cases were related to begging. (2,41)

During the reporting period, new employees of the Mauritius Police received initial training, which covered the worst forms of child labor and the three new laws (the Children's Act, the Child Sex Offender Register, and the Children's Court Act). (2) The Cybercrime Unit opened an investigation in response to the online commercial sexual exploitation of minors, including one case on Rodrigues Island. (2,44) Two suspects were arrested and a third is under investigation. (45) The Mauritius Police reported 3 new investigations into child labor and 16 violations; however, there were no child labor prosecutions initiated. In February, a court sentenced a man to 4 years of prison time for child trafficking. (2) In October, a court sentenced the same man to 5 years in prison in relation to commercial sexual exploitation of children, to serve part of the sentence concurrently with his previous conviction for a total of 7 years of imprisonment. (2,34,41)

Research indicates that Mauritius Police lacked sufficient human resources, with many officers required to isolate due to COVID-19 symptoms. (46) Additionally, criminal law enforcement agencies continue to lack training, equipment, and technology to properly enforce criminal laws related to the worst forms of child labor, including capacity-building on child-sensitive interview techniques. (2)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a coordinating body primarily focused on child labor.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Development Unit	Enforces legislation related to children; implements policies and social programs related to child development; and provides social services to survivors of the worst forms of child labor, including human trafficking. Also provides trainings and awareness campaigns on human trafficking, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children, and operates the 113 hotline for any offenses involving children. (2,47-49) Managed by the Ministry of Gender Equality and Family Welfare (MOGE), the budget for child protection, welfare, and development was $3.9 million for fiscal year 2021–2022, which mainly funded the Child Development Unit. (2,5)
High Powered and Working Together Committee	Chaired by MOGE, coordinates and implements activities on children's rights, including efforts to address the worst forms of child labor. (2,5,7,12,49) Met once in 2021. (2)
Inter-Ministerial Committee on Human Trafficking	Comprises representatives from the Attorney General's Office, MOLHRDT, MOGE, and other ministries. Chaired by the Attorney General's Office and coordinates anti-trafficking efforts in Mauritius. (2,5,34,50) Reactivated by the cabinet and met once in July 2021. (2)
National Steering Committee on Trafficking in Persons	Chaired by the Prime Minister's Office, drives daily operations on anti-trafficking efforts. Operates as a working-level technical committee under the auspices of the high-level Inter-Ministerial Committee. (1,5) The National Steering Committee on Trafficking in Persons met regularly during the reporting period. (41,46)
Community Child Watch Committee	Conducts surveillance of children exposed to any form of violence, including commercial sexual exploitation and human trafficking, at the community level. Operates with the collaboration of volunteers, social workers, NGOs, and other key stakeholders. Did not meet in 2021. (2)

The Children's Act that took effect in January 2022 provides for the creation of a Child Services Coordinating Panel, which will be responsible for the coordination of all activities relating to the implementation of this new law, the United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child, and the African Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child. (2,5,28) The Child Services Coordinating Panel was launched by MOGE in October 2021 and delivered training to its members in the same month. (2) In April 2021, MOGE established a Technical Committee to address child pornography. (34,44,51)

The government's efforts to address the worst forms of child labor were hindered by a lack of coordination, interagency communication, and information sharing between key coordinating mechanisms. In addition, there is no coordinating body whose primary focus is child labor. (2,5,7)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Nine Year Continuous Basic Education Policy (2017–2030)	Aims to enable all students to successfully complete 9 years of basic schooling and forms part of a package of reforms designed to strategically transform the education system in Mauritius. Also referred to as Nine Year Schooling. (53,54)
National Sport and Physical Activity Policy (2018–2028)	Provides a structured sports program available to all ages. Focuses on children and young adults, offering after-school recreational activities to help reduce children's vulnerability to child labor and illicit activities. (43,55)

Although the Government of Mauritius has adopted the Nine Year Continuous Basic Education Policy and the National Sport and Physical Activity Policy, research found no evidence of these policies aiming to address the worst forms of child labor, such as commercial sexual exploitation. In December 2021, the government and an international organization received a final draft of a National Action Plan to Combat Human Trafficking, which was initially drafted in 2016 and has yet to be adopted by the government. (34,41,46,56) The government expects to complete the National Action Plan in 2022. (46) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor in Mauritius during the reporting period. (2)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including adequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
National Children's Council†	Overseen by MOGE, offers a wide range of services and facilities, including day care, shelters, creativity centers, children's clubs, and school child protection clubs around the island. (7,57) Awareness-raising campaigns reached 1,659 primary school students and 145 secondary school students from January to November 2021. (34)
Eradication of Absolute Poverty Program†	Provides support to families living in absolute poverty through empowerment and income programs administered by the Ministry of Social Integration, Social Security and National Solidarity. Activities include a monthly child allowance, provision of free school materials, examination fees support, medical screening, housing support, and counseling. (6) Research determined that this program was active during the reporting period. (34)
Awareness-Raising Programs on Commercial Sexual Exploitation and Human Trafficking†	Educate the public on preventing commercial sexual exploitation of children and human trafficking, created by MOGE. (2,7) Between January and September 2021, MOGE held 12 awareness campaigns led by the Child Development Unit and the Mauritius Family Welfare Planning Association for approximately 150 people. (2)
National Education Counseling Service†	Identifies truant children, conducts visits to vulnerable families, and refers suspected child labor cases to MOLHRDT. Also conducts community outreach and parental involvement programs. (2) Handles approximately 2,000 cases every year. Research determined that this program was active during the reporting period. (6)
Atelier Partage Parents Program	Aims to educate parents, covers good parenting practices, and focuses on violence and child abuse issues. (7,49) Carried out 6 meetings during the reporting period and reached 162 parents. (34)

† Program is funded by the Government of Mauritius.

The government has established the National Children's Council to improve the effectiveness of institutional care facilities and shelters. During the reporting period, MOGE provided training on child abuse and commercial sexual exploitation for staff working in residential care facilities, delivered psychological support and counseling for child residents, and offered facilities to attend online and in-person classes. (34) However, evidence suggests that there continues to be a lack of appropriate standards of care, inadequate provision of services, and overcrowding in some centers that house orphans, child survivors of commercial sexual exploitation, and child survivors of other types of abuses. (6) There are reports that pandemic movement restrictions created staffing shortages in shelters. (46) The decline in the number of awareness campaigns related to the worst forms of child labor is reportedly attributed to the pandemic. (2)

During the reporting period, the government reported progress in improving access to education for children with disabilities. The Ministry of Education undertook infrastructural work in primary and secondary schools to facilitate physical access to all classrooms, operated 6 dedicated Special Education Needs resource development centers, supported 83 centers privately run by NGOs, and refunded transport costs for 1 accompanying parent of children with disabilities attending schools and day care centers. (34)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

In 2021, Mexico made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government carried out 5,000 more labor inspections compared to the previous year and established a new voluntary labor reporting system for businesses to confirm compliance with the Labor Code. The Commission on the Rights of Refugee and Migrant Children and Adolescents also published a report on its activities during the year aiming to ensure the best interests of migrant and refugee children, including unaccompanied minors. Additionally, the government published and implemented the National Program for Children and Adolescents 2021–2024, and the Benito Juárez Wellbeing National Scholarship Program reached 9.8 million students. However, children in Mexico are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities, such as the production and trafficking of drugs. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, including in the production of chile peppers, coffee, sugarcane, and tomatoes. In 2021, the government eliminated many social programs that increased educational access and reduced risk for child labor in marginalized communities. Although nearly 60 percent of all employment in Mexico occurs in the informal sector, federal and some state-level labor inspectors carry out inspections in the informal sector only after receiving formal complaints. In addition, labor and criminal law enforcement agencies lacked human and financial resources and the government published limited information on its labor and criminal law enforcement efforts. Social programs to eliminate child labor also do not address all relevant sectors in which child labor is found in Mexico.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mexico are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, and in illicit activities, such as the production and trafficking of drugs. (1-4) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture, including in the production of chile peppers, coffee, sugarcane, and tomatoes. (5,6) Data from the National Child Labor Survey (ENTI 2019), which was funded by USDOL, show that 3.1 million children between the ages of 5 and 17 engage in child labor, with 52 percent of these children engaging in hazardous work. It also shows that 25 percent of child laborers do not attend school, 61 percent of child laborers are boys, and that child labor primarily occurs in the central and southern states of Oaxaca, Puebla, Chiapas, and Michoacán. (7,8) Table I provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mexico.

Table I. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working in agriculture,† including in the production of avocados, beans, chile peppers, coffee, cotton, cucumbers, eggplants, beans (green), guayabas, melons, nuts, onions, pineapples, sugarcane, tobacco,† and tomatoes (5-6,11-18) Cattle raising (19)
Industry	Manufacturing† footwear, furniture, garments, leather goods, and textiles (7,11,19-21) Producing baked goods (7,19,22) Construction,† activities unknown (7,11,19) Mining,† including amber and charcoal (7,19,23-26) Working in woodworking and welding shops (7,11,19)
Services	Street work† as vendors, shoe shiners, beggars, car washers, and porters (5,22,27-30) Working in auto repair garages, beauty salons, restaurants, bars,† and coffee shops (7,11,29) Scavenging in landfills (5,31) Domestic work (7,8,19,32)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Forced labor in domestic work, street vending, and begging (4,23,30,32-36) Commercial sexual exploitation, including in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1-3,11,17,23,37) Use by cartels to perform illicit activities, including the production of poppies for heroin, drug trafficking, and carrying out armed attacks, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (4,23,38-45)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

In 2021, reports suggest that almost 850,000 children did not continue their basic education. This includes 656,000 students who did not transition from elementary school to lower secondary school. (46,47) Government reports also show that at least 1,200 schools closed between 2020 and 2021. In addition, students reported difficulty accessing distance learning programs as at least half of Mexican households do not have computers or Internet access, while 80 percent of indigenous or rural households lacked computers or Internet access. (47,48) The lack of access to education and school abandonment leaves children more vulnerable to the worst forms of child labor. (4,17,49,50)

Organized criminal groups recruit and exploit children in illicit activities, including serving as lookouts, carrying out armed attacks against authorities and rival cartels, and in the production, transport, and sale of drugs. Experts estimate that as many as 250,000 children are at risk of being recruited by these criminal groups. (4,43,44,51-53) Most of the time these children abandon school, are unable to access future employment in the formal sector, or go on to commit graver crimes. (4,44,45,51) Children in Mexico are also trafficked internally for commercial sexual exploitation and illicit activities, including by organized criminal groups. The state of Tlaxcala is known as the predominant source and transit center for child commercial sexual exploitation in Mexico, but it also occurs in tourist areas such as Acapulco, Puerto Vallarta, and Cancun, and in northern border cities such as Tijuana and Ciudad Juárez. (1,2,23,53,54) The states of Chiapas, Guerrero, Puebla, and Veracruz are also source and transit centers for human trafficking for the purposes of sexual and labor exploitation. Mexico's National System for Integral Family Development (SNDIF) estimates that each year at least 70,000 children and adolescents are trafficked for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation. (23,55) Reports by Mexico's National Commission on Human Rights (CNDH) and the UN Office on Drugs and Crime found that 25 percent of female trafficking victims in Mexico are under age 18 while 45 percent of child trafficking victims are children of indigenous descent. (1,4,36,56,57)

Child labor in agriculture is more prevalent among boys. Although children engage in agricultural activities throughout the country, the majority of child labor in this sector occurs in the central and southern states of Oaxaca, Puebla, Chiapas, and Nayarit. (7,8) Children's work in agriculture often includes long working hours, use of sharp tools, handling pesticides, and carrying heavy loads. (6,58,59) A 2018 report by the Centro de Derechos

Humanos de la Montaña Tlachinollan found that 42 percent of Mexican migrant agricultural worker households had at least one child engaged in child labor. (13,60,61) In addition, organized criminal groups operating in rural areas throughout the country actively recruit children, making some children in agricultural export-producing communities vulnerable to involvement in illicit activities. (16,45,62-64) An April 2022 labor law reform requires the Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare (STPS) to establish regulations regarding hazardous occupations in agriculture, which may allow older children who cannot legally work in agriculture to obtain employment in this sector in the future. (65-67)

Children from indigenous populations are more likely to work across all sectors, including in agriculture, than non-indigenous children. (13,60,68) Children from indigenous populations also work at road intersections, often begging for money or performing juggling acts for motorists at traffic lights. (69) Indigenous children are also less likely to attend school due to the lack of schools near their homes, educational materials, and instruction in native languages. (68,70,71) According to CNDH, because of these low educational levels, as well as linguistic barriers and discrimination, indigenous populations are especially vulnerable to child labor and human trafficking. (36,52,72,73)

Migrants, mostly from the northern Central America countries of El Salvador, Guatemala, and Honduras, who are fleeing violence, instability, and lack of opportunity in their countries of origin, travel through Mexico en route to the United States. In addition, thousands of Haitians, including children, crossed into Mexico, some from Central America, throughout 2021. (74,75) Migrant children, especially those travelling by themselves, are more vulnerable to human trafficking, forced recruitment by organized criminal groups, and other worst forms of child labor. (4,76,77) In addition, many migrant children do not have access to education. (77,78)

The National Institute of Migration (INM) is responsible for enforcing the rights of migrant children in coordination with the SNDIF, and the Mexican Commission for Refugee Assistance (COMAR) is tasked with refugee assistance. However, due to government austerity measures and an increase in the number of migrants, including unaccompanied children, INM, SNDIF, and COMAR did not have sufficient funding to carry out their mandates. (23,79-81) In addition, although the government revised laws in November 2020 to address the best interests of migrant and refugee children, including placement in child protection centers while waiting to be repatriated, some children remained in INM detention centers without access to education during the reporting period. (75,76,82-84) Moreover, many SNDIF shelters, in which migrant families and unaccompanied children are housed, have reached or are nearing capacity, and poor coordination by INM and SNDIF left some of these children and families without access to shelter. (81,85,86) Authorities also did not effectively identify human trafficking victims among migrant populations, and trafficking victims did not have access to comprehensive protections and services. (87)

In April 2022, Mexico enacted a reform to the Labor Code that would permit children as young as 15 to work in some agricultural employment. Previously, Article 176 of the Labor Code deemed work in agriculture, hunting and fishing as hazardous and, accordingly, prohibited children under the age of 18 from engaging in this kind of work. (16,65,66,95) The reform qualified the language in Art. 176 to prohibit minors from engaging in these activities while using chemicals, handling machinery, operating heavy vehicles, and carrying out other tasks as determined by the competent authority. The STPS has 180 days after the entry in force of the reform to classify activities in Art. 176 and determine which activities would be lower risk and thus permissible for minors. (65,66,95) Proponents of the reform state that permitting minors to work in low-risk agricultural activities may create formal employment opportunities in rural areas. (17,66,67) However, critics suggests that the reform may jeopardize the health and safety of children by exposing them to the hazards and extreme conditions involved in agricultural work. Others view the reform as a setback for child labor protections and note that the reform lacks corresponding mechanisms and resources for ensuring labor law enforcement. (17,66,67)

The United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement entered into force on July 1, 2020. The agreement contains a labor chapter with fully enforceable labor obligations, including on internationally recognized labor rights. (96,97) Under this chapter, Mexico committed to adopt and maintain in its statutes, regulations, and practices the effective abolition of child labor and a prohibition on the worst forms of child labor. This chapter also requires each country to prohibit the importation into its territory from other countries of any goods produced in whole or in part by forced or compulsory labor, including forced or compulsory child labor. (97) While the Government of Mexico established a working group to continue reviewing existing laws related to the prohibition of the importation of goods produced by forced or compulsory child labor and is developing a plan to implement the prohibition, including determining legal sufficiency for subsequent enforcement actions, the working group did not provide an update on the status of the draft plan during the reporting period. (17,53,98)

As the minimum age for work at age 15 is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (16,90)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established relevant institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare (STPS)	Leads efforts to enforce child labor laws, conduct labor inspections, and refer cases for investigation. The Federal Prosecutor for the Defense of Work, an independent entity under STPS, prosecutes cases in which workers' rights are violated, including cases with workers under age 18. (16,99-104) The STPS inspectorate is responsible for labor law enforcement in 22 industrial sectors under federal jurisdiction, including the sugar and tobacco industries, 3 types of enterprises, and labor matters affecting 2 or more states. The state-level labor inspectorates are responsible for labor law enforcement in all other situations. (16,88,105)
Attorney General of the Republic (FGR)	Prosecutes crimes involving human trafficking, including criminal violations related to child trafficking and other worst forms of child labor. The FGR's Specialized Unit for Crimes against Women and Trafficking in Persons (FEVIMTRA) and the Specialized Unit on Trafficking in Minors, People, and Organs are responsible for investigating and prosecuting human trafficking cases at the federal level. (4,104,106-109) In addition, all 32 states have specialized trafficking in persons prosecutors or units, which are responsible for investigating and prosecuting cases of human trafficking at the state level. Some state trafficking in persons units or prosecutors also prosecute cases of gender-based violence. (52,64,110,111) Federal and state trafficking in persons units receive some cases of child trafficking from the National Institute of Migration and the Mexican Commission for Refugee Assistance. (80,83,112-115)
National Commission on Human Rights (CNDH)	Receives complaints and conducts investigations on human rights violations, including cases involving the worst forms of child labor. Independent ombudsman body. (116)
Conciliation and Arbitration Boards and Labor Tribunals and Conciliation Centers	Tripartite boards which mediate and adjudicate labor disputes according to federal and state labor laws, including processing cases in which children between the ages of 15 and 18 request permission to work. Beginning in 2020 and ending in 2022, these boards are being replaced by federal- and state-level Labor Tribunals and Conciliation Centers, which will oversee conciliation and adjudication of labor disputes, respectively. (16,42,88,117-120)
Secretariat of Health's National System for Integral Family Development (SNDIF)	Provides social assistance to child victims, including shelter and legal services. Employs representatives at the national, state, and municipal levels. (89,104,121) At the federal and state levels, also employs special prosecutors to carry out legal action against crimes related to children and adolescent rights, including violations related to the worst forms of child labor. (89,104,121) During school holidays, some state-level SNDIF ministries conduct operations to monitor for child labor in the informal sector. (122-134)

Since 2019, the Government of Mexico has implemented austerity measures that left many secretariats and agencies, including the Attorney General of the Republic (FGR) and CNDH, at both the federal and state levels, without the appropriate personnel, expertise, and leadership to carry out core government functions, including enforcing laws and establishing and implementing policies and programs related to the worst forms of child labor. (17,53,135,136)

Federal and state labor inspectorates carry out labor inspections in formally registered businesses. (99,100,137,138) Although these inspectorates have the authority to conduct unannounced inspections in the informal sector, in practice, inspections in the informal sector are only conducted in response to a formal complaint. As the informal sector accounts for 57 percent of employment in Mexico, including agricultural employment, the lack of inspections in this sector leaves children vulnerable to labor exploitation. (11,98,99,101,137-140)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Mexico took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare (STPS) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human and financial resource allocation.

† Data are for federal inspectorate only. (42)

‡ Data are for federal inspectorate only. (17)

In 2021, 25 out of 32 states provided information on their state labor inspectorates and reported employing a total of 304 labor inspectors. In addition, STPS hired 24 labor inspectors, bringing their total number of labor inspectors to 471. (17) However, the number of labor inspectors at the federal and state levels is likely insufficient for the size of Mexico's workforce, which includes approximately 53 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Mexico would need to employ roughly 3,552 labor inspectors. (143-145)

The STPS initiates routine and targeted inspections based on analysis of compliance data and patterns of complaints. Unannounced inspections for child labor violations are only conducted in response to complaints and must be coordinated with representatives from SNDIF and the local Office of the FGR. (100,104,137,146) The STPS did not report carrying out inspections specific to child labor in 2021. The total number of child labor complaints received is unknown, as the STPS does not have an internal system to track cases of child labor violations. (105,138,147,148)

During the reporting period, STPS identified 2 child labor violations and an additional 8 states out of 32 reported identifying a total of 215 violations related to child labor. However, STPS and the states did not provide information on penalties imposed or collected. (17,42,100,104,122-126) STPS is not authorized to collect any fines and must refer fine collection to the Tax Administration Service (SAT), which rarely enforces fine collection for any labor law violations. Moreover, research could not verify that all state-level labor ministries conducted child labor inspections, sanctioned establishments in violation of the Labor Code, or applied the guidelines on identifying and sanctioning child labor violations as outlined in the "Labor Inspection Protocol to Eradicate Child Labor and Protect Adolescent Workers". (17,42,98,100,104,122-126) However, the States of Chiapas, Puebla, Queretaro, Tabasco, and Veracruz provided their labor inspectors with training on child labor, including applying labor inspection protocols to identify and sanction child labor violations. (17) In 2021, STPS increased the budget dedicated to the labor inspectorate by over $100,000 compared to 2020. In addition, the States of Mexico, Hidalgo, Sonora, Tamaulipas, and Veracruz provided information on the budget allocated to each state's labor inspectorate for a total of almost $1.4 million. (17)

In 2021, STPS implemented a new voluntary reporting system called the Voluntary Labor Verification Program (VELAVO), which allows formally registered businesses to enroll and self-identify as compliant with the program's requirements related to working conditions, including provisions related to child labor. Registered businesses deemed to be in compliance according to the documentation submitted will be exempt from routine labor inspections for one year, although this does not prevent the STPS from conducting complaint-based labor inspections in these businesses. (149,150)

The STPS and state-level labor ministries share enforcement authority of child labor laws and are authorized to establish agreements for coordination of inspection duties. However, due to limited information sharing between federal and state-level inspectorates, some establishments may not be inspected for labor law violations. (99,138,148) Moreover, concerns remain with Mexico's lack of enforcement of laws governing the minimum age for employment in rural areas or at small and medium enterprises, particularly in the agricultural sector. (53,66,151)

Even though federal labor inspectors have the authority to assess penalties for most labor infractions, child labor and forced labor infractions are considered criminal offenses. In such cases, inspectors are required to file a citation with the STPS's Directorate of Judicial Affairs to initiate sanctioning procedures with the state-level finance ministries or the FGR, who are then responsible for collecting fines or initiating criminal sanctions. (17,99,137,141,148)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mexico took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Between January and October 2021, the Secretariat for Security and Citizen Protection (SSPC) conducted 638 investigations into potential cases of human trafficking, representing an increase of almost 10 percent from the previous year. As a result of these inspections, the SSPC identified 650 trafficking victims. (153,154) However, the SSPC did not disaggregate the number of child and adult victims. (153,154) In addition, research conducted by the Consejo Ciudadano, which operates the National Trafficking Line, found fraudulent job offers for work in factories and in agriculture was the main form of recruitment used by human traffickers during the reporting period. The National Trafficking Line also registered an increase in the proportion of calls involving children being trafficked, making up as many as 47 percent of calls to the hotline, up from 32 percent in 2019. (155)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

During 2021, the FGR's Specialized Unit for Crimes Against Women and Trafficking in Persons (FEVIMTRA) had a budget of $3.3 million, and conducted 16 investigations related to trafficking in persons and identified 3 child trafficking victims. The states of Chiapas and Guanajuato each reported carrying out four child trafficking investigations while Zacatecas reported conducting one child trafficking investigation. (17,53,54) Moreover, the State of Mexico achieved 5 convictions for child trafficking, Michoacán reported 2 child trafficking convictions, the states of Guanajuato, Morelos, and Queretaro each reported 1 child trafficking conviction, and 15 individuals were prosecuted for trafficking in persons by the states of Chiapas, Hidalgo, Puebla, and Zacatecas. (17,53,54) These investigations included at least six public officials accused of involvement in crimes related to trafficking in persons, and in February 2022, a police officer in Mexico City was convicted of possession of child pornography and sentenced to 5 years' imprisonment. (53,54, 152) Additionally, the Financial Intelligence Unit (UIF), which detects and combats criminal operations using illicit funds, identified 201 possible cases of trafficking in persons, of which 43 cases involved minors. (53)

Reports indicate that the lack of training for criminal law enforcement officers on how to perform prosecutorial and police investigative functions, and confusion over territorial jurisdictions, has hampered their ability to adequately investigate and prosecute cases involving the worst forms of child labor. (4,17,53,54) In addition, the insufficient capacity of prosecutors and judges to try criminal cases related to human trafficking meant that many suspected traffickers were incorrectly prosecuted for minor offenses or were acquitted. (4,17,53,54) Moreover, state prosecutors had limited financial resources available for investigations, training, and outreach. (54,156,157)

According to public sources, the government conducted 484 investigations between January and July 2021, and made at least 42 convictions at the federal and state levels for crimes related to the worst forms of child labor; however, the complete number of investigations conducted, prosecutions initiated, and convictions achieved is unknown. (53,54,85) Although the government provided some information on its criminal law enforcement efforts related to the worst forms of child labor at the federal level and for some states, weak coordination and inconsistent data sharing among government agencies prevented comprehensive statistics from being compiled. (17,53,54) Research also identified that inconsistent data collection and the lack of coordination amongst government ministries may hinder criminal prosecutions and impact government efforts to provide victim services. (17,53,54,64,158,159)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including inefficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Inter-Institutional Commission for Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and the Protection of Adolescent Workers of the Permitted Age in Mexico (CITI)	Coordinates Mexico's activities to develop policies, approve programs, and coordinate, monitor, and evaluate efforts to eliminate child labor, especially its worst forms. Chaired by STPS and includes representatives from the secretariats of the Interior, Economy, Foreign Affairs, Wellbeing, Agriculture, Transportation, Education, Health, Tourism, Social Security, SNDIF, and FGR. (17,141) Meets on a quarterly basis and includes NGO networks and international technical and financial partners, such as UNODC and IOM. During the reporting period, the CITI finalized the Plan of Action on Child Labor 2021–2024. (17,141,148)
Inter-Institutional Commission for the Prevention, Sanction and Eradication of Crimes Related to Trafficking in Persons and for the Protection and Support of Victims of those Crimes	Defines policy and coordinates efforts to address human trafficking in Mexico. Chaired by the Secretariat of the Interior and includes representatives from STPS, secretariats of numerous other government ministries, NGOs, and international technical partners. (91,160) Although the commission met seven times in 2021, research was unable to determine what activities this committee carried out during the reporting period. (17,53)
National System for the Protection of Children and Adolescents (SIPINNA)	Coordinates national child protection policy and programs. Chaired by the Secretariat of the Interior and made up of a steering committee from multiple other ministries and representatives of civil society groups. (90) During the reporting period, SIPINNA was active and held various meetings to review, finalize, and publish the National Program for Children and Adolescents (PRONAPPINA) 2021–2024. (17)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
State Committees for the Prevention and Eradication of Child Labor and for the Protection of Young Persons (CITI Estatales )	Implement and evaluate activities related to the elimination of child labor through the 32 state and Federal District committees. These committees also compile, analyze, and report their activities to the federal CITI. (42,101) Research could not confirm whether all state committees met during the reporting period. (17)
Commission for the Protection of Refugee and Migrant Children and Adolescents	Coordinates, develops, monitors, and evaluates strategies and programs to protect the rights of migrant and refugee children. Chaired by SIPINNA. (141,161,162) During the reporting period, the Commission published an annual report on its activities, including efforts to ensure the best interests of unaccompanied migrant and refugee children. (163)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including lack of coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Program for the Secretariat of Labor and Social Welfare (2020–2024)	Aims to strengthen the fundamental rights of work and to increase labor force participation in the formal sector. The plan prioritizes addressing child labor as part of STPS' social inclusion strategy. (164) During the reporting period, a training program on child labor and the rights of children and adolescents was developed for representatives from each of the 32 federal entities, federal labor inspectors, and STPS staff. (17,165)
National Program for Children and Adolescents (PRONAPPINA) 2021–2024†	Aims to guarantee the rights of children and adolescents by establishing mechanisms to support their growth and development. (166)
Plan of Action on Child Labor 2021–2024†	Aims to promote a culture of prevention against child labor and to protect the human and labor rights of children and adolescents. (167)
National Human Rights Program (2020–2024)	Aims to increase the national well-being of the general population and to ensure equality and equity. Includes actions to ensure children's rights and address child labor. (141,168) Research confirmed that during the year Secretaría de Gobernación (SEGOB's) Sub-Secretariat of Human Rights, Migration, and Population held meetings with 16 of the 32 federal entities to design and establish policies at the state level linked to the National Human Rights Program 2020–2024. (17,169)
National Strategy for Inclusive Education (2019–2024)	Supports inclusive education for vulnerable children, including migrant and indigenous children. (170,171) During the 2020–2021 school year, approximately 53,221 students with special needs benefited from the program. (17)
Integral Development Plan for El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras y México	Aims to support strategic economic development in Mexico and the Northern Triangle countries to address the root causes of migration and increase employment in the region. (172–175) Research confirms that the plan was implemented during the year, although only 7 percent of the $90 million promised for the plan implementation have thus far been disbursed. (174,175)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government has other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (176)

Mexico became a Pathfinder country under Alliance 8.7 in 2019 to accelerate commitments toward achieving Sustainable Development Goal Target 8.7, which calls for the eradication of forced labor, modern slavery, and human trafficking by 2030, and the eradication of child labor by 2025. (177,178) As a Pathfinder country, the government developed and implemented the Alliance 8.7 Roadmap to Eradicate Child Labor, Forced Labor, and Trafficking in Persons, which includes the goals of improving information generation on child and forced labor, strengthening coordination between the CITI and the Inter-Institutional Commission for the Prevention and Punishment of Human Trafficking Crimes, and establishing preventative actions to address child and forced labor in supply chains. (177,179) In addition, as part of the efforts to improve information generation and coordination between the CITI and the Inter-Institutional Commission on Trafficking, STPS led the Working Group on Information Strategies and Preventative Campaigns between the two Commissions. STPS is also developing a Labor Inspection Program for 2022 focusing on the agricultural industry and the carbon-mining sector to prevent child labor and forced labor in these supply chains. (180)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, the government finalized the Plan of Action on Child Labor 2021–2024 and published the National Program for the Protection of Children and Adolescents (PRONAPPINA) 2021–2024. In addition, the government published the National Program for Equality between Men and Women (PROIGUALDAD) 2020–2024, which includes actions to improve the labor conditions of young women and girls and actions to reduce child labor. (17,166,167,181) However, even though the government drafted the National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons 2020–2024 in 2019, this plan has not been officially approved. (17,182) Although the government has policies to address some worst forms of child labor, research found no evidence of a policy to address commercial sexual exploitation or the use of children in illicit activities. (141,164,168)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

The government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy to address the problem in all sectors and in all states.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Benito Juárez Wellbeing National Scholarship Program†	Secretariat of Public Education cash transfer program that offers two types of scholarships for families living in poverty and students at risk of school desertion. The Wellbeing Basic Education Family Scholarship provides bi-monthly payments of $80 per household for all children under age 15 enrolled in school, while the Benito Juárez Scholarship provides bi-monthly payments of $80 to each child enrolled in high school. (183-185) Although the program reaches a high number of students, it has been criticized for providing insufficient cash transfers, lacking monitoring and evaluation, and having implementation issues. (186-190) In 2021, the program reached 9.8 million students. (191)
Support for Indigenous Education Program‡	Implemented by the National Institute of Indigenous Peoples to support educational access of children from indigenous and Afro-descendant communities through scholarships, boarding houses, and nutritional support. (192) In 2021, the program assisted 63,049 children through the program's Casas y Comedores de la Niñez Indígena and Casas y Comedores Comunitarios del Estudiante Indígena . (193)
Assistance for At-Risk Children and Adolescents Program (PAMAR)†	Implemented by the SNDIF at the state and municipal levels to assist youth at risk for child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and in illicit activities, by providing shelters, psychosocial assistance, and training. In 2021, this program was implemented by the SNDIF in 26 states and 445 municipalities benefiting 68,503 children and adolescents, but it is not implemented across all states and municipalities in which the program is needed. (17,53)
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL-funded projects that aim to eliminate child labor through research, increase labor inspection capacity, and expand participation in education, training, and social protection programs. Campos de Esperanza is an $11 million project implemented by World Vision which has worked with the sugarcane sector to help improve working conditions for over 5,300 sugarcane workers in targeted agricultural communities in Oaxaca and Veracruz. MAPI6 is an ILO-implemented global project, with $2.4 million dedicated to support the National Child Labor Survey (ENTI 2019) with the results released in 2020. (7,194,195) MAPI6 also supported the Regional Initiative Latin America and the Caribbean Free of Child Labor (RILAC) program to develop maps that show communities at risk of child labor and has worked with local government in the States of Mexico and Chiapas to develop policy responses. (7,194,195) Other projects include: Senderos , an $8 million project implemented by Verité to address child and forced labor in the sugarcane and tobacco sectors in Jalisco and Nayarit; EQUAL , a $5 million project implemented by World Vision to increase women's and adolescent girls' economic empowerment in the agricultural sector; COFFEE , a $2.2 million project implemented by Verité in Brazil, Colombia, and Mexico to promote social compliance and develop tools for businesses to establish systems to prevent, detect, and combat child and forced labor in coffee supply chains; and Improving Workers' Occupational Safety and Health in Selected Supply Chains in Mexico – A Vision Zero Fund , a $5 million project implemented by the ILO's Vision Zero Fund to improve the occupational safety and health of workers, with a focus on COVID-19, female workers, and workers in vulnerable conditions. Two new additional projects include: Building a Comprehensive Government of Mexico Approach to Combating Child Labor and Forced Labor* , a $13 million ILO-implemented project to strengthen the capacity and enhance the effectiveness of the Government of Mexico to collect and analyze data on child labor, forced labor, and human trafficking for the purposes of informing federal policies and programming; and Sustentar* , a $5 million project implemented by Social Accountability International to increase private sector stakeholders' accountability to uphold core labor standards focusing on the chile pepper and tomato sector. (196-201) In 2021, USDOL-funded projects trained 130 labor inspectors and 399 teachers on identifying and preventing child labor and provided over 1,400 children in child labor or at risk of child labor with education services. (195,196,198) For additional information, please visit our website.

† Program is funded by the Government of Mexico.

*Program was launched during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (42,141,202-206)

During the reporting period, the government eliminated many social programs that increased education access and reduced risk for child labor for indigenous children, migrant and refugee children, and children from other vulnerable groups. These programs included the Indigenous People's Education Diversity Program (PADEI), Educational Program for Migrant School Population (PAPEM), and the Full-Time Schools Program (PETC). (17,207-211) Research could not confirm whether these programs will be replaced by new programs in future years.

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

In 2021, Moldova made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. In January, Law No. 191 went into effect, which reversed changes that had delegated responsibility for occupational safety and health inspections to 10 smaller agencies and returned it to the State Labor Inspectorate. Legislation was passed to permit a staffing increase at the State Labor Inspectorate from 73 to 104 full-time inspectors. In addition, the Prosecutor General's Office introduced new legislation to establish prescriptive sentences for trafficking in persons and commercial sexual exploitation, including provisions for harsher penalties in cases with aggravated circumstances. However, despite these initiatives, Moldova is receiving an assessment of minimal advancement because it continued to implement a regression in law and practice that delayed advancement in eliminating the worst forms of child labor. In August 2018, the government amended Law No. 131 through Law No. 179, such that unannounced inspections, even those based on a complaint or at the request of law enforcement or other state bodies, are permitted only on the basis of a risk assessment that indicates an immediate threat to the environment, life, health, or property. This stringent measure continues to severely limit the State Labor Inspectorate's ability to conduct unannounced inspections. In addition, inspections are only permitted after the State Labor Inspectorate first requests and receives insufficient documentation from the business being inspected or after conducting a risk assessment that finds reasonable indicators of a possible violation. When responding to a complaint, inspectors are not authorized to take action for labor violations they may see that fall outside the scope of the complaint. Children in Moldova are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in child labor in agriculture. Training is needed for new criminal investigators, and entities responsible for conducting labor inspections, including of hazardous child labor, lack adequate funding, personnel, and equipment. In addition, there is a lack of social programs to address child trafficking and child labor in agriculture.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

Lack of information limits an assessment of the types of work that children perform and the sectors in which they work, including in the separatist region of Transnistria, which is not under the control of Moldovan authorities. (1-3,8,16) Civil society sources report that the child labor situation in Transnistria does not differ significantly from the rest of Moldova. (1,2) However, survivors of child labor and human trafficking in Transnistria do not have access to Moldovan legal protections or social services. (5)

Both boys and girls as young as age 10 are forced into various forms of commercial sexual exploitation. (3,4,14,17,18) Online sexual exploitation of children, including the production and distribution of child pornography, has increased in recent years. (1,8) Moldova is also a destination country for tourism for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation of children. (4,17) Due to travel restrictions related to the COVID-19 pandemic, reports of human trafficking outside of the country decreased during the reporting period. Most cases of commercial sexual exploitation of children occurred in the capital city of Chisinau. (1)

Trafficking of children, particularly those suffering from familial neglect, continues to be a concern in Moldova and Transnistria. (4,5,10,13,16,19,20) Traffickers exploit children ages 5 to 14 for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation and child labor, mainly in the agricultural, service, and industrial sectors. (17) Children living on the street or abandoned by parents migrating abroad remain particularly vulnerable to child labor and human trafficking, and observers express concern that corrupt management in state institutions like orphanages and boarding schools exploits children in domestic services or on farms. (1,5,8,13,16-19) Vulnerable children from Transnistria are at an increased risk of being trafficked through Ukraine's Odessa region. (18,21,22)

During the reporting period, the Ministry of Education, Culture and Research mandated the reporting of daily attendance in all preschool, primary, and secondary general educational institutions. While formally established for medical reasons, authorities report that the mechanism proved to be effective at reducing dropouts and absenteeism. (1) Children in Moldova are also guaranteed free transportation to school, and no fees are required for schooling through grade 10. However, students in grades 10 through 12 are often charged fees to rent textbooks. (1,2) Children from Roma communities continue to be at higher risk of dropping out due to discrimination by school officials and non-Roma students, and are more vulnerable to child labor and human trafficking. (1,2,13,17) Schools in rural areas often lack a sufficient number of teachers, and mainstream schools lack adequate resources to address the needs of children with disabilities. (1,2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Moldova has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Moldova's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	16	Article 46 of the Labor Code (23)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 255 of the Labor Code; Article 3 of the Collective Convention on Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (23,24)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Government Decision No. 541; Articles 2 and 3 of the Collective Convention on Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor; Articles 103, 105, 255, and 256 of the Labor Code (23-25)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 44 of the Constitution; Article 168(b) of the Criminal Code; Article 7 of the Labor Code; Collective Convention on Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (23,24,26,27)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 2 and 25–30 of the Law on Preventing and Combating Trafficking in Human Beings; Collective Convention on Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor; Article 206 of the Criminal Code (24,27,29)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 175, 206, and 208 of the Criminal Code; Article 6 of the Law on the Rights of the Child; Collective Convention on Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor; Law No. 207 (24,27,30,31)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 208 and 217 of the Criminal Code; Collective Convention on Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor (24,27)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 12 of Law No. 162-XVI on the Status of Military Servicemembers (32)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 28 of Law No. 1245-XV on the Preparation of Citizens for Homeland Defense (33)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 26 of the Law on the Rights of the Child; Article 206(d) of the Criminal Code (27,30)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	18	Articles 13 and 152 of the Education Code of 2014 (34)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 35 of the Constitution; Article 9 of the Education Code of 2014 (26,34)

In 2021, the Prosecutor General's Office (PGO) introduced legislation aimed at standardizing sentences for individuals convicted of offenses related to human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. The draft legislation also includes provisions for harsher sentences in cases involving aggravated circumstances. (1)

The Labor Code's minimum age provisions do not meet international standards because they do not apply to all children working in the informal sector. Although Article 46(3) of the Labor Code permits children as young as age 15 to work, the law does not specify the conditions in which light work may be undertaken. (23) In addition, the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (23,34)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Health, Labor, and Social Protection's (MHLSP) State Labor Inspectorate (SLI)	Enforces child labor laws through inspections of labor relations of enterprises, institutions, and organizations. (1,2,8,35) Publishes an annual report on the previous year's activities. (1,36) Oversees the National Coordination Unit, as well as the Child Labor Monitoring Unit which is responsible for coordinating activities related to the protection of survivors and those vulnerable to human trafficking. (22) In November 2021, the SLI collaborated with the ILO to launch an online platform for reporting worksite accidents, which is also designed to serve as a resource for labor inspectors to plan inspections. (37) However, the Child Labor Monitoring Unit has been functionally defunct since 2017 when half of SLI's staff was reassigned to sectoral regulating agencies for occupational health and safety. (38)
Committee for Combating Trafficking in Persons within the Ministry of Internal Affairs	Leads criminal investigations and arrests perpetrators of human trafficking offenses, including the trafficking of children for labor or commercial sexual exploitation. (8,17) Cooperates with the Border Police Inspectorate, National Anti-Corruption Center, and Customs Service. (2,8) Provides partial funding for the operation of a 24/7 trafficking in persons hotline. (17,18)
Specialized Prosecution Office for Organized Crime and Special Cases and Anti-Trafficking Bureau within the Prosecutor General's Office (PGO)	Monitors and analyzes human trafficking cases in the Anti-Trafficking Bureau within the PGO. (2,4,5) Includes a unit that investigates and prosecutes cases. (14)
Center for Combating Cybercrime within the Ministry of Internal Affairs	Investigates cybercrime, including online commercial exploitation of children, and is the unit with primary responsibility for investigating these crimes at the National Inspectorate for Investigations of the General Inspectorate of Police of the Ministry of Internal Affairs. (1,39)

During the reporting period, laws and practices introduced as part of government restructuring in 2017 and 2018 continued to limit the power of the State Labor Inspectorate (SLI) to enforce child labor laws. Laws No. 179 and No. 131 mandate that all labor inspections begin with a desk review and permit site visits only if the subject of an inspection provides insufficient documentation or if a risk assessment procedure finds reasonable indicators of a possible violation. (1,2,8,17,40-44) Site visits, including those conducted in response to complaints, cannot take place until after the target of an inspection has had 5 days to respond to a request for documents. This request serves as de facto advance notice of an inspection. (2,5,8,40-44) These laws permit inspectors to forgo the documentary inspection and proceed directly to an onsite inspection with managerial approval if a risk assessment indicates an immediate threat to the environment, life, health, or property. (40,44)

However, in practice, this exception is not widely used, and the government reports all inspections that are not in its annual published inspection plan to be "unannounced." (1,2,38) Although the SLI is able to receive complaints, procedures to submit a complaint can be cumbersome, and complaints cannot be anonymous. (1,2,8,45) Furthermore, labor inspections that take place onsite can focus only on the potential violations that have been identified in advance through either the complaint process or a desk review, even if other violations, such as child labor, are observed. (5,38,41) Labor inspectors may face disciplinary action or civil liability for investigating issues outside the scope of the specific complaint that triggered the inspection. (38) In 2021, these strict measures continued to limit the number and scope of onsite inspections, including unannounced inspections, that labor inspectors were empowered to conduct. (1,8,40,42,43)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The Transnistrian region is not under the control of Moldovan authorities, who are prevented from carrying out inspections and law enforcement there. (1,2,5,46,47)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Moldova took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Health, Labor, and Social Protection that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of unannounced inspections in sectors in which child labor is known to occur.

In January 2021, Law No. 191 went into effect and returned all labor inspection responsibilities to the SLI. (1,8) Moldova reported employing 104 labor inspectors in 2021, all of whom are permanent employees of the SLI. This staffing increase was the result of Government Decision 149, which increased the SLI staff limit to 104, up from 78 in previous years. (1) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 20,000 workers in transition economies, Moldova would need to employ roughly 65 labor inspectors. (50,51) However, the SLI has reported that its funding and the number of labor inspectors are insufficient to adequately conduct child labor inspections. (1,2,8) Although the SLI can recommend that penalties be assessed for labor violations, the authority to impose and collect these penalties remains with the courts. If an inspector finds that a violation of labor law has occurred, they must issue recommendations to the offender on how to resolve the violation. (1,2) If the violation is not resolved after the prescribed period (no less than 30 days, but no more than 90 days), then the SLI may refer the case to a competent court. This approach often results in employers making the recommended remediation to avoid a fine, then resuming the offending practice after the case has been cleared. (1)

By law, labor inspections must begin with a request for documentation from the employer, except in cases in which a risk assessment indicates an immediate threat to the environment, life, health, or property. (1,2,38) When reporting inspection data, the SLI divides inspections into two categories—those that appear on the annual inspection plan and those that arise during the year when triggered by complaints or incidents. The latter are considered to be unannounced whether they are preceded by a desk audit or not. (1) It is therefore not possible to determine whether any truly unannounced inspections took place in 2021, and if so, how many. During the reporting period, the SLI reported 31 labor violations involving minors. (1) The SLI also referred six cases to courts for penalties, one of which was rejected. Courts imposed fines in three cases, and two remain outstanding. (1) In one case, the SLI found that a firm illegally employed minors at a clothing factory and made recommendations to the firm on how to bring their employment into conformity with Moldovan labor standards. However, before any further action could be taken, the minors reportedly left the firm. (1) Both government and NGO sources reported that the child labor violations identified by the government during the reporting period did not reflect the magnitude of the child labor problem in Moldova due to an insufficient number of labor inspectors, budget limitations, cultural acceptance of child labor on family farms, and legal limitations on the government's ability to conduct inspections. The number of child survivors of abuse, trauma, and exploitation supported by NGOs is substantially greater than the number of government investigations of such cases. (1,5)

During the reporting period, the government did not provide labor inspectors with any training specific to child labor. However, the ILO supported a training for 83 inspectors on creating a modern and effective labor inspection system. (1)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Moldova took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including a lack of training for new criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (2)	Yes (1)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	No (2)	N/A (1)

Number of Violations Found	32 (2)	34 (52)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	21 (2)	15 (52)

During the reporting period, law enforcement authorities took several steps to prevent and eliminate the rise in cases of online commercial sexual exploitation of children, such as obtaining new specialized equipment from the U.S. Government to investigate cybercrime, including child pornography. The Committee for Combating Trafficking in Persons (CCTIP) and other law enforcement agencies sent officers, both newly employed and veterans, to at least 15 different trainings on human trafficking, child pornography, child online sexual exploitation, and child protection. (1,53) Additionally, the PGO, in coordination with an NGO, created a guide on addressing sexual abuse and exploitation of children through information technologies among children who spent significant amounts of time online as a result of the pandemic. The government also made efforts to reduce the demand for commercial sex acts by developing, in collaboration with an NGO, the methodology for a behavioral analysis study of convicted child sex offenders. (5)

In 2021, authorities initiated 14 new investigations into cases of trafficking children for commercial exploitation, and 4 new investigations of trafficking children for labor exploitation. Courts also convicted 25 individuals for child trafficking and 24 individuals for child pornography offenses. (53) The government reported additional investigations, prosecutions, and convictions for child labor offenses, but did not provide any further details for inclusion in this report. (52) However, reports indicate that many authorities still lack adequate training to identify potential child trafficking survivors. (5) Laws providing special interview services for child survivors of human trafficking are also not uniformly applied, which can result in re-traumatization of survivors. In some cases involving child survivors ages 14 to 18, judges permitted traffickers to be present during child interviews and often refused to apply special interviewing measures, such as conducting interviews in specially equipped rooms and with a psychologist present. (4,5,53) Even in cases in which children are provided with alternate means of testifying, such as from a separate room with video and audio recording, these rooms are often not adequately soundproofed which results in the child being able to hear everything that is happening in the main courtroom, including the suspect's reactions to their testimony. (53)

The PGO expanded its mandate to investigate child sexual exploitation cases involving information and communication technologies, and approved guidelines for identifying, investigating, and prosecuting such cases. (4) Within the judiciary, specialized judges are trained specifically to handle cases involving human trafficking and other related crimes, such as child pornography. (13) Judges sometimes reclassified cases from human trafficking crimes to crimes with lesser penalties, such as pimping. When such reclassification occurs, survivors of human trafficking are no longer protected by the provision of the criminal code that exempts trafficking survivors from criminal liability for offenses committed because of their exploitation. (5) Sources report that child survivors of human trafficking were in some cases charged for their participation in unlawful acts that they were compelled to commit as a result of being trafficked. (5)

Criminal investigators within the CCTIP have well-furnished offices as a result of U.S. Government support over the last 10 years. However, the CCTIP does not have sufficient vehicles or fuel allocations for its daily investigation activities, nor does it have updated computer equipment. (1,2) High staff turnover in the past year has also hindered the CCTIP's effectiveness. (1,2,17)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of coordination efforts of the National Council for the Protection of Child Rights.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Council for Human Rights	Monitors and assesses the implementation of the Human Rights National Action Plan (2018–2022), which includes activities dedicated to protecting child rights and preventing exploitation of children, including in child labor. (2,8,54,55) Monitors, evaluates, and coordinates efforts to comply with other national policies related to human rights and human rights treaties to which Moldova is a State Party, including those related to child labor. (54) Research was unable to determine whether the council was active during the reporting period.
National Committee for Combating Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates efforts to prevent and eliminate child trafficking and child sexual exploitation. Members include SLI, Security and Intelligence Service, Agency for Public Services, and other government departments. (1,3,9,16,21) Drafts legislation related to human trafficking, participates in human anti-trafficking campaigns, and develops national action plans. In April 2021, published a report on the previous year's activities. (56)
National Referral System for the Protection and Assistance of Victims and Potential Victims of Human Trafficking (NRS)	Builds the capacity of multidisciplinary teams at the local level, which include community social assistants, police officers, and NGO workers, to improve survivor identification and referral for crisis intervention and rehabilitation. (2,16) Part of MHLSP, and represents the main institutional mechanism for the provision of rehabilitation and reintegration assistance to survivors of labor exploitation and sexual violence. NRS continued to operate during the reporting period. (1,2,57)
Intersectorial Collaboration Mechanism for the Protection of Children	Enables social services to refer cases to law enforcement when children are presumed to be at risk of violence, neglect, exploitation, or human trafficking. Implemented through collaboration between public authorities at the central or local level. (1,5) Research was unable to determine whether this mechanism was active during the reporting period.
National Council for the Protection of Child Rights	Coordinates national efforts to address child exploitation and improve access to education. (9) Chaired by the Prime Minister, and includes the Deputy Minister of Health, Labor, and Social Protection, as well as representatives from the Ministries of Justice, Education, Interior, Foreign Affairs and European Integration, and others. (2) Has a working group to discuss existing gaps in the current birth registration process and develop recommendations. (58) Research was unable to determine whether the council was active during the reporting period.
Human Rights Ombudsman	Monitors and publishes annual reports on observance of human rights, including the rights of children. Through the Office of the Ombudsman for Children's Rights, receives and responds to complaints about children's rights violations, including child labor. (59) In 2021, published several reports on child welfare including impacts of the COVID-19 pandemic, progress on compliance with UN conventions, and an analysis of the Ombudsman's activities between 2016 and 2020. (60-62)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW AND PRACTICE THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

The expansion of the National Referral System into a National Referral Mechanism that would merge with other survivor assistance mechanisms and offer protection and services to additional vulnerable populations, proposed in 2020, has not yet been approved. (2,5) As in previous years, the number of survivors referred for services continues to be far lower than the number of victims identified due to limited resources. (53)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Moldova Strategy Country Note Program Priorities (2018–2022)	Focuses on protecting all children's rights, including education and health, especially for children from ethnic minorities, children from low-income families, children with disabilities, and children left behind because of parental migration. (65) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (8,55)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Decent Work Country Program (2021–2024)	ILO program that aims to gather statistics on the prevalence of child labor; build the capacity of the labor inspectorate, and eliminate labor exploitation in the construction and agriculture sectors. In 2021, the government signed a new Decent Work agreement for 2021 through 2024, which focuses on creating inclusive and productive employment for youth, effective protection at work, and improved social dialogue. (66)
Center for Protection and Assistance for Victims of Human Trafficking†	Government-funded shelter for survivors of human trafficking from Moldova that offers accommodations, rehabilitation, and reintegration services, and which contains a special wing for child survivors. (1,2,8) In 2021, 57 children received services at this shelter. (1)
Child Helpline‡	Managed by the NGO National Center for the Prevention of Child Abuse, provides psychological counseling and information to parents and children experiencing violence, neglect, or exploitation. (1,8,13) In 2021, the helpline received 3,349 calls. (1)
Hotlines‡	A dedicated children's hotline is managed by MHLSP, and refers cases within NRS. (1,4,8) In 2021, the child hotline received seven calls, all of which resulted in investigations of either child labor or child trafficking. (53) PGO manages the Anti-Trafficking Green Line Telephone for specialist prosecutors. (1,2,8) In addition, the NGO La Strada manages the national hotline for women and children, which received 2,040 calls in 2021. (1)
Social Aid Program and Social Support for Families with Children†	Provides cash assistance to families. The Social Aid Program, implemented by the district departments of social assistance and family protection, has provided aid for low-income families since 2008; this program continued to operate in 2021. (1,2,67) The Social Support Service for Families with Children program has operated since 2013. The government allocated $1.85 million for families in 2021. (1)

† Program is funded by the Government of Moldova.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (4,8,18)

Civil society organizations have assisted in removing children from exploitive situations, but much of this work is done with the support of foreign donors. Observers report there are insufficient services for resocialization and reintegration of child survivors of sexual exploitation and sexual abuse. (1,2,5,13) Existing social programs do not meet the current level of need, particularly for children working in agriculture and child survivors of human trafficking who require long-term care. (4,8)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Moldova (Table 11).

In 2021, Mongolia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. Through the United States-Mongolia Child Protection Compact Partnership, the government formed a Multi-Disciplinary Taskforce of more than 18 governmental and non-governmental organizations to address human trafficking. It also revised its Labor Law to set the minimum age for work at 15 and the minimum age for light work at 13. In addition, the National Statistical Committee, in cooperation with International Labor Organization Mongolia, started collecting information for a national-level survey on child labor. However, children in Mongolia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in mining and horse jockeying. Mongolia's Revised Labor Law allows for unannounced inspections, but only in the formal work sector, which may impede the enforcement of child labor laws. Mongolia also lacks sustained training opportunities for child protection officers and labor inspectors. In addition, the government did not provide full information on its criminal law enforcement efforts, including information on training for criminal investigators and the number of prosecutions initiated, for inclusion in this report.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mongolia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced begging and commercial sexual exploitation. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in mining and horse jockeying. (1-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mongolia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	11.4 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	94.8
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	12.6
Primary Completion Rate (%)		107.5

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (7)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 6 (MICS 6), 2018. (8)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Animal husbandry,† including herding† (2,6,9,10)
Industry	Construction,† including carrying and loading bricks, cement and steel framework, mixing construction solutions such as lime or cement,† binding steel framework, and cleaning at the construction site† (2,6,9,10) Mining† coal,† gold, and fluorspar (2,6,10,12,13)
Services	Horse jockeying† (1,3,6,9,14,15) Scavenging in garbage dumpsites (2,6,9) Handling freight† (2,6) Domestic work† (6,9) Ticket-taking for public transportation† (6,10,14) Street work, including vending,† and washing cars (6,10,13,17)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (6,9,10,15-19)
	Forced labor in begging (9,10,16,17)
	Forced labor in construction, mining, horse jockeying, animal husbandry, industrial sectors, and contortionist work (6,9)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Mongolian children are generally trafficked internally for the purpose of commercial sexual exploitation in saunas, bars, hotels, karaoke clubs, and massage parlors. However, many of these venues closed during the COVID-19 pandemic and victims were forced to work from client's homes, making it difficult to detect child trafficking. (6,9,15,16,18,20-22) During the reporting year, online sexual trafficking of children, especially for sexual abuse, pornography, grooming, and sextortion, increased, including 23 underaged victims found to be involved in online sexual trafficking. (6,23)

According to Mongolia’s National Child Labor Survey, children’s employment is more prevalent in rural areas than in urban areas, with 9 out of 10 children exploited in situations of hazardous work found to be boys. (2,12,16) Children also work as horse jockeys and face a number of health and safety hazards, including exposure to extremely cold temperatures, risk of brain and bone injuries, and fatal falls. (1,3,4,10,17,18,24-26) Although Mongolian law prohibits participation in pre-training and horse racing during November 1 through May 1, children continue to participate in these activities throughout the year. (3,4,12,15,17,27-30) In addition to safety concerns, participation in horse racing may impact school attendance, particularly because Mongolian law does not set an age limit for jockeys except during the Naadam Festival in July, during which children as young as age 7 are allowed to participate. (12,15,26,27) During the reporting year, there were 1,918 instances of child jockey participation. (6)

In October 2021, the Government of Mongolia, in cooperation with ILO Mongolia, started collecting information for a national-level survey on child labor. Survey results will be published in 2023. (6)

As the mining industry continues to grow in the southern part of Mongolia, children, particularly girls, are at increased risk of commercial sexual exploitation and forced labor in artisanal mining. Girls are vulnerable to exploitation in nightclubs near mining towns, solicitation by drivers waiting to cross the border into China, or may become victims of sex trafficking while their parents are on extended shift rotations. (9,12) Increasingly, boys are hired by Chinese companies to work at agricultural establishments, sometimes under ambiguous immigration status, putting them at a high risk for human trafficking. (9)

Children in Ulaanbaatar and in rural areas may face challenges in accessing education due to an insufficient number of schools, overcrowding, a lack of trained teachers, and a lack of accessibility for children with disabilities. (10,12,15,17,30,31) In addition, families must register their residence and provide an original copy of a child's birth certificate for their children to have access to a free public education. (10,17) Many children—including many children with disabilities—lacked appropriate resources to access these services, such as electricity, laptops, and televisions. (10,32) According to educators, although Government Resolution No. 235 (Measures Regarding Inclusive Education) mandates that all mainstream schools accept students with disabilities, the infrastructure is inadequate to allow full accessibility to students with disabilities. (10,30,32,33) According to Mongolia’s National Statistics Office, more than 100,000 persons live with disabilities in Mongolia, including 12,000 children. Outside Ulaanbaatar, none of Mongolia’s provinces have schools appropriate for children with special needs, which means about 40 percent of these children stay home. (34)

During the reporting period, most in-class education was suspended until September 2021 due to the pandemic. Virtual learning was not available for families in poverty, which has inadvertently pushed vulnerable children into hazardous working conditions, including working longer hours. (6)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mongolia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Mongolia's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a minimum age for work that is lower than the compulsory school age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	Yes	15	Articles 3, 142.1 and 165 of the Revised Labor Law (35)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 142.2 of the Revised Labor Law; List of Jobs and Occupations Prohibited to Minors (35-37)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes		Articles 2 and 3 of the List of Jobs and Occupations Prohibited to Minors; Article 8 of the Law on the National Naadam Holiday (27,37)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 142.2 of the Revised Labor Law; Articles 13.1, 16.4, and 16.10 of the Criminal Code; Articles 2, 3, 15, and 17 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons; Article 7 of the Law on Labor; Article 7 of the Law on the Rights of the Child (35,38-40)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 3 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons; Article 13.1 of the Criminal Code (38,39,41)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 12.3, 13.1, 16.8, 16.9 and 115 of the Criminal Code; Articles 8.1.3 and 10.2 of the Combating Pornography and Prostitution Act; Article 3 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons (38,41,42)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 142.2 of the Revised Labor Law; Article 192 of the Criminal Code (35)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 12 of the Law on Military (43)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 12 of the Law on Military (43)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	No
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	16	Article 46 of the Law on Education (44)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 16 of the Constitution of Mongolia; Articles 6.1–6.3 of the Law on Education (44,45)

The Revised Labor Law was enacted on July 2, 2021, and its provisions went into effect on January 1, 2022. It has several provisions related to child labor: (6,35) The law includes a formal prohibition of child labor exploitation; sets the minimum age for work at 15, with light work permitted for children ages 13 and older; requires a tripartite labor agreement between the employer, a legal guardian, and the child for underage children to be able to work; and permits unannounced inspections in the formal work sector. (6,35) However, light work activities have not yet been defined.

As the minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, children may be encouraged to leave school before the completion of compulsory education

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the authority of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
General Agency for Specialized Inspection (GASI)	Enforces labor laws, including those related to child labor. (9,22,28) Conducts inspections at registered businesses in the formal sector. (9,28)
National Police Agency (NPA)	Maintains primary responsibility for investigating criminal cases. (21,22) Provides protection to victims and witnesses throughout the judicial process. Reports to the Ministry of Justice and Home Affairs. (21,22) In 2021, created a specific Division for Combating Against Domestic Violence and Crimes Against Children, which increased the nationwide police capacity to 103 officers who work on crimes against children. (46) The Crime Prevention Division works to protect unattended children on the streets, identifying and returning children to their parents or referring them to Child Care and Protection Centers. The Juvenile Crime Prevention Unit protects children from being victims of crime and prevents them from committing crimes. (18) The Organized Crime Division, located under the Criminal Police Department, receives referrals and opens formal criminal investigations into human trafficking and sexual exploitation cases while working with the Prosecutor's Office to decide whether to take a case to court. Oversees the Anti-Trafficking Unit that has primary responsibility for investigating human trafficking cases and comprises of one chief police officer and four junior investigators. (9,19,20,22) Uses an 11-question risk assessment checklist to help accurately identify human trafficking victims and refers them to short- or long-term care facilities. (9,10,16,19,22) The Criminal Police Department can take action against individuals complicit in the worst forms of child labor but is not empowered to close venues in which child labor is found. (22)
Anti-Trafficking Enforcement: Mongolian Immigration Agency and General Authority for Border Protection	Responsible for investigating trafficking cases involving victims who cross international borders, including children. Both agencies track and identify minors who cross the border, including minors who cross the border with adults but are left behind when the accompanying adult returns to Mongolia. (22)
Family, Child, and Youth Development Agency (FCYDA)	Employs 41 child rights officers who oversee child protection issues, including child labor, and identifies and removes children working under hazardous conditions. Maintains a nationwide, toll-free child helpline for reporting child labor and child rights violations. (6) Helpline is staffed by 22 employees, a social worker, and a response team that is available 24 hours a day. (6)

During the reporting period, a special division to address crimes against children was created under the Investigation Department of the National Police Agency (NPA). The NPA assigned 53 police officers nationwide (1 officer per 8,000 children) to protect children from domestic violence and crimes against children. (6,23)

In September 2021, the Anti-Trafficking in Persons Division of the Criminal Police Department, along with the Ministry of Labor and Social Protection (MLSP) and the Gender Equality Center (GEC), jointly organized anti-trafficking training for 60 police officers, investigators, child protection officers, and prosecutors. In December 2021, it also co-organized training with the GEC on interagency cooperation to identify trafficking victims for 21 investigators and prosecutors. (6)

During the reporting period, the Family, Child, and Youth Development Agency (FCYDA) helpline received 108 hazardous child labor calls, 359 sexual abuse calls, and 5 child trafficking-related calls that were referred for further assistance to appropriate agencies. (6,23) In addition, the FCYDA maintains a nationwide database for tracking case status and the social services needs of vulnerable children, which is accessible from all FCYDA local and central offices. In 2021, the FCYDA reported it assisted 144 child laborers nationwide. (6)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Mongolia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient financial resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

During the reporting period, NGO and government officials reported that the enforcement of child labor laws remained challenging due to the legal requirement that the General Agency for Specialized Inspection (GASI) must give employers 48 hours advance notification before conducting an inspection, particularly in the informal sector, which provides employers with enough time to conceal violations. (6,15,30)

During the reporting period, the government and NGOs noted that funding and resources for inspectors remained insufficient. (6,9,48) Many labor inspectors were transferred to full-time COVID-19 prevention and operations duties for most of the year, and the government cancelled all mining, road, and construction inspections in 2021. (6) Although the FCYDA reported that its child rights officers did not receive any training in 2021, 145 GASI inspectors were trained in addressing and preventing trafficking in persons, including labor exploitation and child labor, under the project co-implemented by the Mongolian MLSP and the South Korean Ministry of Gender Equity and Family. (6)

The government only conducts child labor inspections at horse racing events between June and October, during the months that children are legally allowed to participate in races. During these inspections, GASI verifies that riders meet minimum age requirements, use safety equipment, and obtain the required insurance; however, GASI does not have the authority to impose penalties for child labor law violations found in horse-racing. (10,17,18,30) Although child rights officers have the ability to impose sanctions for certain labor law violations under the Child Protection Law, including child labor violations related to horse racing, the law suggests that they may only be allowed to do so if the child actually suffers harm. (49,50) In addition, liability for violations related to horse racing appears to extend only to stakeholders and the organizers of races, and it may not cover parents or other family members who use children as jockeys. Given the lack of clarity in the language of the Child Protection Law, many violators are able to evade punishment. (49,50)

The government did not publicly release information on its labor law enforcement efforts, including information on labor inspectorate funding, the number of child labor violations found, and whether routine inspections were conducted.

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mongolia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including lack of training for criminal investigators.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (10)	Unknown (6)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (10)	Unknown (6)
Refresher Courses Provided	Unknown (10)	Unknown (6)
Number of Investigations	41 (10)	23 (6)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (10)	Unknown (6)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	12 (32)	Unknown (6)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (10)	0 (6)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (10)	Unknown (6)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (10)	Yes (6)

Mongolian police reported one case of a child in forced hazardous labor. There also were reports of 14 potential underage victims of sexual exploitation who were identified and whose cases were under investigation in 2021. (6)

Research indicated that there was a lack of resources, including insufficient funding for law enforcement agencies, which resulted in insufficient training opportunities for criminal law enforcement officers. (6,9,17,21,22) Furthermore, reports indicate that among some police officers and government officials, there is a lack of understanding of the use of male children in commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking, as well as a general unfamiliarity with human trafficking-specific provisions of the Criminal Code. (9,12) As a result, many cases involving boys are not prosecuted under the human trafficking article of the Criminal Code, which carries harsher penalties, but are instead prosecuted under other offenses that carry lighter penalties. (9,12,51)

Research noted that complex case initiation and referral procedures, coupled with restrictions on contact between anti-trafficking police and prosecutors, at times hindered investigations and prosecutions. (9,10) NGOs also continued to express concern over a legal provision in the Criminal Code Article 6.12 (Release from Imprisonment by Parole, Arranged Supervision), which allows the early release of some incarcerated traffickers, arguing that such leniency could potentially contribute to continued instances of human trafficking. (9,32,41)

Due to a lack of understanding of victim protection in relation to the Law on Petty Offenses, research found that police reportedly continued to detain child victims as a direct result of the unlawful acts they were forced to commit. (9,32,52) The NPA reported that due to a misapplication of Article 6.18.4 in the Law on Petty Offenses, police erroneously fined two children for prostitution instead of referring them to the FCYDA. (10,22,32) Coupled with the lack of evidence collected by law enforcement to support investigations into human trafficking, some victims become hesitant to self-report or testify due to the fear that they may face prosecution for crimes they were forced to commit. (9,13,22,53)

During the reporting period, the government failed to publish criminal law enforcement data related to the worst forms of child labor, including whether trainings for new criminal investigators were conducted, whether refresher courses were offered, the number of violations, the number of convictions, and penalties imposed for violations. (10)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Committee for Children	Serves as the overall coordinating body for nationwide child protection efforts. Implements the National Program on Child Development and Protection (2017–2021). (6,10) Established in 2018 and headed by the Prime Minister, with the Minister of Labor and Social Protection (MLSP) as deputy head. (6,10) Mandate for the committee was renewed in December 2020 and remained active. (6)
National Anti-Trafficking Sub-Council	Mandate renewed in February 2021. Chaired by the Crime Prevention and Coordination Council. (54) Coordinates government efforts to address human trafficking and monitors implementation of anti-trafficking legislation. (22,52) Functions as part of the Council on Crime Prevention under the Ministry of Justice and Home Affairs. (48) In 2020, agreed to work with prosecutors, police, and child protection officers to establish, provide support for, and maintain an operational multi-disciplinary task force focused on interagency coordination of identification and protection of child trafficking victims, and investigation and prosecution of child trafficking crimes. (22) Met once in 2021. (6)
Ministry of Justice and Home Affairs, Crime Prevention and Coordination Council	Coordinates working-level law enforcement efforts related to trafficking in persons. Overseen by the Ministry of Justice and Home Affairs. (22) Remained active during the reporting year. (46)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Program on Child Development and Protection (2017–2021)	Incorporates the National Program for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor and the National Action Plan. (16) Coordinates child labor and child protection issues through the MLSP; Education, Culture, Science and Sports; and Health. (16,55) In an effort to advance the National Program on Child Development and Protection, FCYDA accredited 41 NGOs to assist in providing child protection services. (18) During the reporting period, it was reported that no specific funding was allocated for this program. (6)
Child Protection Compact Partnership (2020–2024)	Partnership between the Governments of Mongolia and the United States. (10,22,51,53,56) A $5.5 million cooperative agreement to fight all forms of child trafficking led by World Vision. Works with the Crime Prevention and Coordinating Council and National Sub-Council on Trafficking in Persons. (51,53–57) Objectives include: improving interagency coordination and collaboration of child trafficking investigation, prosecution, protection, and prevention efforts by establishing and maintaining an operational Multi-Disciplinary Task Force under the National Sub-Council on Trafficking in Persons; improving the quality of victim-centered investigations and prosecutions with the goal of increasing the number of effective prosecutions and convictions of child trafficking cases; strengthening the Government of Mongolia's and civil society's capacity to identify victims of child trafficking and provide comprehensive specialized services to victims of child sex trafficking and forced child labor; and increasing efforts to prevent child sex trafficking and forced child labor through school, community, and online mechanisms that educate relevant stakeholders regarding the risks and indicators of child trafficking and increase the capacity of public officials, civil society, and private sector stakeholders to take appropriate action. (53–58) In 2021, created a multi-disciplinary task force representing 18 governmental and non-governmental organizations to implement victim-centered, collaborative, and sustainable approaches to identifying human trafficking victims, especially child trafficking victims. (6,23) Held a bilateral dialogue between U.S. and Mongolian government officials and civil society organizations in November 2021. (59)
National Program on Combating Trafficking in Persons (2017–2021)	Designated lead for anti-trafficking efforts. Provides technical and professional guidance on the prevention of human trafficking. (9,21,22,52) Implemented and managed by the National Anti-Trafficking Sub-Council. (9,21,22) Aims to strengthen efforts to prevent different types of human trafficking, including the commercial sexual exploitation of children, and improve protective services for survivors by using the internationally recognized principles of the "Four Ps"—prevention, protection, prosecution, and partnership. (13,16,20,22,24,52) During the reporting year, budgeted $141,140 to implement its programs and $117,403 for planned activities, while the remaining funds were redirected to respond to the pandemic. (46)
State Policy on Herders (2020–2024)	Describes the acceptable minimum conditions and criteria for employing children in herding. (60) Activities include projects to improve housing and access to information for herders, and to ensure that children engaged in herding receive an education. Each year, the government allocates 1 percent of its budget to implement the policy. (61) Revised policy was adopted in 2020; however, changes did not relate to child labor or child protection. (46)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Children's Money Program†	Program operated by the General Agency for Social Welfare and Service, General Agency for State Registration, and the Human Development Fund. Distributes a monthly stipend to vulnerable children under age 18 and aims to prevent child labor by offsetting costs related to food, school, and clothing. (16,62) In 2021, the government provided $35 per child to mitigate some of the economic impacts of the pandemic. (6,30,63)
School Lunch Program†	Government-mandated program that subsidizes meals to encourage low-income children to attend school, particularly at the primary level. (28) Program was halted during pandemic-related school closures and funds were used to provide emergency assistance to children of families in need. (6)
Dream Umbrella*	Coordination Council of Crimes Prevention of Mongolia, in partnership with the IOM, launched a public information campaign to raise awareness among young women on what human trafficking entails, where to report the crime or access reliable and trustworthy information, and how to refer a case or seek help. Funded by the Government of the Netherlands' Ministry for Foreign Trade and Development Cooperation. (64) In March 2021, organized a 21-day public information campaign to raise awareness among young women on what human trafficking entails, where to report the crime or access reliable and trustworthy information, and how to refer a case or seek help. Moreover, during the reporting year shared 98 public posts on the prevention of human trafficking. (46)

* Program was launched during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Mongolia.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor.

Research found that there is a shortage of long-term stay shelters, and most temporary shelters are not accessible to victims with disabilities. (9,16-18,21,22,30) Although Mongolia has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem. (10)

In 2021, Montenegro made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government took several steps to counter child begging, including by establishing a new Coordination Body for Monitoring and Implementing the Protocol on How Bodies, Institutions, and Organizations in Montenegro Treat Children Living and Working on the Streets, which started revising the text of the Protocol. Additionally, the Parliament approved a new monthly cash allowance for children under age 6 and adopted the new Strategy for the Social Inclusion of Roma and Egyptians (2021–2025). However, children in Montenegro are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. In addition, research found that the scope of programs to address child labor in street work is insufficient.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Montenegro are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-6) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Montenegro. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	18.3 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	91.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	19.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		103.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2020, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (3)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5 (MICS 5), 2013. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Services	Street work, including vending small goods and begging (2)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,2,5,7,8)
	Forced begging (2)
	Forced domestic work (9-12)
	Use in illicit activities, including the harvesting and trafficking of drugs (13,14)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Montenegro is a source, destination, and transit country for trafficking of children for forced labor, including forced begging, especially among Roma children. (1,7,13) Some Roma, Ashkali, and Balkan Egyptian girls from Montenegro are sold and forced into domestic servitude in both Montenegro and Kosovo. (1,10,11) Children, especially girls, are victims of trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation internally and transnationally within the region. (1,7)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The inability to enroll in school makes some Montenegrin children vulnerable to child labor. Some Roma, Ashkali, and Balkan Egyptian children, as well as some Kosovar children who are internally displaced, have difficulty accessing education services (along with other social services) because they lack birth registration documents. (2,7,12,14) This lack of birth records is often due to parents not registering their births or because their birth records were destroyed during recent conflicts. (15) In addition, some children with disabilities experience difficulty physically accessing educational facilities and have limited government social services available to them. (12,14)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Montenegro has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government's laws and regulations are in line with relevant international standards (Table 4).

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15	Article 4 of the Law on Primary Education (22)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 75 of the Constitution (18)

* Country has no conscription (20)

During the reporting period, the new Law on Changes to the Law on Social and Child Protection was adopted by Parliament. The law declared that all children under the age of 6 should receive a monthly allowance; eligible children began receiving monthly allowances of approximately $34 in October 2021. (6,23) Other children at risk for child labor, including those living at or below the national poverty level, may also be entitled to monthly allowances. (23)

During the reporting period, the government continued collaborating with the ILO to create a comprehensive list of hazardous jobs. (6)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Labor Inspectorate	Leads and monitors the enforcement of labor laws, including those that protect working children and affect working conditions throughout the country. (13,24,25) Part of the Inspectorate General. (26)
Ministry of Interior	Houses the Police Directorate and the Office for the Fight Against Trafficking in Humans (Trafficking in Persons Department). Through its Police Directorate, investigates and enforces criminal laws on forced labor and human trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation. (25) Coordinates law enforcement actions, including identification of victims of human trafficking. (24,25) Prevents and investigates child begging by removing child beggars from the streets through the Beggar Task Force. (7,8) Through its TIP Department, coordinates efforts against human trafficking among relevant institutions and international organizations, harmonizes legislation, maintains data on human trafficking, and funds hotlines for victims of human trafficking. (25)
Supreme State Prosecutor	Investigates and enforces criminal laws on forced labor and human trafficking for commercial sexual exploitation. (24) Collects data on the number of police investigations, convictions, and court rulings, and submits them to the TIP Department. (24)
Ministry of Justice, Human, and Minority Rights	Enforces the Criminal Code by prosecuting crimes against children, including human trafficking, child begging, and child abuse. (24)
Ministry of Finance and Social Welfare (MFSW)	Protects children and families by providing social, child, and family protection in its Social Welfare Centers. Identifies potential victims of human trafficking, and funds programs for victim protection and the shelter for victims of human trafficking. (24)

During the reporting period, the former Ministry of Justice was renamed the Ministry of Justice, Human, and Minority Rights. Additionally, the Ministry of Labor and Social Welfare divided its responsibilities between the newly formed Ministry of Finance and the Ministry of Economic Development, which also coordinates and monitors all labor relations on behalf of the government. (6)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Montenegro took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Finance and Social Welfare that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including inadequate resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The Labor Inspectorate has 15 offices that proactively plan labor inspections. (24) All inspectors monitor the enforcement of child labor. In addition, the Labor Inspectorate maintains a national call center and an e-mail line for receiving complaints. (24,25) The government maintains a database on children involved in begging, but it does not collect or publish data on the worst forms of child labor. (14)

Labor inspectors can inspect registered farms, and Social Welfare Centers (SWCs) can inspect unregistered farms to detect child labor. (6) Children found during labor inspections can be sent to SWCs and accommodated in a government-financed, NGO-run shelter for human trafficking victims. (6) If child labor is found by SWCs, social workers cooperate with labor inspectors and criminal law enforcement to ensure that children receive proper support and protection from further exploitation. Labor inspections increase during the summer months, particularly in the tourism sector throughout the coastal region. (6,24,28) Although Montenegro's number of labor inspectors is in line with the ILO's technical advice, reports indicate that the number of inspectors is still insufficient to adequately enforce its labor laws, particularly during the COVID-19 pandemic. (6)

During the reporting period, police assisted 119 children engaged in forced begging as part of the new "Operation Beggar" initiative. (6) Additionally, inspectors attended a number of trainings designed by the Human Resources Administration and the Trafficking in Persons Department of the Ministry of Interior about identification of victims of forced labor and trafficking in persons. The Strategy for Combating Trafficking in Persons 2019–2024 indicates that the Labor Inspectorate should conduct regular inspections to flag potential labor trafficking cases for follow-up. (6)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, the government's criminal law enforcement agencies appeared to function adequately in addressing child labor (Table 7).

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (24)	Yes (6)

An eight-member police unit within the Police Directorate investigates human trafficking and illegal migration throughout the country. (14) Police investigate children working on the street, and those who are found begging or requiring social assistance can be accommodated in a public institution, called a Ljubović, for up to 30 days while efforts are undertaken to locate their parents. The institution provides accommodation, protection, education, and therapy for children found living on the streets, and when parents are not available, children are referred to local SWCs for longer-term shelter and resources. (2,24)

In 2021, police pursued criminal charges against four individuals for trafficking in persons, with two cases related to labor exploitation of minors. Additionally, one individual was convicted and sentenced to two years in prison for exploitation of a minor through forced marriage. (6) Furthermore, 23 police investigators attended ILO-sponsored trainings on the identification and prevention of forced child labor. Also in 2021, the TIP Department collaborated with the OSCE Mission in Montenegro to train 68 investigators on suppression of trafficking in persons, including trafficking in persons for the purposes of the worst forms of child labor. (6)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Office of the National Anti-Trafficking Coordinator (TIP Department)	Coordinates efforts, projects, and legislation to prevent and eliminate trafficking in persons and the worst forms of child labor among relevant government institutions and international organizations. (13,25) Collects and maintains data on investigations and court rulings. (2) Operates Trafficking in Persons working group to monitor and promote activities related to addressing human trafficking, and assesses progress toward meeting objectives established in action plans. Includes representatives of seven government ministries (in addition to the Police Directorate, Supreme Court, Supreme State Prosecutors, and Inspectorate Authority), two NGOs, and multiple international organizations. (2,25,28) During the reporting period, the Office expanded its membership to include representation from the new MFSW. (6)
Council for the Rights of the Child	Implements and monitors the government's commitments pursuant to the UN CRC, and initiates adoption of legislation to promote and protect the rights of children. Chaired by MFSW and has 12 other members, including 4 NGO members. (2) In 2021, the Deputy Prime Minister assumed chairmanship of the Council (via the Minister of Finance and Social Welfare). The Council met once during the reporting period. (6)

During the reporting period, a number of government agencies worked to draft changes to the Protocol on How Bodies, Institutions, and Organizations in Montenegro Treat Children Living and Working on the Streets, including the creation of specific instructions and measures on how government and non-government entities interact when working with at-risk children. To this end, in March 2021, the Minister of Interior formed a new Monitoring Coordination Body that includes representatives from the Ministry of the Interior; the Police Administration; the Ministry of Education, Science, Culture and Sports; the Ministry of Health; the Ministry of Finance and Social Welfare; the Ministry of Justice, Human, and Minority Rights; and the Ombudsman's office. (6) The Monitoring Coordination Body met four times in 2021. (6)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Strategy for Combating Human Trafficking (2019–2024)	Outlines objectives for addressing human trafficking by raising public awareness, strengthening the capacity for victim identification and services provision, improving interagency coordination, and raising the efficiency of prosecutions. (30) During the reporting period, the Government of Montenegro approved the National Action Plan for 2021, which covered all forms of trafficking in persons and forced labor. (31)
Strategy for Exercising the Rights of the Child in Montenegro (2019–2023)	Seeks to enhance the ability of children to exercise their rights by improving the application of laws related to children; supporting vulnerable children, including those with disabilities; and improving protections for violence against children, including from child trafficking, child prostitution, child pornography, and involvement in armed conflicts. A working group is tasked with producing an annual report detailing the steps it has taken toward achieving the plan's goals. (32) Research was unable to determine whether the policy was active during the reporting period.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Policy	Description
Strategy for the Development of the Social and Child Protection System (2018–2022)	Builds an integrated social and child protection system, including monthly social assistance, health care, and a child allowance that is contingent upon school attendance. (33) Research was unable to determine whether the policy was active during the reporting period.
Strategy for the Social Inclusion of Roma and Egyptians (2021–2025) †	Aims to create social inclusion of Roma and Egyptians by increasing school attendance and birth registration while preventing child begging and human trafficking. Implemented by the Ministry of Justice, Human, and Minority Rights. (6,34)
Strategy for Prevention and Protection of Children from Violence (2017–2021)	Strengthened the national framework in preventing violence against children, including improving legislation and the judicial system. (13,35) Included providing care and services for child victims or those at risk of violence. Aimed to improve protections for children in the country by 2021. (35) Research was unable to determine whether the policy was active during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (6)

The government has not included child labor elimination and prevention strategies in the Strategy for Prevention and Protection of Children from Violence. (33)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
UNICEF Country Program (2016–2021)	Addressed access to social services for children, synchronized the legal framework with EU and UN standards, implemented and monitored policies relevant to children, and applied the principles of the UN CRC. (10,14,36) Research was unable to determine whether the program was active during the reporting period.
Development of Standard Operating Procedures for the Treatment of Children Deprived of Parents or Unaccompanied	Implemented by the Ministry of Interior's TIP Department and UNICEF. (8) Goals include standardizing procedures among all relevant institutions for dealing with unaccompanied children and children separated from parents, and ensuring compliance with both international and national laws for children. (37) Includes procedures on identifying, accommodating, and integrating these children. (37) Research was unable to determine whether the program was active during the reporting period.
Hotline for Victims of Human Trafficking †	SOS Hotline funded by the TIP Department and run by the NGO Montenegrin Women's Lobby. Provides advice, connects victims with service providers, and raises public awareness. (6) During the reporting period, the Hotline received 2,692 calls. (6)
Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP 16) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor	The government collaborated with ILO to implement the USDOL-funded MAP 16 project in Montenegro. Specific goals included improving application of knowledge in support of efforts to eliminate child labor; strengthening the policy-making process; improving the capacity of the government, national authorities, employers' and workers' organizations, and other relevant entities to address child labor; and strengthening partnerships to accelerate progress in addressing child labor. (38) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (7,38,39)

In 2021, the government provided the Shelter for Victims of Human Trafficking with $11,327 in funding. (6) Research indicates that the funding provided for shelter operations was insufficient, and provision of services to individuals with disabilities who are victims of human trafficking remains limited. (7,24)

Although the Government of Montenegro has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, especially for street work and forced begging. (24)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Montenegro (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Enforcement	Consistently track and publish information about children involved in the worst forms of child labor.	2017 – 2021
	Increase the number of prosecutions and convictions of perpetrators involved in commercial sexual exploitation.	2017 – 2021
Government Policies	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor during the reporting period and that data on these activities are published.	2020 – 2021
Social Programs	Build the capacity of schools and other services and programs to accommodate and provide support for children with disabilities.	2015 – 2021
	Increase funding for human trafficking shelters, including for individuals with disabilities who are victims of human trafficking.	2018 – 2021
	Expand existing programs to address the scope of the child labor problem, especially in street work and forced begging.	2018 – 2021
	Make additional efforts to bolster birth registration for children from the Ashkali, Balkan Egyptian, and Roma communities.	2019 – 2021
	Ensure that activities are undertaken to implement key social programs to address child labor during the reporting period and make information about implementation measures publicly available.	2020 – 2021

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

Although research found no evidence that child labor exists in Montserrat, in 2021, the government made minimal advancement in efforts to prevent the worst forms of child labor. The government issued one-time cash payments to families with children as part of its COVID-19 relief efforts. However, Montserrat is assessed as having made only minimal advancement because it continued to implement a law that delays advancement to prevent the worst forms of child labor. Labor inspectors do not have the authority to conduct unannounced inspections, as they must obtain either the business owner's consent or a search warrant in order to enter a business for the purposes of performing an inspection. The lack of unannounced inspections may leave potential violations of child labor laws and other labor abuses undetected in workplaces. Additionally, the government has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. In addition, the law does not prohibit the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups or the use of children in illicit activities.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Research found no evidence that child labor exists in Montserrat. (1) Table 1 provides one key indicator on children's education in Montserrat.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Primary Completion Rate (%)		96.8

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019 published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (2)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

British Overseas Territories (BOTs) recognize the jurisdiction and sovereignty of the United Kingdom (UK), but are constitutionally not part of the UK. They are self-governing, except in the areas of foreign affairs and defense. (3) Domestic UK law does not generally apply unless explicitly extended to Montserrat. (3) Under Article 35(4) of the ILO Constitution, when the UK ratifies a Convention, the Territory must consider if it will accept the Convention. If the Convention is accepted, it is considered applicable to that territory. (3) No key international conventions concerning child labor have been accepted by Montserrat (Table 2).

Table 2. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification
 ILO C. 138, Minimum Age
 ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor
 UN CRC
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict
 UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons

The Government of Montserrat has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 3). However, gaps exist in Montserrat's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including failure to criminalize the use of children in illicit activities.

Free Public Education	Yes		Chapter II, Part 1 of the Education Act (7)

* Country has no conscription (8)

Children under age 18 may not be employed at night or in occupations designated as hazardous. (4) The Labor Code allows children as young as age 14 to engage in light work; however, Montserrat does not have a list of activities that constitute light work, nor does it specify the conditions under which light work may be undertaken, or limit the number of hours for light work. (4) The Minister of Labor for Montserrat is responsible for deciding what constitutes hazardous work; however, Montserrat has not determined by national law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (4,9) In addition, the law does not criminally prohibit the use of children in illicit activities, or the recruitment of children by non-state armed groups. (4,8,9)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for enforcement actions to address child labor, including its worst forms. However, Montserrat has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 4).

Table 4. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor	Prohibits the employment of children, pursuant to the Labor Code under the Labor Commissioner. (10)
Royal Montserrat Police Service	Enforces the laws of Montserrat, including child labor laws. (11)
Department of Social Services	Employs social workers to work on child protection issues. (12) In 2021, issued one-time cash payments to all families with children as part of COVID-19 relief efforts. (13)

Within the Montserrat Department of Labor, the Labor Officer and Labor Inspector are government employees responsible for conducting labor inspections in accordance with the Labor Code. (9) According to Article 8 of the Labor Code, labor inspectors must obtain either the employer's permission or a search warrant to enter a business for the purposes of performing an inspection. As a result, labor inspectors do not have the authority to conduct unannounced inspections. (4) When a report is made of any form of abuse involving a child, the Department of Social Services conducts an initial social inquiry to attempt to verify the allegation and then works with police to coordinate a response. (9)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT – EFFORTS MADE BUT CONTINUED LAW THAT DELAYED ADVANCEMENT

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for mechanisms to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for policies to address child labor.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

As there is no evidence of a problem, there appears to be no need for programs to address child labor. However, during the reporting period, the Statistics Department of Montserrat within the Ministry of Finance and Economic Management published the results of a 2020 labor force survey which includes information on working children. However, the survey only targets workers over age 15, and, as such, does not account for children below the minimum age who may be working. (14)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, the following actions would advance the continued prevention of child labor in Montserrat (Table 5).

Table 5. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ratify international conventions on child labor.	2020 – 2021
	Ensure that the law specifies the types of light work acceptable for children as young as age 14 as well as permitted working conditions and hours.	2020 – 2021
	Determine the types of hazardous work prohibited for children, in consultation with employers' and workers' organizations.	2017 – 2021
	Establish laws to prohibit the use of children in illicit activities.	2020 – 2021
	Ensure that the law criminally prohibits the recruitment of children under age 18 by non-state armed groups.	2016 – 2021
Enforcement	Ensure that the labor inspectorate is authorized to conduct unannounced inspections.	2019 – 2021
Social Programs	Ensure that national labor surveys capture information about all workers, including children working below the minimum age for employment.	2021

In 2021, Morocco made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government increased the number of labor inspectors by over 43 percent and launched a new labor inspectorate information technology management system that enabled remote training sessions for inspectors in compliance with COVID-19 pandemic countermeasures. In addition, the government signed eight partnership agreements with local non-government organizations in various regions of Morocco to counter the prevalence of child labor. However, children in Morocco are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced domestic work. Moroccan law on the minimum age for work does not meet international standards. Furthermore, the scope of government programs that target child labor is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Morocco are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including forced domestic work. Children also engage in child labor in producing artisanal handicrafts. (1,2) Government statistics from 2020 showed 34,000 children under the age of 15 are working; however, the government has not yet made the full data set available, including microdata, leaving the nature and causes of children's involvement in specific forms of child labor unknown. (1,3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Morocco.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Rural Moroccan girls, some as young as age 8, are recruited for domestic work in private urban homes, a practice known locally as petites bonnes. (12,13) Some of these girls are subjected to physical and verbal abuse, excessive working hours, and denied access to educational opportunities by their employers. (9,12–14) Furthermore, some employers confiscate the identity papers of child domestic workers. (12,13) In addition, exploitation in domestic work makes children vulnerable to child sex trafficking in Morocco, neighboring countries such as Spain, and the Persian Gulf. (15) Since 2018, over 18,000 child migrants have gone missing in Europe and most of these minors were from Morocco. (16) These unaccompanied children lack access to stable housing, exposing them to poverty and social exclusion. (16)

Children in Morocco, particularly in rural areas, face barriers to education, including the cost of school materials, poor facilities, and transportation issues. (1) Over 80 percent of children who are economically active have left schooling. (7) Some children must reside in boarding houses to attend school due to long commutes and some families are reluctant to allow children—particularly girls—to make the daily journey for fear of exposure to risks associated with traveling to school. Other barriers to education include fees associated with pre-school and after-school activities and required documentation for school enrollment. (1) The COVID-19 pandemic has also deepened the digital divide in Morocco between those who have access to Internet technology and those who do not. (17,18)

However, in 2021 the Government of Morocco took actions to remove barriers to education. Enrollment procedures have been simplified to allow for non-discriminatory access to public education for all. (7) Moreover, the Government of Morocco reports that 895 migrant and refugee children have received direct aid, while 180 children were beneficiaries of scholarships. In total, 1,800 children received educational support as part of the "AMAL" program. (7,19)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Morocco has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Morocco's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including a minimum age for work that does not meet international standards.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

The labor law does not apply to children who work in the traditional artisan or handicraft sectors for family businesses with fewer than five employees. (20)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Economic Inclusion, Small Business, Employment and Skills (MEIPEEC)	Enforces child labor laws with its 54 inspection offices throughout the country. (7)
Ministry of the Interior	Enforces prohibitions on trafficking in persons, prostitution, and other exploitative crimes involving minors, as established in the Penal Code, through the General Directorate of National Security. (1)
General Prosecutor	Prosecutes criminal offenses against children and processes cases involving women and children in the court system. (1, 11, 29, 30) Serves independently as a judiciary body separate from the Ministry of Justice. (1)
Ministry of Solidarity, Social Inclusion, and Family (MSVFSFSD)	Leads all public policy on child protection. (7)

In 2021, a Moroccan judge from the Taroudant province ordered the parents of 24 girls to follow the law and enroll their daughters in high school. This represents an unprecedented intervention by the Moroccan judge, who through his decision enforced the education laws of the country. (31)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Morocco took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the authority of the Ministry of Economic Inclusion, Small Business, Employment and Skills that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including an insufficient number of labor inspectors.

† Data are from January 1, 2020, to September 30, 2020. (1)

In 2021, the Government of Morocco increased the number of labor inspectors by more than 43 percent, from 282 to 404 inspectors in total. (1,7) In addition, the government launched a new labor inspectorate information technology management system which enabled remote training sessions for inspectors in compliance with pandemic countermeasures. (7) During the reporting period, 998 children were removed from worksites considered dangerous by inspectors. The Government of Morocco maintains 54 "designated focal points," which serve to coordinate efforts among labor inspectors as they work to deal with the prevalence of child labor. (7)

Despite these efforts, the number of labor inspectors remains likely insufficient for the size of Morocco's workforce, which includes more than 11 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Morocco would need to employ about 797 labor inspectors. (32,33) Government officials report that funding for the labor inspectorate is insufficient and prevents the inspectorate from fully performing its duties. (7)

In addition, the official procedures involved in processing child labor violations require the participation of several agencies for each case, which places considerable administrative burden on labor inspectors. Penalties for employing children in hazardous work are also insufficient to act as a deterrent to child labor. (1,34,35) Despite regulations to inform agencies on implementing the 2016 Law on Setting Up Employment Conditions of Domestic Workers, there remain enforcement issues, such as the lack of inspections of closed private residences, in which many child domestic workers are employed. (7,29,36)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Morocco took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the lack of publication of criminal law enforcement data.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021

Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (1)	Unknown (7)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (1)	No (37)

In 2021, the General Directorate of National Security carried out a 30-hour training session at the national police headquarters on protecting children's rights, including psychological aid to children, investigations and forensics related to child victims, and laws on violence against children. (7) In addition, the Ministry of Justice provided a training session for law enforcement officials and prosecutors pertaining to the implementation of Domestic Labor Law 19.12. (7) The Public Prosecutor's Office also organized trainings to help prosecutors recognize the indicators of human trafficking of child victims. The Ministry of the Interior held online trainings on human trafficking and smuggling of migrants. (10)

However, the government did not provide information on the number of investigations, violations found, prosecutions initiated, convictions, or penalties imposed for the worst forms of child labor for inclusion of this report. (7) In addition, no formal referral mechanism exists between criminal authorities and social services and coordination varies from region to region. (37)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8).

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Technical Committee Under the Special Ministerial Commission for Children for the Protection and Improvement of Childhood	Ensures intersectoral coordination and monitoring for implementing international conventions on children's issues through a committee of 25 government bodies, chaired by the Head of the Government of Morocco. Establishes strategies and mechanisms to implement national policies and plans for child protection and coordinates the management of efforts at the local and regional levels. (1,38) Due to pandemic restrictions, no meetings took place under this coordinating body during the reporting period. (37)
Commission for the Support of Women Victims of Violence	Monitors policies and actions against child labor, ensuring coordination on child labor issues between labor inspectors and those NGOs that have partnership projects with the government of Morocco. Made up of 19 ministerial departments and is chaired by the Head of Government. (7) Research was unable to determine whether this coordinating body was active during the reporting period.
Interministerial Committee for Combating Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates the government's approach to trafficking in persons on an interministerial level. Conducts training sessions for members of the security services. (2) Chaired by the Head of the Government of Morocco and led by the Ministry of Justice, with representation from civil society. (7,37) Established in May 2019. (1,2,39) In 2021, the Committee carried out four training sessions with the Council of Europe, covering themes of human trafficking and management of crime scenes. (10)

Due to the restrictions associated with the pandemic, a number of coordination activities including regular meetings were cancelled in 2021. (7,37)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Ministry of Solidarity, Social Inclusion, and Family (MSWFSD) Integrated Public Policy on the Protection of Children in Morocco	Promotes an interdisciplinary approach to respond to the exploitation of children and other issues. (40) Under this policy, MEIPEEC continued administering grant programs to associations and NGOs in 2021 to address child labor. In this context, MEIPEEC signed eight partnership agreements with local NGOs in multiple regions of Morocco to counter the prevalence of child labor. (7) These agreements support the removal of children under age 15 from work, with a particular focus on domestic work, while also seeking to improve working conditions and raise awareness of the hazards associated with child labor. (7)

In March 2021, Labor Minister Mohamed Amekraz appeared on a virtual conference marking 2021 as the ILO-sponsored International Year for the Elimination of Child Labor and addressed attendees with an elaboration on the government's 10-year plan to eliminate child labor. (41) Morocco is a Pathfinder country under Alliance 8.7, which calls for the eradication of child labor by 2025, and forced labor, modern slavery, and human trafficking by 2030. (1)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including inadequate efforts to address child labor in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Social Cohesion Support Fund†	Programs that aim to improve access to education. Includes the MSWFSD-funded Tayssir Conditional Cash Transfer Program that provides direct cash transfers to qualifying families whose children meet school attendance criteria. (1) In 2021, the Government of Morocco reported its continued support for this social program, but did not provide further information. (7)
Government-Funded Shelters and Centers†	MSWFSD's Entraide Nationale agency manages three types of shelter and support centers—Child Protection Units, Social Assistance Centers, and Orientation and Accompaniment Centers for People with Disabilities—to provide services to child victims of violence, street children, migrant children and refugees, and those with disabilities. (30,36,42,43) Other types of shelters and service centers include student dormitories and training and integration programs for vulnerable children. (30,34,36,42) In 2021, the Government of Morocco reported its continued support for this social program, but did not provide further information. (7)
Government-Funded Projects†	Projects that aim to assist vulnerable children. Include: After-School Program for a Second Chance, which provides students with after-school educational assistance as part of non-formal education programs; Mouwakaba , a MSWFSD-funded project that assists nearly 2,700 at-risk youth in 6 cities with vocational training; and "Cities Without Street Children," which provides assistance to homeless children in Casablanca and Meknes. (30,34,43,44) In 2021, the Government of Morocco reported its continued support for this social program, but did not provide further information. (7)
Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor (MAP 16)	The MAP 16 USDOL-funded project is implemented by the ILO to conduct research and develop new survey methodologies, improve awareness, strengthen policies and government capacity, and promote partnerships to combat child labor and forced labor. In Morocco, during the reporting period, project activities supported the enforcement of the 2016 Law on Setting Up Employment Conditions of Domestic Workers, which protects children from hazardous domestic work. (1) In collaboration with this project, the General Confederation of Moroccan Enterprises launched the ILTESAM Platform: Initiative for the Fight Against Child Labor by the Private Sector in Morocco, which supports member companies by providing them with information on child labor, including awareness toolkits and online training. The platform also fosters the exchange of good practices of companies in addressing child labor. (8) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
AMAL Program	Supports the efforts of the Moroccan authorities to ensure an environment conducive to the development and autonomy of children and young people in migration and refugee status. Implemented by UNHCR, IOM, and UNICEF under the coordination of the UN's Office of the Resident Coordinator. (37,45)

† Program is funded by the Government of Morocco.

Although the government has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the problem, including for children engaged in forced domestic work. (44)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Morocco (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

	Publish information on labor law enforcement efforts, including the amount of labor inspectorate funding, and penalties collected for violations of the worst forms of child labor.	2015 – 2021
	Reduce administrative burdens and streamline child labor enforcement procedures among government agencies.	2013 – 2021
	Increase penalties for employers who use children in hazardous work to be an effective deterrent.	2012 – 2021

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested

	Ensure that a formal referral mechanism exists between criminal authorities and social services to ensure effective coordination on cases of the worst forms of child labor.	2021
Coordination	Ensure that key coordinating bodies related to the worst forms of child labor are active.	2021
Social Programs	Ensure programs address barriers to education such as the cost of school supplies, poor facilities, transportation issues, and lack of documentation.	2013 – 2021
	Expand existing programs to address the full scope of the child labor problem, including in forced domestic work.	2013 – 2021
	Collect and publish information, including microdata from the 2017 survey, on the extent and nature of child labor to inform policies and programs, including in agriculture, industry, and services.	2016 – 2021

In 2021, Mozambique made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government launched an initiative to reduce the risks of human trafficking and child labor due to emergencies, such as armed conflict and natural disasters. In addition, in order to reduce the economic impact of the COVID-19 pandemic, the government augmented a support program, with subsidies of $25 (1,500 meticaís), as well as food distribution for vulnerable families. The government also launched an Education Strategic Plan with the aim of ensuring the continuity of safe, quality education nationwide during and after emergency situations. However, children in Mozambique are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work. Children also engage in dangerous tasks in the production of tobacco. In addition, the established minimum age for work is not in compliance with international labor standards because it does not extend to informal employment. Lastly, existing social programs are insufficient to fully address the extent of the child labor problem in Mozambique.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Mozambique are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in forced domestic work. (1) Children also engage in dangerous tasks in the production of tobacco. (2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Mozambique.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	22.5 (1,526,560)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	69.5
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	22.4
Primary Completion Rate (%)		58.2

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 3 (MICS 3), 2008. (4)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of cashews, coconuts, cotton,† sugarcane,† tea, tobacco,† and tomatoes (2,5,6)

	Street work, including car washing† and street vending (2,9-11)

	Forced labor in agriculture, domestic work, mining, and vending (13)
	Use in illicit activities, including drug trafficking, stealing, and assisting poachers in the illegal poaching industry (2)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Mozambican children, lured from rural areas with promises of work and educational opportunities, are subjected to forced domestic work and commercial sexual exploitation in urban areas in Mozambique and South Africa. Research indicates that Mozambican children are also trafficked to South Africa for forced labor in agriculture, mining, and street vending. (1,7,14) Research found that children in larger cities and along transit corridors are at risk of commercial sexual exploitation. During the reporting period the government did not publish any new data on child labor or the worst forms of child labor. (9) Research indicates that a U.S. Government-designated terrorist group, ISIS-Mozambique, abducted and used children as soldiers, cooks, and laborers in northern Mozambique. (8,9,15-17)

Although primary education is free through the ninth grade, families must provide school supplies and uniforms. (7,9,18) Barriers to education for children include a lack of schools, classroom space, and trained teachers. Many students, particularly in rural areas, also face difficulties traveling long distances to get to school. (19,20) In addition, physical and sexual abuse is common in schools. Research found that some male teachers coerce female students into sex. (6,21) The government estimates that only 49 percent of children complete their primary education. During the reporting period, restrictions put in place in response to the COVID-19 pandemic continued to disrupt in-person learning and cause schools to rely on online learning, but as many as 8.5 million students lacked access to online learning. (6,9,22) Further, some LGBTQI+ students faced discrimination at secondary schools, with documented cases of discrimination in the major cities of Beira, Maputo, and Nampula. (6,9)

By the end of 2021, approximately 800,000 people, more than 40 percent of them children, were displaced due to increased terrorist-related violence in Cabo Delgado Province, up from more than 500,000 people the previous year; this increased rate of displacement increased barriers to education for some children due to a lack of schools in displaced communities. (6,7,9,23-25) Research indicates that, as a result of terrorist attacks, at least 626 schools have been destroyed in the province since the beginning of the conflict. (8)

In addition, research found that during 2021 hundreds of children, including girls, were kidnapped by the terrorist group ISIS-Mozambique in Cabo Delgado Province. Hundreds of boys have been kidnapped, trained, and forcibly recruited and used in armed combat against Mozambican government forces. (16,17,25)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Mozambique has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention		Ratification
	ILO C. 138, Minimum Age	✓
	ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
	UN CRC	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
	UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
	Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Mozambique's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	15	Article 26 of the Labor Law; Article 4 of the Regulations on Domestic Work (26,27)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 23 of the Labor Law (27)
Identification of Hazardous Occupations or Activities Prohibited for Children	Yes	18	Hazardous Work List (28)
Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Articles 10, 11, and 17 of the Trafficking in Persons Law; Articles 196 and 198 of the Penal Code (29,30)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Articles 5, 10, and 11 of the Trafficking in Persons Law (29)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Articles 5, 10, and 11 of the Trafficking in Persons Law; Articles 226 and 227 of the Penal Code (29,30)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Articles 33 and 40 of the Law on Drugs (31)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Articles 2 and 23 of the Law on Military Service (32)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	Yes		Article 2 of the Law on Military Service (32)
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Articles 5 and 10 of the Trafficking in Persons Law (29)
Compulsory Education Age	Yes	15‡	Article 41 of the Law of Basic Child Protection; Article 7 of the Law on the National System of Education (33,34)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 41 of the Law of Basic Child Protection; Article 7 of the Law on the National System of Education (33,34)

‡ Age calculated based on available information (33,34)

The government continued to work with an international organization to review draft amendments to bring the 2008 anti-trafficking law in line with international standards. However, draft amendments were awaiting approval by various stakeholders for the third consecutive reporting period. (24) The updated legislation is expected to be considered by the Parliament in 2022. (6,14,24)

The Regulations on Domestic Work allow children ages 12 to 15 to perform domestic work with the permission of their legal guardian. (26) The Labor Law also states that children ages 12 to 15 may work under certain conditions defined by the Council of Ministers. (27) The minimum age of 12 for light work is not in compliance with international standards. (35,36) In 2021, the Government of Mozambique drafted legislation to revise the labor law, which would raise the minimum working age to 18. It is expected to be submitted to Parliament for approval in 2022. (9)

The Labor Law's minimum age protections do not apply to children working outside of formal employment relationships. The Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MITESS), in collaboration with civil society, has reportedly developed new regulations to protect children working in the informal sector; however, the government has not reported on the implementation of these regulations. (27,34,36,37)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Mozambique

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MITESS)	Enforces child labor laws and regulations. The labor inspectorate works with the National Police Force to enforce criminal law. (9) Monitors implementation of the National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (9,18,38)
Ministry of Industry and Trade's General Inspectorate of Economic Activities	Enforces child labor laws and regulations related to business activities. (9,18)
National Police Force	Enforces all criminal laws, including those related to the worst forms of child labor. Through its seven-person National Criminal Investigation Service, located within the Ministry of the Interior, investigates and refers cases of human trafficking and violence against women and children to the Attorney General's Office. (9,18)
Attorney General's Office	Coordinates the government's efforts against human trafficking and child labor. (9,18)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Mozambique took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of MITESS that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including a lack of financial resources.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Mozambique hired an additional 12 labor inspectors in 2021, but research indicates that the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Mozambique's workforce, which includes approximately 14 million workers. (9,18) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed countries, Mozambique would need to employ about 354 labor inspectors. (39,40) Limited financial resources and limited resources such as fuel and vehicles may also hamper the labor inspectorate's ability to enforce child labor laws. (7,9,18)

MITESS officials can refer victims of child labor to either the police or social workers from the Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Action (MGCAS) for family assessments and potential placement of these children in foster homes. (7,9) During the reporting period, MITESS worked with police and immigration officials to conduct awareness-raising activities in markets, schools, and locations where there may be child labor. These activities included disseminating information about work considered dangerous for children and the risk of trafficking of children for labor purposes. (6,9)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Mozambique took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the absence of published criminal enforcement data related to child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

The government did not publish data on criminal law enforcement efforts in 2021. (9)

Criminal law enforcement officials work with MGCAS and the National Reference Group for the Protection of Children and Combating Trafficking in Persons to coordinate referrals of children to social services providers. (18) MGCAS has a standard operating procedure for handling victims of domestic abuse, including human trafficking victims. This procedure incorporates an intake form used nationwide by law enforcement officials, including border officials, to collect the necessary data from victims and ensure that they receive professional care and referrals to appropriate services. (35)

During the reporting period, child soldiers who had been forcibly recruited and used by ISIS-Mozambique were rescued by government forces. (41)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including the lack of a coordination mechanism dedicated to addressing child labor beyond the scope of human trafficking.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Reference Group for the Protection of Children and Combating Trafficking in Persons	Supports efforts to prevent human trafficking, and is the main coordinating body for addressing trafficking in persons nationally. Led by the Attorney General, in partnership with local leaders and NGO stakeholders, holds regular meetings to discuss child labor issues. (9,14) In collaboration with provincial-level reference groups, uses a national referral mechanism to connect child labor and human trafficking victims to services, and facilitates training of officials and sensitization campaigns. (6) Every province has a reference group which coordinates regional efforts to address human trafficking. (1) By the end of 2021, the government also set up cross-border reference groups with each of its neighbors. (9) During the reporting period, national and provincial reference groups met regularly and held trainings for front-line officials on child labor, human trafficking, and irregular migration. National and provincial reference groups collaborated with reference groups from Mozambique's six neighboring countries. (9,25) The cross-border reference groups helped ensure that children returning to Mozambique received safe repatriation, social assistance, family tracing and reunification, and access to an assistance center when needed. The groups also conducted awareness campaigns on the protection of children on the move. (6) They also launched an initiative with the Ministry of State Administration's National Institute of Disaster Management ( Instituto Nacional de Gestão e Redução de Riscos do Desastre ) focused on reducing the risk of human trafficking and child labor due to emergencies, such as armed conflict and natural disasters. (9,25)
Ministry of Gender, Children, and Social Action (MGCAS)	Part of the government's efforts to implement the National Action Plan for the Fight Against the Worst Forms of Child Labor. (7) Operates three shelters that provide support and reintegration services for human trafficking victims, including to victims of child trafficking. (37) During the reporting period, MGCAS removed 44 children from situations of child labor and reintegrated them with their families. (6,9)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Commission on Children's Rights	Led by MGCAS, oversees and reports on children's rights in Mozambique to the African Charter and other international bodies, and performs consultations and deliberations on national action plans and legislation. (7,9,20) Research was unable to determine whether the National Commission on Children's Rights was active during the reporting period.
Ministry of the Interior's Women and Children's Victim Assistance Units	Provide services to children who have been victims of crimes, including human trafficking. Implement a government-funded program that includes 22 victim assistance units, which provide temporary shelter, food, limited counseling, and monitoring following reintegration, and operate countrywide through facilities in more than 215 police stations. (1) Research was unable to determine whether the Women and Children's Victim Assistance Units were active during the reporting period.

The Council of Ministers is charged with monitoring the government's coordination efforts in addressing child labor, and each ministry has a designated point of contact for child issues. (8) Research did not find a coordination mechanism dedicated to addressing child labor beyond the scope of human trafficking.

During the reporting period, Mozambique held sensitization campaigns nationwide, raising awareness about child labor issues on community radio. It also held several events marking the International Year for the Elimination of Child Labor. (9)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies that are consistent with relevant international standards on child labor (Table 9).

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor (2017–2022)	Aims to map 70 percent of occurrences of the worst forms of child labor by province and activity, and to withdraw 20,000 children from the worst forms of child labor and enroll them in the Basic Social Subsidy program. (38) Mandates the coordination of several key government agencies, including the Attorney General's Office and the Office for Assistance to Families and Children Victims of Violence in MGCAS, among others. Also created a multi-sector group comprising representatives from the government, civil society, unions, and employers in the formal and informal sectors to collaborate on issues identified in the plan. (7) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor during the reporting period.
2020–2024 Five Year Plan	Includes goals to implement the policies related to child labor. Under Priority One and Strategic Objective Four, stresses preventing and addressing violence against children, including sexual abuse, forced marriages, kidnappings, human trafficking, and exploitation of child labor. (9,42) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the 2020–2024 Five Year Plan during the reporting period.
Strategic Plan for the Preparation, Response and Recuperation of the Education Sector in Cases of Emergency†	Newly launched 10-year strategic plan that aims to provide safe, quality education nationwide during and after emergency situations, focusing on the need for strong interventions to protect children, as well as the harmful effects of child labor. (9,43)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (42)

Although a National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons was drafted in 2019, it has not yet been fully implemented. (9,14,25) The current National Action Plan to Combat the Worst Forms of Child Labor addresses geographic regions of concern (Tete, Manica, Maputo Province, and Maputo City), underlying reasons for child labor, and principal sectors in which child labor occurs (mining, domestic work, and agriculture). (7)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Basic Social Subsidy Program†	Government- and donor-funded program that provides financial subsidies to orphaned children living in poor and vulnerable households and child heads of households. Aims to improve secondary school attendance and reach 3.3 million direct program participants by 2024. (44,45) During the reporting period, to reduce the economic impact of the pandemic, the government augmented a support program with subsidies of $25 (1,500 meticaís ), as well as food distribution for vulnerable families. (9)
Programs for Street Children†	Comprise 176 shelters that provide education, occupational training activities, and health and psychosocial care for street children. Operated by government and civil society organizations. (46) During the reporting period, 5 shelters for children were closed, with 1,043 children provided with home care due to the closures. The government continued to operate the other 171 shelters. (9)
Child Talk Line ( Linha Fala Criança )	NGO-funded program working with the government to run a hotline that receives complaints of child abuse, including those related to child labor and sexual exploitation. (7,25) During the reporting year, the government continued to provide logistical and technical support, and the line remained active. (9,25) In 2021, the hotline also opened a call center in Cabo Delgado staffed with a team that speaks local languages. (6) During the reporting period, the hotline received 18 reports of alleged child trafficking or kidnapping and 111 reports of child labor, and recorded 363 referrals to the national police and the Office for the Assistance of Family and Minor Victims of Violence, resulting in 171 instances of assistance. (25)
Memorandum of Understanding to Combat Child Labor in Tobacco Growing (2018–2021)	$1.2 million, 3-year project funded by the Eliminating Child Labor in Tobacco Growing Foundation, focusing on education, awareness-raising, institutional capacity building, and revision of the government's legal framework. Incorporated training for law enforcement officials. (47–49) Although the program was active in 2021, research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Memorandum of Understanding to Combat Child Labor in Tobacco Growing program during the reporting period. (6)
Internet Watch Foundation Website	Internet portal, established by the government in collaboration with Internet Watch Foundation, which receives anonymous reports on suspected cases of online commercial sexual exploitation of children, including in the production of pornography. (50–52) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Internet Watch Foundation Website program during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Mozambique.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (53)

Although a draft report on the analysis of national child labor data from the Integrated Household Survey was completed in 2017, no child labor data were published. The MITESS planned to carry out a child labor and forced labor study in 2021, but it did not have the necessary funding. (6,20) In addition, research found no evidence that the government has carried out programs to assist children engaged in domestic work, and the scope of existing programs is insufficient to fully address the extent of the child labor problem.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Mozambique (Table 11).

In 2021, Namibia made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government substantially drafted an updated National Action Plan on Trafficking in Persons to guide responses to human trafficking, including of children, and substantially increased funding for shelters servicing the physical and psychosocial needs of trafficking survivors. In addition, the government coordinated a training with the International Organization for Migration for front line officers and humanitarian actors to identify and respond to human trafficking in response to growing climate migration. Children in Namibia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in domestic work and street work. Prevention and elimination of child labor are not integrated into key national policies. In addition, social programs do not address child labor in agriculture and domestic work.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Namibia are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also engage in domestic work and street work. (1,2) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Namibia. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	Unavailable
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	Unavailable
Primary Completion Rate (%)		93.3

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2019, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (3)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Working on farms and gardens (4-7)
Services	Domestic work (1,6-9)
	Street work, including begging and selling candies, fruits, phone vouchers, and small goods (8,10-14)
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (2,4,8,9,15,16)
	Use in illicit activities, including organized begging, selling of drugs, and smuggling of fuel and wildlife products (1,8,9,17)
	Forced labor in agriculture, fishing, and domestic work (2,15,16,18)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

An extended drought and economic downturn in northern Namibia and southern Angola have likely affected children's vulnerability to child labor, including its worst forms. Children from rural areas move to urban centers, such as Windhoek, in pursuit of supplemental income for their families. (1) Some of these children engage in selling drugs, organized begging, and commercial sexual exploitation. (4,8,11) There was a significant increase in the number of Angolans migrating to Namibia as a result of climate change, which has led to emerging trends of locals hiring Angolan children as domestic workers, for street vending, and for agricultural activities. In addition, NGO and local media reporting indicates children of refugee status are increasingly recruited by criminal organizations to smuggle drugs, fuel, and wildlife products. (9,14)

Commercial sexual exploitation most commonly involves girls and occurs in cities and transit corridors, especially along the Namibian and Angolan border. Both girls and boys increasingly are subjected to Internet-based forms of sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography. (1,4,8,9,19) Children are trafficked within Namibia and from neighboring countries, such as Angola, Zambia, Zimbabwe, and the Democratic Republic of the Congo, for forced labor in agriculture, domestic work, and commercial sexual exploitation. (1,2) It is a common practice for parents to place their children in the care of relatives and kin relations for expanded education opportunities; in some cases, these children are subjected to forced labor. (2) Children of the San and OvaZemba ethnic groups are particularly vulnerable to forced labor on farms and in homes. (2,16)

Both primary and secondary education are free by law; however, long distances to schools, particularly in rural and remote locations, may deter some children from attending school and increase their vulnerability to child labor. (20-22) The Education Act stipulates that no child be denied education due to documentation. (9,21) However, reporting indicates that children from nomadic communities and migrant families have difficulty securing birth registration and other identification documents, which sometimes results in delays in enrollment in school admission and access to social programs. (23,24) Children orphaned by the HIV/AIDS epidemic and other causes sometimes become heads of households, which requires them to leave school to find work. (20)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Namibia has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Section 2 of the Combating of Immoral Practices Amendment Act; Section 234 of the Child Care and Protection Act (27,29)

Compulsory Education Age	Yes	14 ‡	Section 53 of the Promulgation of Education Act (21)
Free Public Education	Yes		Section 2 of the Education Amendment Act, 2017 (22)

* Country has no conscription. (31)

‡ Age calculated based on available information. (32)

Under Namibian law, children typically are only required to attend school until age 14 because the requirement is to attend school until the completion of seventh grade, which tends to be when children are age 14, or at the latest until children are age 16. (21) In 2020, the Namibian Parliament passed an updated Promulgation of Basic Education Act, which will raise the age of compulsory education up to age 18. The government has not yet brought the law into force. (12,33) Although Namibia's light work framework for children ages 14 to 18 has a list of activities that are not permitted and prohibits night work, Namibia's light work framework is insufficient because it does not prescribe the number of hours children ages 14 to 18 may work. (25) If Namibia raises the compulsory education age, the government must prescribe the number of hours children under age 18, the new compulsory education age, may work.

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor, Industrial Relations and Employment Creation (MLIREC)	Enforces child labor laws and investigates allegations of violations, including forced labor, and cases involving human trafficking and the commercial sexual exploitation of children. Works on child labor matters with the Ministry of Home Affairs, Immigration, Safety, and Security (MHAISS); the Ministry of Gender Equality, Poverty Eradication, and Social Welfare (MGEPSW); the Namibia Central Intelligence Service; and the Ministry of Education. (34) Refers children removed from child labor during inspections to MGEPSW for placement in social services. (35)
Ministry of Home Affairs, Immigration, Safety, and Security (MHAISS)	Enforces criminal laws through the Namibian Police. Coordinates with the labor inspectorate of MLIREC to investigate criminal labor violations, including child labor. (34,36,37) Through the Namibian Police Force's 15 Gender-Based Violence Protection Units, collaborates with MGEPSW and MLIREC to remove children from human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation, while providing medical and psychosocial care for survivors. ### Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Namibia took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor, Industrial Relations and Employment Creation (MLIREC) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2020	2021

The government published only limited information about its labor law enforcement efforts and did not provide information on labor inspectorate funding, number of labor inspectors, trainings, or whether penalties were imposed and collected for child labor violations during the reporting period. Between July 1 and September 30, 2021, the labor inspectorate conducted labor inspections in all regions, targeting the construction, informal, and domestic sectors. (39) An inadequate number of inspectors located in remote and rural areas outside of the capital likely hinders enforcement of labor laws. (1) Although the government has not made publicly available information on the size of its labor inspectorate in 2021, 52 labor inspectors were employed as of 2020, which would likely be insufficient for the size of Namibia's workforce, which includes approximately 902,000 workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Namibia would need to employ about 60 inspectors. (40,41)

The MLIREC operates a 24-hour short message service (SMS) line for labor complaints, including child labor. (12) The government did not make public the number of child labor complaints reported through the SMS line in 2021. (9)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Namibia took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including deficient structures for prosecution planning.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	No (42)	Unknown (14)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (42)	N/A
Refresher Courses Provided	No (42)	Yes (14)
Number of Investigations	4 (42)	Unknown (14)
Number of Violations Found	17 (15)	Unknown (14)

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor (Cont.)

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	1 (42)	Unknown (14)
Number of Convictions	1 (15)	0 (22)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (42)	Unknown (14)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (42)	Yes (14)

The government did not provide information on its criminal law enforcement efforts for inclusion in this report. Although the government initiated 18 investigations and 7 prosecutions related to trafficking in persons, research could not determine the ages of the survivors and whether the cases pertained to the worst forms of child labor. (14) In response to the influx of climate migrants to Namibia, the government, with support of the IOM, hosted a training for front line officers and humanitarian actors on identifying situations of human trafficking and utilizing response mechanisms in contexts of emergencies. (14) An NGO operates a hotline for victims of gender-based violence and child exploitation to report cases and access information about available resources and refer cases to relevant government social services providers. (9)

Although there are 15 Gender-Based Violence Protection Units in Namibia, there is considerable variation in the operational performance of these units. Due to resource constraints, only the Windhoek-based unit is operating at full capacity, and several other units are not able to function according to their intended mandates. (1,12) In addition, the government does not maintain centralized statistics for regional magistrate court cases, which limits information on criminal law enforcement efforts in response to the worst forms of child labor. (20)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Interministerial Committee on Child Labor	Coordinates government policies and efforts to prevent and eliminate child labor. Comprises officials from MLIREC, the Ministry of Education, MGEPEWS, MHAISS, and the Office of the Ombudsman. (34,43) Research was unable to determine whether the Interministerial Committee on Child Labor was active during the reporting period.
Permanent Task Force for Children	Implements and coordinates services for children at the national level. Includes key ministries, NGOs, development partners, and bilateral agencies. (34) Research was unable to determine whether the Permanent Task Force for Children was active during the reporting period.
Child Care and Protection Forums	Address child protection issues and coordinate services in the country at the regional and district levels. Raise community awareness of the signs of child mistreatment and available services. (44) Participants include 14 regional councils, MGEPEWS social workers, police, teachers, government agencies, NGOs, community leaders, churches, and other local-level stakeholders. (12) Research was unable to determine whether Child Care and Protection Forums were active during the reporting period.
Trafficking in Persons National Coordinating Body	Coordinates and monitors government and non-government responses to trafficking in persons in Namibia. (45) Led by MGEPEWS, with participation from MLIREC, MHAISS, the Ministry of Justice, the Ministry of Home Affairs and Immigration, and the Prosecutor General and Attorney General. (46) The Trafficking in Persons National Coordinating Body met quarterly in 2021, including to facilitate national activities related to World Day against Trafficking in Persons. (22)

MLIREC-led joint child labor inspection teams, which coordinate child labor inspections and referrals between ministries involved in child welfare, have not been in effect since the end of 2017. (47)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including mainstreaming child labor issues into relevant policies.

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Agenda for Children (2018–2022)	Leads strategization around child welfare issues with a focus on strengthening the protection of children in need of care, including enforcement of laws protecting children from child labor. (48) Outlines procedural instructions for each ministry and stakeholder to respond to cases of child mistreatment. (34,36,49)
National Development Plan V (2017/2018–2021/2022)	Outlines goals for addressing child trafficking and protection concerns. (34,50)

† The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (45,47,51,52)

Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement key policies related to child labor in Namibia during the reporting period. However, the government drafted a 5-year National Plan of Action Against Trafficking in Persons for 2022–2027 and will formally launch the plan in late 2022. (14) The National Plan of Action will guide anti-trafficking efforts, including strengthening coordination among government ministries and civil society organizations, protecting children and other vulnerable groups, and increasing public awareness, especially in rural areas. (15,16)

The 2017–2022 Strategic Plan of the Ministry of Gender Equality, Poverty Eradication, and Social Welfare does not integrate child labor elimination strategies. (53) Although the Ministry's 2019–2023 National Action Plan on Gender-Based Violence coordinates national efforts against gender-based violence, including rape and sexual abuse, physical domestic abuse, and human trafficking, it does not incorporate other worst forms of child labor, such as physical abuse occurring in domestic service and commercial sexual exploitation. (52) Research indicates that some children working in domestic service are subject to physical abuse by their employers. (51)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of programs to address the full scope of the problem.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Social Protection Grants†	MGEPSW-funded grants to support vulnerable children and households. (53) Include child maintenance grants, place of safety allowances, and foster care grants. Child maintenance grants provide monthly stipends to single-parent families and are contingent upon school enrollment of all school-age children. Place of safety and foster care grants provide support for people and places that provide temporary care for children. (54-56) During the 2020/2021 fiscal period, MGEPSW added 1,814 children to the grant program and reached 64 percent coverage of orphans and vulnerable children. (57) In addition, MGEPSW provided food and school transportation assistance to 29,004 households. (57)
Shelters and Victims Services†	Government and NGO shelters that provide safe accommodation, meals, clothing, toiletries, psychosocial support, legal assistance, medical services, and access to education. (45) Registered residential childcare facilities provide services for children experiencing mistreatment and neglect. The government provides subsidies, either per child or as a percentage of operating expenses, for private shelter facilities. (46,49) In 2021, the government allocated $408,910 to shelters, a substantial increase from $22,150. (2,16)
Namibian School Feeding Program†	Government program that provides mid-morning meals to school children in all 14 regions. (34,58) To date, 431,500 pupils have benefited from the program. (59) In 2021, the government allocated approximately $6.2 million to the School Feeding Program. School closures and procurement issues as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic, however, delayed distribution of food assistance. (59,60)
National Youth Service†	Government program that offers training in civic education, national voluntary service, and job skills to unemployed youth, some of whom have never attended school. (44) Between 2017 and 2021, 318 youth have received skills training through the National Youth Service. (61)
Decent Work Country Program (2018–2023)	ILO-funded program to promote decent work in Namibia, including the elimination of child labor, through employment promotion, enhanced social protection, and social dialogue and collaboration. (45,62) Prioritizes institutional capacity for implementation of child labor policies and research and data collection on child labor and trafficking in persons. (7) Research could not determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Decent Work Country Program during the reporting period.

† Program is funded by the Government of Namibia.

The government has 15 designated residential care facilities for children, but few of these shelters are able to provide complete services. The only fully operational government shelter is located in Windhoek; children who live in rural areas must go to the capital to receive services. (I) Although the government provided assistance and services to vulnerable children and some victims of child labor, research found no evidence of programs specifically addressing children working in agriculture or domestic work.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Namibia (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

In 2021, Nepal made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government published data from the 2018 Nepal Labor Force Survey, which estimated that 1.1 million children are engaged in child labor. Additionally, the Ministry of Women, Children, and Senior Citizens approved the Online Child Protection Procedure, 2021, to help curb online abuse of children. The Nepal Child Rights Council also formed new Child Protection Committees in 129 local governments.

In addition, the government repatriated 60 victims of human trafficking and expanded access to education through The New School Education Plan. However, children in Nepal are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging. Children also perform dangerous tasks in producing bricks. Although the government made meaningful efforts in all relevant areas during the reporting period, it does not meet international standards for legal prohibitions against child trafficking and legal prohibitions against the use of children for illicit activities. The law related to child trafficking is insufficient because it does not clearly criminalize recruitment, harboring, receipt, or transportation in the absence of force, fraud, or coercion, and the law prohibiting the use of children in illicit activities is insufficient because it does not prohibit the use of children in the production of drugs. The Department of Labor's budget, the number of labor inspectors, and available resources and training are also insufficient for enforcing labor laws, including those related to child labor. Furthermore, the government did not publicly release information on its criminal law enforcement efforts.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Nepal are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation and forced begging. Children also perform dangerous tasks in producing bricks. (1,2) In 2021, the Government of Nepal, along with the ILO, published disaggregated data on child labor in Nepal based on the Nepal Labor Force Survey from 2017–2018. The report estimated that the total number of children engaged in child labor was approximately 1.1 million, around 15 percent of the total children between the ages of 5 and 17 years. (2,3) Of these, 200,000 children, or 3.2 percent, were engaged in hazardous work. Additionally, approximately 74 percent of children who were engaged in the informal sector were employed in hazardous work conditions, and 87 percent were engaged in the agricultural sector. (2,3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Nepal. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	37.2 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	91.7
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	39.1

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Nepali women and girls are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking, both within and outside Nepal, including to India, the Middle East, Asia, and Sub-Saharan Africa. (6,22,23) Traffickers lure people from marginalized castes and ethnic minority communities. (6) They utilize the porous border between India and Nepal to transport women and children for sex trafficking. (6) Among 134 human trafficking cases registered with the police in Nepal's fiscal year 2020–2021, 79 of the victims were children. (24) Traffickers promise families work and education opportunities for their children but instead bring them to under-resourced and unregistered orphanages in urban centers, where the children are subjected to forced labor and forced begging on the streets. In addition, there are reports that some orphanages keep children in destitute and unsanitary conditions to attract charitable donations from foreigners. (6,20,21)

The entertainment sector was closed intermittently during the reporting period due to COVID-19 pandemic-related national lockdowns. Prevalence data to determine the number of workers affected in this sector, including children, are lacking. (25) Research has indicated that thousands of children, some as young as age 11, continue to be trapped in the country's entertainment sectors. Children are recruited from rural areas and trafficked to cities by friends, relatives, and neighbors. (26) One study found that 17 percent of workers in the adult entertainment sector are minors, and 62 percent of adult women in that industry started their work as minors, some as young as 7 years old. (25)

Many children in Nepal are engaged in the production of bricks, which exposes them to hazardous working conditions, including carrying heavy loads and using dangerous machinery. (1,6,26) There are an estimated 17,738 child laborers in the brick kilns of Nepal, with 15,400 of these children engaged in hazardous work. (10,27) While most industries remained closed due to the pandemic, bonded labor continued in sectors such as agriculture and domestic work. (2)

In April 2021, schools in Nepal closed again due to the second wave of the pandemic, and again in January 2022 due to the Omicron variant. (2,28–30) As of December 2021, many children had been out of classrooms for almost 18 months. (2) School closures have led to continued disruptions of children's education in the reporting year. (28) While the Government of Nepal implemented learning programs, including new alternative learning methods, the establishment of an online portal, and broadcasting education programs through media channels, a substantial number of children are expected to suffer from learning loss. Moreover, these disruptions have been severe for children from rural areas with no access to alternative learning modalities. (2,28) This situation has increased the risk of children being diverted from education to child labor, especially in rural and high mountain areas, where local resources are inadequate. (2) Children who began working during the first lockdown in March 2020 continued to do so even after returning to school in early 2021. (29) The pandemic has further amplified the economic hardship of people who lack financial resources. Those hardest hit have been daily wage earners, women working in the entertainment sector, brick-kiln workers, and owners of small businesses. (24) The UNICEF COVID-19 Child and Family Tracker has found that 50 percent of households in Nepal have lost a source of income, and many families lack credit or savings to overcome these financial setbacks, putting their children at risk of having to enter the workforce to support their families. (24) Research has indicated that most children were found working in brick kilns, carpet factories, construction, and as vendors. (29)

Carpet factories are considered part of the formal sector, but many of the subcontractors working in the informal sector use child labor further down the supply chain. Although NGOs believe that the number of children involved in producing carpets continued to decrease, research was unable to confirm this claim. (12)

Some children, particularly girls, face barriers to accessing education due to a lack of sanitation facilities, geographic distance, costs associated with schooling, household chores, and a lack of parental support. (12,31) In Nepal, 32.4 percent of schools lack separate toilet facilities for girls, which can deter them from attending school, especially when they are menstruating. (32,33) The government has introduced free sanitary napkins in all schools across the country to encourage girls to attend their classes. (12) Barriers to attending school for school-age boys include pressure to find employment, migration to work outside Nepal, and issues with drugs and alcohol. Children with disabilities face additional barriers to accessing education, including denial of school admission. (12)

The government allows Bhutanese refugee students in grades 9 to 12 to attend local public schools at no cost, but enrollment remains restricted for younger children. The UNHCR provides parallel free education at lower grades to refugees in the two remaining refugee camps in the country. (2,34) Most Tibetan refugees who live in the country, particularly those who arrived after 1990 or turned the age of 16 after 1995, do not have documentation, nor do their descendant children. Even those with an acknowledged refugee status have no legal rights beyond the ability to remain in the country. (2) Nevertheless, the government allowed NGOs to provide primary- and secondary-level schooling to Tibetans living in Nepal. (34) In addition, more than 700 refugees and asylum seekers from Pakistan, Burma, Afghanistan, Sri Lanka, Bangladesh, Somalia, Iran, Iraq, and the Democratic Republic of the Congo are not recognized as having the status of refugees, but the government allows the UNHCR to provide some education, health, and livelihood services to them. These refugees lack legal access to public education, as well as the right to work. (2,6) Child refugees who cannot legally access public education, and those who are of legal age to work but are not authorized to do so, are more susceptible to being exploited in the worst forms of child labor.

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Nepal has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Nepal's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including lack on prohibitions of using children in illicit activities.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

* Country has no conscription (42,44)

In 2021, the Ministry of Women, Children, and Senior Citizens approved the Online Child Protection Procedure, 2021, per Section 86(1) of the Children's Act. This procedure will help curb the online abuse of children, as Internet access and digital technology in the country have expanded in recent years. (2,39,45)

The minimum age for hazardous work is not consistent with international standards because it does not prohibit children age 17 from engaging in hazardous work. (35) Furthermore, the types of hazardous work prohibited for children do not include brickmaking and stone breaking, sectors in which there is evidence that work involves carrying heavy loads and being exposed to hazardous substances. (6,10,35,46) However, Nepal's National Master Plan on Child Labor (2018–2028) has identified children working in brick kilns as targeted groups vulnerable to hazardous child labor. (47,48)

The law related to child trafficking is insufficient because it does not clearly criminalize recruitment, harboring, receipt, or transportation of children in the absence of force, fraud, or coercion. (38,49) In addition, the law prohibiting the use of children in illicit activities is insufficient because it does not prohibit the use of children in the production of drugs. (50) Nepal ratified the Palermo Protocol in 2020 and the Government of Nepal is in the process of aligning its legal framework for human trafficking with international standards, including broadening its definition of human trafficking and better addressing child trafficking. (14,51)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Department of Labor (DOL), Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MoLESS)	Enforces labor laws, including those involving child labor. (14)
Nepal Police, Women, Children and Senior Citizens Service Directorate	Investigates crimes involving women and children, including human trafficking. Operates under the direct supervision of the Women, Children and Senior Citizens Service Directorate in all 77 districts. (52) Assists in children's rescue, rehabilitation, and coordination for arrest of perpetrators in cases of the worst forms of child labor. In cases of hazardous child labor, coordinates with and hands over cases to the DOL. (2, 14)
Ministry of Land Reform and Management	Enforces laws that prohibit bonded labor in agriculture. (24) The National Plan of Action designates the Ministry of Land Management, Cooperatives and Poverty Alleviation as the lead ministry to form targeted programs for children involved in forced child labor and their families, particularly in the agricultural sector. The ministry has carried out awareness programs through the cooperatives at local and provincial levels and is designated to align the poverty alleviation program for child labor elimination. (24)
Monitoring Action Committees, Ministry of Women, Children, and Senior Citizens (MWCSC)	Investigate reports of commercial sexual exploitation at the district level, including the exploitation of children in the adult entertainment sector. (53) Contribute to investigations through the Helpline No. 104 and Child Helpline 1098. Provide temporary shelter to rescued children through the National Child Rights Center and support operations of the rehabilitation center for children. (24)

Nepal police has a Women and Children Service Directorate, as well as functioning Anti-Trafficking in Persons (TIP) Bureau, the latter of which was established in 2019. (54) Whether the Anti-TIP Bureau will become a multidisciplinary unit and investigate cases against child labor laws or focus exclusively on trafficking crimes still remains unclear. (2)

In 2020, Nepal established its first labor court to address labor-related issues under the 2017 Labor Act, including child labor issues in certain circumstances. (55) While the Supreme Court compiles cases related to the labor court, it does not disaggregate data regarding child labor. (8) Reports suggest that 123 labor-related cases were filed in fiscal year 2020–2021. Research was unable to determine whether those cases were adequately prosecuted or how many of those cases were related to child labor. (8)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Nepal took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Department of Labor (DOL) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

The new Constitutional provision has marked Nepal's transition to federalism. (14,37) The provincial governments have been given more authority, including the task of overseeing child labor monitoring and inspection and maintaining data and documentation on inspections. (14,37) In 2021, the government began the preliminary work of establishing information centers, including guideline preparation, at each local government under the "Procedure on Establishment and Operation of Information and Records Center" for local levels. (8) Reports indicate that child trafficking recordkeeping did not commence during the reporting period. (8) Due to Nepal's transition to a new federal government, strong provisions for local monitoring bodies are not always formed or functional. (58)

NGOs stated that the fines and employer-paid compensation outlined in the Child Labor (Prohibition and Regulation) Act were not adequate deterrents to child labor violations. (14,32) The lack of human resources, capacity, and training on labor laws inhibit robust monitoring to ensure full compliance with the labor laws, and limit Nepal's ability to take meaningful actions against perpetrators of child labor and its worst forms. Cases are often resolved through negotiations, and the DOL encourages mediation over prosecution, resulting in mild punishments for perpetrators. (2,49) In addition, business owners reportedly may pressure labor inspectors to settle disputes outside court. (2) Furthermore, DOL officials and NGOs stated that officials are sometimes paid to not move child labor cases forward, or parents are given nominal compensation to abandon cases. (14)

The government has also confirmed that it calls on NGOs to assist with official inspections and to increase transparency because it lacks funding and resources. (14) Only a small portion of labor inspectors' responsibilities include child labor inspections and inspectors have little experience conducting them. (2) The government and NGOs state that more than 70 percent of child labor occurs in the informal sector, including in companies with fewer than 10 employees and those that are not registered with the government. (6,14,15) However, the government conducted most of its labor inspections in the formal sector and rarely conducted unannounced inspections. (6) Reporting has suggested that government agencies continue to be reactive rather than proactive in enforcing laws and preventing child labor. (2)

The number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Nepal's workforce, which includes more than 16.9 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in developing economies, Nepal should employ about 1,133 inspectors. (59) Although the total number of labor inspector positions in Nepal is 28, only 16 positions are currently filled. (2,56) The DOL noted that the number of inspectors was still inadequate and limited the government's abilities to deal with child labor issues, particularly at the local levels. (12,14)

Although labor inspectors periodically receive training on child labor laws and inspections, the training does not necessarily adhere to any formal schedule. (60) During the reporting period, inspectors did not receive specific training on laws related to child labor or hazardous child labor. They were provided with annual consultations about different issues related to labor laws, including child labor. (2)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Nepal took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (14)	Yes (2)

The Nepal Police's Crime Investigation School conducts training for all levels of police personnel in juvenile justice, child rights, and laws relating to child labor issues. (14) However, the government lacks both the human resources and financial capacity to enforce laws prohibiting crimes related to the worst forms of child labor, and it lacks the resources to maintain a centralized database of cases involving the worst forms of child labor, including child trafficking. (6,14,15,61) According to some reporting, only those children in "worst case" scenarios involving physical or sexual abuse were removed from exploitative situations. (2) The Nepal Police do, however, collect and disaggregate data related to human trafficking cases. In fiscal year 2020–2021, there were 134 reported human trafficking cases involving 187 victims. (8,14) Of these, 80 victims were under the age of 18. (8)

The government does not publicly release information on its criminal law enforcement efforts. (14)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Labor Prevention and Occupational Safety Section, Labor Relations and Social Security Division, MoLESS	Coordinates policymaking on child labor inspection guidelines and monitors implementation of guidelines. (62) Consists of an Under Secretary, one section officer, and one factory inspector. (63) Confers with the MWCSC, the Central Child Welfare Board, the DOL, and District Labor Offices. (62) MoLESS leads an interagency working group against child labor headed by a Joint Secretary, which coordinates efforts against child labor with UN agencies and international organizations working on child rights and child protection. (63) The organization was active during the reporting period. (8)
Nepal Child Rights Council	Coordinates and facilitates monitoring, evaluation, and reviewing of local child rights on the provincial and local levels. (2,64) Chaired by the Women, Children, and Senior Citizens Minister and consists of 23 members from the federal and local levels. (2,64) In 2021, the council successfully reunited 82 percent of registered missing children with their families. (8) The council also rescued 355 street children, of whom 58 were engaged in hazardous work, and provided protection and management. (8) During the reporting period, the council formed new child rights protection and promotion procedures in 186 local governments. (2) The council also formed new child rights protection committees in 129 local governments, with child welfare officers positioned at 51 local levels. A local child fund was also initiated in 135 local governments around the country and the child helpline was expanded from 12 to 18 locations in fiscal year 2020–2021. (2)

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Child Labor Elimination Committee	Provides recommendations to the government on necessary reforms in the existing child labor laws and policies under the Child Labor Act. (35,65) Administers consultations to the government to make necessary arrangements for the health, safety, education, and occupational training of children working in institutions; monitors effective implementation of policies and laws aimed at eliminating child labor. (35,65) The committee is provisioned by the National Master Plan to End Child Labor and chaired by the Secretary of MoLESS. (15) Due to the pandemic, the group did not meet during the reporting period, but the government has initiated a Child Rights System at the local level. (2)
National Network Against Child Labor	Coordinates the referral of children who are found in child labor to social services. (24) Consists of District Labor Officers, District Women and Children Officers, officers from the Nepal Police Women and Children Service Centers, Chief District Officers, NGOs, and thousands of youth clubs. (66) While research suggests that the National Network Against Child Labor was active during the reporting period, research was unable to determine their efforts and activities.
National Committee for Controlling Human Trafficking	Coordinates the implementation of anti-human trafficking laws, policies, and programs at the central, district, and local levels of government. Led by the MWCSC and consists of government officials and NGO representatives. (67) During the reporting period, the committee held orientation programs for elected officials in different local government bodies. (8) The Government of Nepal successfully repatriated 60 victims of human trafficking and provided services to 2,628 individuals under the committee's leadership. (8) The committee conducted a midterm evaluation of the National Plan of Action. However, due to the pandemic, the group was not able to produce any results on the National Plan of Action on Combating Trafficking in Persons or amend the Human Trafficking and Transportation Control Rules. (8) The committee also organized several awareness activities to commemorate the National Day Against Human Trafficking. (8)
National Human Rights Commission (NHRC)	Carries out periodic reviews of relevant laws and publishes the annual trafficking in persons report in coordination with government ministries. (8,68) The Social Inclusion and Gender Equality Division of the NHRC monitors and receives complaints on child rights violations and continues to collaborate with international organizations, NGOs, and other child rights organizations. (63) During the reporting period, the NHRC worked to draw attention among stakeholders to violations of child rights. (8)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including updating existing policies to better align with the constitutional transition to federalism.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Master Plan to End Child Labor (July 2018–July 2028)	Prioritizes ending the worst forms of child labor by 2022, and all forms of child labor by 2025. (2) Established an annual monitoring evaluation and reporting system through which information will be made publicly available. (14,69) Includes a strategy to establish a child rescue fund to rescue children from difficult circumstances, including child labor, and adopts a "zero-tolerance policy" against child labor, child trafficking, and any forms of violence against children. (2) During the reporting period, the government drafted an action plan for the elimination of child labor to facilitate the implementation of the National Master Plan to End Child Labor, which aims to abolish the worst forms of child labor by 2025. (2,17,70)
The New School Education Plan†	Expands access to education to all children, improves the quality of education, facilitates improved management and governance of school education. The program will impact 8.2 million school-going children in Nepal. (71) The New School Education Plan succeeded the former School Sector Development Plan, which was discontinued in July 2021. (72) Overseen by the Ministry of Education, Science and Technology. (73) For fiscal year 2021–2022, the plan emphasizes a pandemic response plan for school education and mechanisms to reduce disruptions to children's learning. (74) The budget for the new plan is around $7.8 billion (953 billion rupees) over 10 years and is set to take effect in the new fiscal year beginning in July 2022. (72)
National Plan of Action on Combating Trafficking in Persons, Especially Women and Children (2011–2022)	Promotes and protects the rights of human trafficking victims and survivors, and outlines policies for providing justice and punishing perpetrators. (65,75) The MWCSC prepared the Child Development Strategy, which will include the elimination of child labor; however, details about the plan have not been released. (2)

† Policy was approved during the reporting period.

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (14,32)

The Fifteenth National Plan of Nepal (2019/2020–2023/2024) has incorporated ending child labor as one of its objectives. It includes making necessary legal provisions to end all forms of child labor and increasing the target number of inspections for child labor in each Nepali fiscal year, which begins and ends in July each year. (2,14,76)

The Ministry of Labor, Employment, and Social Security (MoLESS), with support from international NGOs, passed the Child Labor Free Declaration Procedures for the Local Governments to identify and declare at least 50 local jurisdictions to be free of child labor for the Nepali 2020–2021 fiscal year. These guidelines incorporated several indicators, including a child labor survey and programs at the local level to eliminate child labor. (2) Through this measure, the government set up an Emergency Fund at the national and local levels to rescue and rehabilitate vulnerable children. (2) Additionally, in 2021, the Nepali government passed a new guideline that sets criteria for municipalities and local governments to maintain a child labor-free workforce for which the government allocated approximately $170,000 (20.7 million rupees). (2)

The Nepal Master Plan-II (NMP-II) has incorporated five strategies to eradicate child labor, including regular search and monitoring, rescue, and rehabilitation. The NMP-II includes some indicators to ensure that inspections are performed properly. (2)

Research has found that there is a need to update the National Plan of Action on Combating Trafficking in Persons so that it better aligns with Nepal's anti-trafficking programming within the new federal structure, as well as to better address forced labor. (21,53)

Nepal is a Pathfinder country under Alliance 8.7, which calls for the eradication of child labor by 2025, and of forced labor, modern slavery, and human trafficking by 2030. (14,77) For the 2021–2022 fiscal year, the Nepali government has allocated around $8,500 (1,000,000 rupees) for various activities that align with Pathfinder goals, which includes aligning federal laws to streamline child labor policies federally. (2,78)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Social Security Fund Program†	Helps support workers and their families through a tripartite contribution policy, an important initiative to help combat and prevent child labor. (15,79) In the Nepali fiscal year 2020–2021, 2,492 new employers and 105,488 new employees joined the program. Currently, there are 14,971 employers and 273,730 employees enrolled. (8) The total number of contributions to the fund reached approximately $56 million (6.8 billion Nepali rupees) in 2021. (8) There were 5,611 claims made during the fiscal year, amounting to $1.1 million (142 million Nepali rupees). (8) In addition, in 2021, the government expanded the scope of the program by widening coverage for beneficiaries and streamlining access to facilities provided, such as additional health coverage. This expansion was on top of an earlier implemented credit scheme that provided easier access to loan services. (80,81)
Helpline and Hotline Programs†	Child Helpline—1098 is an MWCSC and Child Workers in Nepal-funded helpline. (12) Responds to calls about missing children, child abuse, child labor, child trafficking, and child sexual abuse in 13 districts and municipalities in Nepal and Bangladesh, Bhutan, India, Maldives, Pakistan, and Sri Lanka. (82) During the reporting period, the child helpline was expanded from 12 to 18 locations. (2) National Center for Children at Risk—Hotline No. 104 is a hotline operated from Vrikutimandap, Kathmandu, which is jointly run by the Central Child Welfare Board and Nepal Police. (2,53) The hotline covers cases for 74 out of the total 77 districts in Nepal. (2) Per the Nepal Police, four to five children on average are rescued from child labor every month from informal sectors, such as transportation, domestic work, tea shops, and restaurants, through the complaints received through the hotline. (49) "Hello Sarkar" is an initiative established by the Office of the Prime Minister. It receives child labor complaints from the public through a hotline, Facebook, and Twitter. (15) According to the National Child Rights Council, 15,644 children received protection assistance through the council during the 2020–2021 fiscal year. Out of the 15,644 children, 10,348 received services through the 1098 helpline service. (2) Additionally, special COVID-19 helpdesks for children's issues were established in 18 locations and provided services to almost 3,000 children. (2)

Program	Description
Support for Schools†	MoLESS program that supports schools for children ages 5 to 16 who are at risk of working in the worst forms of child labor. Provides scholarships to cover associated schooling costs for children outside the Kathmandu Valley to attend a local public school and works with local NGOs to verify that children are attending class. (7) In 2021, an education sector analysis was carried out as part of the School Sector Development Program. The analysis provided input for the New Education Sector Plan. (8)
Hamro Samman ("Our Respect") (2017–2022)	USAID-funded project, implemented by Winrock International, to strengthen national and local efforts to counter human trafficking, improve civil society advocacy and engagement, and increase private sector partnerships to empower survivors and prevent trafficking of at-risk populations. (15,32,83) During the reporting period, Hamro Samman and provincial partners formed 383 local committees for combating human trafficking. (84) Hamro Samman worked with the MWCSC to create and apply an integrated human trafficking data system to monitor human trafficking cases and support policymakers at the local level. (84)
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL projects in Nepal focused on forced labor and child labor, including eliminating child labor in its worst forms. These projects include Sakriya , a $2.85 million project implemented by World Education, Inc., and From Protocol to Practice: A Bridge to Global Action on Forced Labor (The Bridge Project), implemented in six countries by ILO. (85,86) During the reporting period, the Sakriya project, along with its implementing partners, identified and documented child labor, raised awareness on child labor, and undertook primary care management initiatives to address child labor. (87) The Bridge project also continued to conduct livelihood interventions as well as train and use civil-society networks to reach the most vulnerable populations in Nepal. (88) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

† Program is funded by the Government of Nepal.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (14)

Although Nepal has programs that target child labor, gaps exist in these social programs, including programs that support child victims of commercial sexual exploitation and children working in the production of bricks.

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

In 2021, Nicaragua made minimal advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government participated in an IOM social media anti-trafficking in persons awareness campaign called Recognize the Signs (Atendé las Señales) and conducted 1,409 nationwide door-to-door visits to families of children ages six and under to promote school attendance. However, children in Nicaragua are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. Laws do not establish a clear compulsory education age, and the government lacks adequate services for human trafficking victims, such as shelters. Additionally, labor and criminal law enforcement agencies lack the financial and human resources necessary to fulfill their mandates. The government also lacks a specific and consistent mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Nicaragua are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1) Children also perform dangerous tasks in agriculture. (2,3) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Nicaragua. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Information about the prevalence of child labor in Nicaragua is limited because the last known national survey on child labor was published in 2012. (8,19) However, available research indicates that children are subjected to commercial sexual exploitation, particularly in Granada, Managua, the Caribbean Autonomous Regions, and San Juan del Sur. (13,20) Children from poor rural areas, those in the Caribbean Autonomous Regions, and migrants from the Northern Triangle countries are particularly vulnerable. (13,21) In addition, Nicaragua is a destination country for child sex tourists from the United States, Canada, and Western Europe. (22) Limited research suggests that after the political upheaval that took place in 2018 the Nicaraguan National Police began focusing resources on responding to antigovernment protests, as well as surveilling and arresting political opposition members, possibly impacting public security and its ability to address the worst forms of child labor. (1,10,17) This trend continued following increased actions by the government targeting democratic groups and civil society actors since May 2021. (10) During the reporting period, the government impeded the work of civil society, including groups working on children's issues by threatening civil society organizations with fines or closure if deemed in opposition to the government, which may increase the vulnerability of children to exploitation. (10) Children in Nicaragua who lack identification documents, sometimes due to a lack of birth registration, may not have access to social services and are at an increased risk of human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation. (23)

Due to the continued COVID-19 pandemic and a stalled economy, many Nicaraguans have established informal family businesses, which are more likely to utilize child labor. (10) Reports indicate that as a direct result of the pandemic child labor has increased in Nicaragua, with a visible increase of children working at traffic lights. Due to government's actions against several civil society organizations, some NGOs that offered free childcare for children of parents working in the informal sector were closed. (24) This could have a negative impact as parents who work in the informal sector, such as selling at traffic lights, and who cannot afford to pay for child care or school now have limited options and must take their children with them while they work, increasing their vulnerability. (24)

Education is free and compulsory in Nicaragua; however, the costs associated with school supplies and transportation make it difficult for some children, particularly those from poor backgrounds and rural areas, to attend school. (1,8) Another barrier facing children from rural areas is the long distances and a lack of secure transportation. (10) There are also reports of poor preschool education, particularly among disadvantaged rural households, insufficient learning materials, and limited school infrastructure. Only 50 percent of schools in the country provide basic drinking water. (25) School infrastructures are also very susceptible to damage or destruction during natural disasters. Children from indigenous groups and of African descent face significant discrimination in accessing education. (25)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Nicaragua has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Nicaragua's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including establishing a compulsory education age.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

Nicaraguan law is not clear regarding the age up to which education is compulsory. Article 121 of the Constitution states that primary school education is compulsory; however, it does not specify an age. (29) Under Articles 19 and 23 of the Education Law, education is compulsory only through the sixth grade, which it specifies is up to age 12 and the end of primary school. (35) Article 43 of the Childhood and Adolescence Code states that both primary and secondary school education are compulsory, suggesting up to age 17; however, it does not specifically state an age. (28) The lack of clarity regarding the age up to which education is compulsory, and the potential gap between the compulsory education age and the minimum age for work, may leave children vulnerable to child labor, including its worst forms. (36)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Labor (MITRAB)	Enforces labor laws and sets child labor policy priorities. Conducts labor inspections through its General Labor Inspectorate, and conducts child labor inspections through its Child Labor Inspections Unit. (10,17) Conducts training on child labor issues and inspections. Maintains a mailbox in each of Nicaragua's 17 departments to receive complaints of child labor violations. (10,17)
Nicaraguan National Police	Addresses cases of child labor and human trafficking through the Police Intelligence Unit, which detects crimes, and the Special Crimes Unit, which investigates crimes. Maintains a hotline for reporting violations of children's rights. (10,17)
Ministry of Governance	Coordinates participation between MITRAB and the Nicaraguan National Police in labor inspections in which employers resist inspection. (10,17)
Prosecutor's Office	Prosecutes cases of child trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and the use of children in illicit activities. Contains 2 national-level and 35 department-level prosecutors who prosecute these and other crimes. (10,17)
Human Rights Attorney for Children	Assists in the enforcement of laws related to child labor and hazardous child labor. (10,17)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Nicaragua took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor (MITRAB) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

In 2021, a total of 14,815 labor inspections were conducted, representing approximately 153 inspections carried out by each inspector. This is a high number of inspections conducted by each inspector, and it is likely that this high number impacts the quality of such inspections. (10) The government conducted 2,281 child labor specific inspections, all of which were carried out in worksites. (10,37) During inspections several children were identified working in the agricultural sector, hotels, and restaurants and were immediately removed from these child labor situations. (37,39) A lack of resources may hinder MITRAB's capacity to enforce child labor laws. (8,9) For example, the number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Nicaragua's workforce, which includes more than 3 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Nicaragua would need to employ about 201 inspectors. (40,41) Although the government maintains that its budget for the inspectorate is sufficient, civil organizations indicate that funding levels do not permit the inspectorate to address the scope of the problem. For example, reports indicate that Nicaragua has a large informal and rural workforce, and the General Labor Inspectorate is unable to cover the country's vulnerabilities to, and the magnitude of, labor violations adequately. (1,9) The government indicated that 42 percent of the Ministry of Labor's overall budget goes to labor inspections. (10,37)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Nicaragua took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the insufficient allocation of resources to inform monitoring and investigations of the worst forms of child labor.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Unknown (1)	Unknown (10)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (1)	N/A (10)
Refresher Courses Provided	Unknown (1)	Unknown (10)
Number of Investigations	7 (1)	Unknown (61)
Number of Violations Found	7 (1)	Unknown (61)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	7 (1)	Unknown (61)
Number of Convictions	9 (1)	Unknown (61)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Yes (1)	Unknown (61)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (1)	Yes (10)

While comprehensive information about the training provided to criminal law enforcement investigators was unavailable, reports indicate that government officials, including police and prosecutors, received training on trafficking in persons issues during the reporting period. (10,21)

The government reported it presented 28 criminal accusations for crimes related to the commercial sexual exploitation of minors, and 7 for trafficking in persons in which the victims were minors; however, this number is low compared to the severity of the problem in the country. (1,10,37) Moreover, the government does not publicize the judicial proceedings and independent observers are unable to verify arrests, detentions, and convictions of individuals. (42) Research indicates that criminal law enforcement agencies lack sufficient financial resources to adequately carry out criminal investigations. In addition, research points out that all government efforts related to the worst forms of child labor do not adequately address the scope of the problem. (43)

The Ministry of the Family, Adolescence, and Childhood (MIFAN) maintains a hotline for receiving reports on human trafficking and commercial sexual exploitation, as well as assists in providing officials with training on child labor violations. (44) Although MIFAN also maintains a guide for assisting child victims of commercial sexual exploitation, reports indicate that the government had no formal procedures for the identification of human trafficking victims among high-risk populations, including children who are trafficked for commercial sexual exploitation. (22)

MINIMAL ADVANCEMENT

While there is a reciprocal referral mechanism between criminal authorities and social services in the country, there is no information as to the extent it is used or how effective it is. (10)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Social Welfare System	Coordinates efforts on child labor and ensures that government institutions protect the rights of children and provide social services to them as part of its mandate to assist the Nicaraguan population. Comprises various government ministries, including MITRAB; the Ministry of the Family, Adolescence, and Childhood (MIFAN); the Ministry of Education (MINED); the Ministry of Health (MINSAL); and the Ministry of Governance. (10) Reports indicate that it was active during the reporting period. (37)
National Coalition Against Trafficking in Persons (NCATIP)	Coordinates efforts to address human trafficking for labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Led by the Ministry of Governance and comprises law enforcement agencies, the Supreme Court of Justice, and NGOs. (10,20,45) During the reporting year, it met monthly, while its 17 departmental committees met regularly. (10)

Although the National Coalition Against Trafficking in Persons (NCATIP) led several working groups in 2021, for the fifth year in a row NCATIP did not engage local civil society, despite being required to do so by law. Local civil society organizations were also unable to corroborate increased NCATIP activity in the local working groups, and in general, the government did not coordinate with or fund NGOs. (1,10,13,16,20-22) Some civil organizations report a continued dismantling of once-active NCATIP regional committees and state that it has had no measurable impact since its creation. (21,42) NCATIP has still not announced or appointed a person to the position of Executive Secretariat, which is mandated by the Law Against Trafficking in Persons. (1,10)

Reporting indicates that the National Social Welfare System does not have a specific and consistent coordinating mechanism due to limited coordination among constituent ministries and a lack of financial resources dedicated to addressing child labor. (15)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation of key national policies.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
Good Government Plan	Sets development goals for government ministries, including MITRAB, MINED, and MINSAL. Prioritizes human trafficking investigations; aims to protect children from commercial sexual exploitation; and commits to training teachers by creating 1,000 primary school teaching positions and increasing access to education, including for indigenous and Afro-descendant children. (47) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement the Good Government Plan.
National Action Plan on Human Trafficking (2018–2022)	Focused on awareness raising, capacity building, trainings, victim attention and protection, and monitoring. The Supreme Court of Justice oversaw the design and implementation of the plan. IOM collaborated by editing the document and provided training for government officials. (13) In 2021, the government participated in an IOM social media anti-trafficking in persons awareness campaign called Recognize the Signs ( Atendé las Señales ). The government also reported carrying out informational meetings with tourism centers, trainings for judicial staff, meetings with high school parent-teacher associations, and radio programs on the topic of trafficking in persons. (10) It also provided post-graduate training to 56 government officials on the topic of trafficking in persons, and coordinated a virtual workshop with 84 government officials on the Protocol for the Repatriation of Trafficking in Persons Victims. (10)
National Strategy for the Comprehensive Care and Assistance to Victims of Human Trafficking	Describes the process for identifying and assisting victims of human trafficking. (48) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement the National Strategy for the Comprehensive Care and Assistance to Victims of Human Trafficking.

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the insufficient scope of their operations.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Love Program ( Programa Amor )†	MIFAN program that supports vulnerable or impoverished children, including children involved in child labor such as street work. Provides educational assistance for children and vocational training for parents. (49) Promotes school attendance, house-to-house and school visits, and extra-curricular activities. (1) Overseen by Nicaragua's Vice President in coordination with MINED, MINSA, MITRAB, and the Ministry of Governance. (49) Allows MIFAN to carry out activities with other government institutions, civil society, and religious organizations, as well as with communities and families. (1) Its Love Program for the Smallest Ones includes children from birth to age 6. (49) Conducted 1,409 nationwide door-to-door visits to families of children ages 6 and under to promote school attendance, as well as 47,102 school and door-to-door awareness visits to at-risk families to support continued schooling in 2021. It also provided 2,951 adolescents with seed funding and/or technical education. (10) During the reporting period, the government supported 22,912 at-risk children to enter the school system. This resulted in 22,454 of the students staying in school and 21,308 of them passing their grade. (10) The government provided 3,352 families with at least eight foodstuff packages through a handout program that benefits mothers of two or more children. These packages benefitted 6,267 children under the age of 12. (10) They also assisted 43 children or adolescents currently living under government protection to receive identification documents. (10)
Educational Bridges ( Puentes Educativos )†	MITRAB and MINED public-private partnership implemented by World Vision that provides education to children of coffee workers to prevent child labor during coffee harvests. (50,51) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken during the reporting period to implement the Educational Bridges program.
Integral School Meal Program ( Merienda Escolar )†	MIFAN and WFP initiative that provides children and adolescents with meals at school to address poverty and improve attendance. (44) In 2021, the government reported providing this assistance to 100 percent of students in public schools, and independent reports indicate that this program was active during the year. (39,52) The government reinforced the aid provided through the program several times in the areas worst affected by hurricanes Eta and Iota, providing children in 15 municipalities with an extra meal. (53)
National School Supply Program ( Paquetes Escolares Solidarios )†	MINED program that distributes packages of school supplies to preschool, primary, and secondary school children in the poorest districts to increase attendance and completion rates. (44) In 2021, the government provided one million school supply packages to students and 60 thousand briefcases to teachers. (54)
Women for Life, Peace, and Wellbeing Plan ( Plan Mujeres por la Vida, Paz y Bien )†	Government initiative that began in February 2020. Provides critical attention to victims of domestic violence, sexual violence, and human trafficking. (1) Mostly consists of awareness-raising activities. (1) The government reported 106,040 participants either received a door-to-door visit, or participated in a workshop, forum, or a recreational activity during the reporting period. (10)

† Program is funded by the Government of Nicaragua.

‡ The government had other social programs that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (1,10,37,55)

The government reports that there are 272 Child Development Centers (pre-school and after-school centers), of which 160 receive public funding, this is an effort to increase schooling for children under the age of six. (10)

MIFAN coordinates services for child trafficking victims, including access to medical and legal services, as well as education. (22,18,37) Yet, the country still lacks adequate services for human trafficking victims, such as shelters and specialized services for victims with disabilities and male trafficking victims. Furthermore, child trafficking victims have at times been returned to their families despite the risk of re-victimization. (22)

The scope of current social programs is not sufficient to assist children who are subjected to human trafficking or engaged in the worst forms of child labor, including commercial sexual exploitation. (17)

Civil society organizations in Nicaragua and international organizations have raised concerns about a law that was passed in December 2020, which they state has had a significant negative impact in the ability of independent civil society organizations to carry out their work. (56,57) This law requires NGOs, individuals, and other entities receiving funds from outside the country to register with the Interior Ministry as "foreign agents" and provide detailed reports of their finances. If they fail to do as mandated, they could face hefty fines, jail time, and seizure of their property. (57,58) Critics state that the law has served to silence civil society. Reports indicate that numerous civil society organizations have been forced to close or suspend their activities in the country, including groups working on children's issues and education, which may increase the vulnerability of children to exploitation. (56,57,59,60)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Nicaragua (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

Area	Suggested Action	Year(s) Suggested
Legal Framework	Ensure that the law is consistent and provides a compulsory education age that is not less than the minimum age for work.	2014 – 2021
Enforcement	Ensure that all criminal investigators receive training and refresher courses.	2019 – 2021
	Increase the number of labor inspectors from 97 to 201 to meet the ILO's technical advice.	2009 – 2021
	Publish labor law enforcement information on the number of inspections conducted at worksites, and on the number of child labor violations for which penalties were imposed and collected.	2015 – 2021
	Ensure that the Ministry of Labor has sufficient funding to enforce labor laws adequately, including those related to child labor, and that resource needs are met.	2018 – 2021
	Ensure that criminal law enforcement efforts are sufficient to address the scope of the problem and that agencies have the funding and resources necessary to carry out duties.	2014 – 2021
	Establish an adequate mechanism for identifying human trafficking victims, particularly children, among high-risk populations.	2018 – 2021

In 2021, Niger made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor.

The government created the National Steering Committee to Combat Child Labor. In addition, Niger signed a memorandum of understanding with Nigeria, formalizing cooperation agreements between the two governments to improve their collective response to human trafficking. Further, the government developed a National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons and a Plan for Social and Economic Development. However, children in Niger are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in hereditary slavery and mining, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. Children also perform dangerous tasks herding livestock. The minimum age for work does not meet international standards because it does not apply to children in unpaid or non-contractual work. In addition, the government made no efforts to address the ongoing practice of wahaya, a form of child slavery that was upheld as illegal by a Nigerien court in 2019. Lastly, gaps in labor law enforcement also remain, including insufficient funding for labor inspectors to conduct inspections.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Niger are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in hereditary slavery and mining, each sometimes as a result of human trafficking. (1-3) Children also perform dangerous tasks herding livestock. (4) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Niger.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	42.9 (2,516,191)
Attending School (%)	7 to 14	48.0
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	22.1
Primary Completion Rate (%)		51.2

Source for primary completion rate: Data from 2020, published by UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (5)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Demographic and Health Survey (DHS), 2012. (6)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

Sector/Industry	Activity
Agriculture	Production of rice, fruits, nuts, and vegetables (4,7,8)
	Herding and caring for livestock, including cattle, sheep, goats, and fowl (8,9)
	Fishing, including river net casting (10)

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor†	Commercial sexual exploitation, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (3,4,14,18,19)
	Forced recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict (3,4,16)
	Hereditary and caste-based slavery, including for cattle herding, agricultural work, domestic work, and sexual exploitation (3,4,14,18)
	Forced begging (1,3,4,14,18,20-22)
	Forced labor in domestic work and mining (3,13,14)

† Determined by national law or regulation as hazardous and, as such, relevant to Article 3(d) of ILO C. 182.

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Children in Niger, especially boys and girls from the Arab, Djerma, Peulh, Tuareg, and Toubou ethnic minorities, continue to be exploited as slaves and endure slavery-like practices, particularly in the regions of Tahoua and Agadez. (4,16) Some children are born into slavery; others are born free but remain in a dependent status and are forced to work with their parents for their former masters in exchange for food, money, and lodging. (8,14,24,25) A particular form of slavery in Niger is the wahaya practice, in which men buy girls born into slavery, often between ages 9 and 14, as “fifth wives.” Even though Niger’s Supreme Court set legal precedent by ruling wahaya to be illegal in 2019, the government has made limited efforts to inform the public of the court’s ruling. (4,10,26) Child slaves, including those involved in the practice of wahaya, are forced to work long hours as cattle herders, agricultural workers, or domestic workers, and are often sexually exploited. (14,18,24,27) As with those involved in hereditary slavery, the children of wahaya wives are considered slaves and are passed from one owner to another as gifts or as part of dowries. (9,14,18,24,27,28)

In Niger, some Koranic teachers known as marabouts are known to subject their students, boys known as talibés, to manual labor or forced begging rather than providing them with a religious education. (1,3,4,18) Children in Niger participating in seasonal migration or migrant children from West Africa traveling to Algeria and Libya may also be subject to forced begging, or commercial sexual exploitation as a result of human trafficking. (20,22,29-31) In addition, Niger has a form of internal child trafficking called confiage, in which family members send their children to live with relatives or friends with promises of better educational or trade learning opportunities. However, some children are instead subjected to exploitation, including forced labor, sex trafficking, and domestic work. (14) Research indicates that the growing insecurity in some regions of the country due to extremist activity has seen an increase in children working in domestic service and street begging. (4)

Although the Constitution guarantees free education, school fees are often required. A lack of school infrastructure and school materials, and limited availability of teachers, especially in rural areas, impedes access to education, which may increase the vulnerability of children to the worst forms of child labor. (4) During the reporting period, hundreds of schools were closed due to insecurity and attacks by extremist groups in the Tillabéri, Tahoua, and Diffa regions. (4)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Niger has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Niger's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

Standard	Meets International Standards	Age	Legislation
Minimum Age for Work	No	14	Article 106 of the Labor Code (32)
Minimum Age for Hazardous Work	Yes	18	Article 159 of Decree No. 2017-682 (33)

Prohibition of Forced Labor	Yes		Article 14 of the Constitution; Article 4 and 107 of the Labor Code; Article 158 of Decree No. 2017-682; Article 270 of the Penal Code; Articles 2 and 10 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons (32-36)
Prohibition of Child Trafficking	Yes		Article 107 of the Labor Code; Article 158 of Decree No. 2017-682; Articles 2 and 10 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons; Article 16 of the Law 2015-36 on Illicit Traffic of Migrants (32,33,36,37)
Prohibition of Commercial Sexual Exploitation of Children	Yes		Article 107 of the Labor Code; Article 158 of Decree No. 2017-682; Articles 291 and 292 of the Penal Code; Articles 2 and 10 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons (32-34,36)
Prohibition of Using Children in Illicit Activities	Yes		Article 107 of the Labor Code; Article 158 of Decree No. 2017-682; Article 181 of the Penal Code; Articles 10 and 16 of the Law on Combating Trafficking in Persons (32-34,36)
Minimum Age for Voluntary State Military Recruitment	Yes	18	Article 107 of the Labor Code (32)
Prohibition of Compulsory Recruitment of Children by (State) Military	N/A*
Prohibition of Military Recruitment by Non-state Armed Groups	Yes		Article 107 of the Labor Code (32)
Compulsory Education Age	No		Article 8 of Decree No. 2017-935; Article 2 of the Law on the Orientation of the Educational System (38,39)
Free Public Education	Yes		Article 23 of the Constitution; Article 8 of Decree No. 2017-935; Article 2 of the Law on the Orientation of the Educational System (35,38,39)

* Country has no conscription (40)

Although the Labor Code establishes age 14 as the minimum age for work, it does not apply to workers in the informal economy, which does not conform to international standards that require all children to be protected under the law establishing a minimum age for work. (32,41) In addition, Article 2 of the Law on the Orientation of the Educational System in Niger guarantees education for all children ages 4 to 18, and Article 8 of Decree No. 2017-935 states that the government is required to promote access to compulsory education, particularly for young girls. However, Niger's law does not clearly articulate to which age groups the latter provision applies, thereby leaving some children at risk of not being covered and increasing the risk of children's involvement in child labor. (38,39)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Ministry of Employment, Labor and Social Security (MELSS)	Enforces labor laws and investigates Labor Code infractions, including those on child and forced labor. Conducts awareness-raising programs to address child labor. (4,31,42)
National Civil Police Force Morals and Minors Brigade	Investigates criminal cases involving minors, including issues pertaining to human trafficking, commercial sexual exploitation, and hereditary slavery. Housed under the Ministry of Interior and Public Security. (4,11,18,43)
Ministry of Justice's District and Magistrate Courts	Enforce criminal laws related to child labor through 10 district courts and 30 magistrate courts. (4,11,42)
National Human Rights Commission	Receives complaints related to child labor, including its worst forms, and conducts investigations of human rights violations, including hereditary slavery. (4,42)

Niger's labor inspection agencies do not have the necessary funds, resources or staff to be able to carry out their duties in all regions, especially in the informal sector and in remote locations. (4)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Niger took actions to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Employment, Labor and Social Security that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including lack of human resources.

Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (16)	Yes (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (16)	Yes (4)

During the reporting period, labor inspectors received training on child labor laws, in collaboration with the ILO and the Government of Germany. (4)

Despite an increase in the number of labor inspectors—from 57 to 60—the total number of labor inspectors is likely insufficient for the size of Niger's workforce, which includes approximately 9.2 million workers. (4,16) According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 40,000 workers in less developed countries, Niger would need to employ about 231 labor inspectors. (44,45) During the reporting period, the government did not collect or publish general data on child labor or the worst forms of child labor, nor did it provide information on the number of inspections conducted, violations found, penalties imposed, and penalties collected. (4)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Niger took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of the criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including insufficient allocation of financial resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021
Initial Training for New Criminal Investigators	Yes (16)	Yes (4)
Training on New Laws Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	N/A (16)	N/A (4)
Refresher Courses Provided	Yes (16)	Yes (4)
Number of Investigations	Unknown (16)	Unknown (4)
Number of Violations Found	Unknown (16)	Unknown (4)
Number of Prosecutions Initiated	Unknown (16)	Unknown (4)
Number of Convictions	Unknown (16)	Unknown (4)
Imposed Penalties for Violations Related to the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Unknown (16)	Unknown (4)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Criminal Authorities and Social Services	Yes (16)	Yes (4)

Research found that inadequate resources, including insufficient personnel, funding, and training, hamper the capacity of criminal law enforcement authorities to coordinate and enforce laws related to the worst forms of child labor. (2,4,46) The National Agency to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migrant Transport (ANLTP/TIM) maintains and publicizes a hotline to report trafficking in persons crimes, but the number of calls received by the hotline that involve child trafficking is unknown. In addition, although the exact number of children removed from the worst forms of child labor is unavailable, removal of children from child labor occurs only in extreme cases of exploitation, such as child trafficking or forced labor, according to the Ministry of Employment, Labor and Social Security. (4,47) The government did not provide information on investigations, violations, prosecutions, and convictions for inclusion in this report. (4)

Even though the Nigerien Supreme Court ruled the practice of wahaya to be illegal in 2019, reinforcing the 2003 Penal Code that prohibits this practice, research found enforcement to be negligible and that it is still common practice in some parts of the country. Research indicates that there was no evidence of efforts to raise awareness of this ruling during the reporting period. (13,14,16,34) In addition, a civil society organization specializing in assisting victims of hereditary slavery reported that most victims do not come forward or file complaints against their former masters due to a lack of reintegration services and dependency on their former masters. (8,13)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including a lack of efficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee to Combat Child and Forced Labor*	Formed by the government on September 14, 2021, the National Steering Committee to Combat Child and Forced Labor. Led by MELSS and includes 17 Nigerien ministries and agencies with the purpose of finalizing Niger's National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. (4,48) Intends to develop a new plan to eliminate child labor, including a hazardous work list. Replaces the National Steering Committee on Child Labor. (4,48)
National Commission to Coordinate Efforts to Combat Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migrant Transport (CNCLTP/TIM)	Coordinates efforts to address human trafficking, and develops and implements policies and programs related to human trafficking. (3,4,19,36) Includes representatives from MELSS and civil society organizations. (31,49) During the reporting period, held six meeting sessions. (31)
National Committee to Combat Child Labor in Agriculture	Coordinates policies and programs to address child labor in agriculture. Chaired by the Ministry of Agriculture, includes representatives from MELSS, the Ministry for the Promotion of Women and Child Protection, and non-governmental stakeholders. (50) Research was unable to determine whether the National Committee to Combat Child Labor in Agriculture was active during the reporting period.

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
Child Protection Committees	Educate the public on the rights of children in order to limit abuses, including child labor. (13,51) Research was unable to determine whether the Child Protection Committees were active during the reporting period.
Ministry for the Promotion of Women and Child Protection	Works with law enforcement officials to provide vulnerable children with social and reintegration services, including education and counseling, in 54 Centers for Prevention, Promotion, and Protection across the country. (4,11,52,53) Research was unable to determine whether the Ministry for Promotion of Women and Child Protection was active during the reporting period.
National Agency to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migrant Transport	Implements policies and programs developed by CNCLTP/TIM, conducts awareness campaigns about human trafficking, provides training and education to reduce the risk of human trafficking, and maintains a hotline to receive complaints concerning human trafficking. (3,4,49,54)

* Mechanism to coordinate efforts to address child labor was created during the reporting period.

During the reporting period, the government took steps to formalize coordination efforts. (4) In November 2021, the government signed an MOU with Nigeria, formalizing and operationalizing cooperation agreements between law enforcement agencies in order to improve the two countries' collective response to trafficking in persons (TIP). The MOU will also implement awareness campaigns to educate populations on the risks of being targeted by traffickers. (31) Further, the ANLTP/TIM held multiple trainings on TIP issues, including child protection for judiciary, law enforcement, military, and civil society members, as well as international organization staff in 2021. Trainings were organized in collaboration with UNODC, ILO, and other organizations. (31) The ANLTP/TIM also held trainings on the implementation of the TIP National Referral Mechanism, which was enacted in 2019. (31)

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of coverage of all worst forms of child labor.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2019–2023)	Aims to enhance the legal framework to prevent human trafficking, adequately implement the laws, and provide effective protection and care for victims, including children. Led by the National Agency to Fight Against Trafficking in Persons and Illegal Migrant Transport. (13,55,56) Continued to be implemented during the reporting period. (4)
Plan for Social and Economic Development (2017–2021)	Aims to promote sustainable development and social equality. Overseen by the Ministry of Planning. (19,57) Includes activities to improve access to education for vulnerable populations, especially migrant children, and to address street work and forced begging by children. (57) In 2021, the government developed a new Plan for Social and Economic Development for 2022–2026, which will place new emphasis on expanding education. Continued to be implemented during the reporting period. (4,8)
National Social Protection Strategy	Aims to improve the quality of, and access to, basic education and health services; includes strategies to address child labor. Overseen by the Ministry for the Promotion of Women and Child Protection. (18,58) Continued to be implemented during the reporting period. (4)
UN Development Assistance Framework (2019–2022)	Promotes improved access to education for vulnerable children and aims to build government capacity to address child labor. Operates under the direction of the Ministry of Planning and receives support from international donors. (2,59) Extended for an additional year into 2022. Continued to be implemented during the reporting period. (4)
Education and Training Sectorial Program (2014–2024)	Sets out a comprehensive map to improve the quality of, and access to, basic and higher education. Led by the Ministry of Education. (19,60) Continued to be implemented during the reporting period. (4)

‡ The government had other policies that may have addressed child labor issues or had an impact on child labor. (19)

During the reporting period, the National Commission to Coordinate Efforts to Combat Trafficking in Persons drafted a new National Action Plan to Combat Trafficking in Persons (2022–2026), which aims to align Niger's laws to international standards, and is expected to be adopted in 2022. (31) In addition, the government formed the National Steering Committee to Combat Child and Forced Labor, which is expected to continue developing the National Action Plan to Combat Child Labor. The Plan, drafted in 2015, aims to eliminate the worst forms of child labor in Niger by 2025 but has not been adopted yet. (4,10)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
Centers for the Prevention, Protection, and Promotion of Persons†	Government program replacing the Judicial and Preventive Education Services, in collaboration with UNICEF, to provide food, shelter, education, and vocational training to street children, many of whom are victims of child labor. (1,52) In 2021, the program continued but research could not find information on activities or how many of the 54 existing centers continue to be open. (2,4,13,16,53)
Global Action Against Trafficking in Persons and the Smuggling of Migrants	$12.2 million EU-funded global project implemented by UNODC, UNICEF, and IOM to address human trafficking and migrant smuggling. (61,62) Research was unable to determine whether activities were undertaken to implement the Global Action Against Trafficking in Persons and the Smuggling of Migrants program during the reporting period.
UNICEF Country Program (2019–2021)	UNICEF-funded program to support the government's efforts to improve children's education, birth registration rates, and social inclusion, and to strengthen child protection programs, including for children of refugees in the Diffa region. (63–65) The UNICEF Country Program was extended until 2022. (4)
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL-funded global projects implemented by ILO to support global and national efforts aimed at countering child labor and the forced labor of adults and children. Includes From Protocol to Practice: A Bridge to Global Action on Forced Labor (The Bridge Project), to support global and national efforts aimed at addressing forced labor of adults and children under the 2014 ILO Protocol and supporting Recommendation to C.29 on Forced Labor, which has been extended through November 2022 with additional funding from ILO (4,66,67); and the Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement (MAP 16) Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor (2019–March 2022), a $200,000 program. (68) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.

† Program is funded by the Government of Niger.

Although Niger has programs that target child labor, the scope of these programs is insufficient to fully address the problem, especially in agriculture, herding, mining, and caste-based servitude. Niger also lacks a specific program to assist children exploited by religious instructors. (2–4,46) In addition, the resources and facilities available to social services agencies remain inadequate. (2–4)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Niger (Table 11).

Table 11. Suggested Government Actions to Eliminate Child Labor

In 2021, Nigeria made moderate advancement in efforts to eliminate the worst forms of child labor. The government validated the National Policy on Child Labor and the National Action Plan for the Elimination of Child Labor (2021–2025). The Ministry of Labor and Employment also created a new program to provide vulnerable households with seed capital to fund new businesses in areas with high rates of child labor. However, children in Nigeria are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and use in armed conflict as well as quarrying granite and artisanal mining. The Child's Right Act has been adopted by only 29 out of Nigeria's 36 states (including the capital federal territory), leaving the remaining 7 states in northern Nigeria with legal statutes that do not meet international standards for the prohibition of children in illicit activities. In addition, the minimum age for work in the Labor Act does not apply to children who are self-employed or working in the informal economy.

I. PREVALENCE AND SECTORAL DISTRIBUTION OF CHILD LABOR

Children in Nigeria are subjected to the worst forms of child labor, including in commercial sexual exploitation and use in armed conflict as well as quarrying granite and artisanal mining. (1) Table 1 provides key indicators on children's work and education in Nigeria. Data on some of these indicators are not available from the sources used in this report.

Table 1. Statistics on Children's Work and Education

Children	Age	Percent
Working (% and population)	5 to 14	47.5 (Unavailable)
Attending School (%)	5 to 14	76.6
Combining Work and School (%)	7 to 14	39.9
Primary Completion Rate (%)		Unavailable

Primary completion rate was unavailable from UNESCO Institute for Statistics, 2022. (2)

Source for all other data: International Labor Organization's analysis of statistics from Multiple Indicator Cluster Survey 5 (MICS 5), 2016–2017. (3)

Based on a review of available information, Table 2 provides an overview of children's work by sector and activity.

Table 2. Overview of Children's Work by Sector and Activity

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

Sector/Industry	Activity
Categorical Worst Forms of Child Labor‡	Commercial sexual exploitation, including use in the production of pornography, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,5,11,12)
	Forced labor in begging; domestic work; street vending; textile manufacturing; mining and quarrying gravel, granite, and artisanal gold; and agriculture, including in cocoa (5,8,11-13)
	Recruitment of children by non-state armed groups for use in armed conflict and in non-conflict support roles, sometimes as a result of human trafficking (1,8)

‡ Child labor understood as the worst forms of child labor per se under Article 3(a)–(c) of ILO C. 182.

Nigeria continues to be a source, transit, and destination country for forced labor and sex trafficking of both adults and children. Trafficked Nigerians are recruited from primarily rural areas within the country, with women and girls recruited for domestic service and sex trafficking while boys are recruited for street vending, domestic service, mining, agriculture, and begging. (1) Benin City, the capital of Edo State, continues to be a major human trafficking hub in Africa, but increased enforcement efforts may have caused some human trafficking rings to shift their focus to other areas of southern Nigeria. (14) Girls from Nigeria are also sent to North Africa and Europe for forced labor and commercial sexual exploitation. (15) Children from West African countries experience forced labor in Nigeria, including in granite and gold mines. (12,16,17)

Despite notable military advances and proclamations of Boko Haram’s defeat by government forces, the group remained a security threat, with escalating attacks by both Boko Haram and ISIS West Africa (ISIS-WA) that force people out of Nigeria’s northeastern regions. These attacks have contributed to the displacement of more than 2 million people, of which 56 percent were children. (18-20)

Rapid population growth in Nigeria is driving the informal education sector, with several million boys in the north going to Quranic schools known as Almajiri. The Almajiri system includes a component of child labor, with some teachers tasking older children with menial jobs and other children coerced into forced begging. (1,8,16) Furthermore, these children are highly vulnerable to recruitment by Boko Haram and ISIS-WA, which continued to forcibly recruit and use child soldiers in combat and support roles, and as suicide bombers and concubines. The government does not officially recognize these schools, and students attending Almajiri schools are officially considered out of school. (1)

UNICEF reported that as of January 2022, at least 10.5 million children, or one-third of all Nigerian children, are out of school in Nigeria, making it the highest out-of-school rate in the world. Northeastern and northwestern states have female primary net attendance rates of 47.7 percent and 47.3 percent. (1,21) The widespread increase in kidnappings, killings, village raids, and cattle-rustling throughout the North West and North Central regions led by organized criminal groups has also contributed to the intermittent closure of schools throughout the region with these challenges being more acute in rural areas. (1,21)

Although free and compulsory education is federally mandated by the Education Act, little enforcement of compulsory education laws occurs at the state level. School fees are often charged in practice, and the cost of materials can be prohibitive for families. (5,8) In addition to the lack of funds, parents also need the children’s assistance in household chores and with caring for younger siblings. (8) When families experience economic hardship, the enrollment of boys is typically prioritized over the enrollment of girls. Other barriers to education include a lack of trained teachers, sexual harassment, inadequate sanitation facilities, poor infrastructure, and fear of abduction or attack by Boko Haram while at school, particularly for girls in the northeastern part of the country. (1,5,10,17,19,22)

Reports suggest that children lacking birth certificates or other formal documentation have been denied access to public schools. Although it is unclear how widespread this issue is, research suggests that it is most common in the northeastern region and rural areas. (8)

II. LEGAL FRAMEWORK FOR CHILD LABOR

Nigeria has ratified all key international conventions concerning child labor (Table 3).

Table 3. Ratification of International Conventions on Child Labor

Convention	Ratification

ILO C. 182, Worst Forms of Child Labor	✓
 UN CRC	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on Armed Conflict	✓
UN CRC Optional Protocol on the Sale of Children, Child Prostitution and Child Pornography	✓
 Palermo Protocol on Trafficking in Persons	✓

The government has established laws and regulations related to child labor (Table 4). However, gaps exist in Nigeria's legal framework to adequately protect children from the worst forms of child labor, including the minimum age for work.

Table 4. Laws and Regulations on Child Labor

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, Nigeria entered into Memorandums of Understanding to counter human trafficking with the Governments of Niger, Burkina Faso, and Cote d'Ivoire. (30) In addition, Sokoto and Jigawa States adopted the Child's Right Act (CRA). The legislatures in Kebbi and Yobe States have also approved the law and are awaiting their governors' signatures to ratify the bill. (1)

The CRA codifies the rights of children in Nigeria and implements the core principles that were enshrined in the 1989 Convention on the Rights of the Child (CRC) and the 1990 African Union Charter on the Rights and Welfare of the Child. Each state must adopt and implement the act in its territory for the CRA to become law. (24,31,32) However, only 29 of the 36 states have adopted and implemented the CRA, leaving the 7 remaining states in northern Nigeria with legal statutes that do not meet international standards for the prohibition against the use of children in illicit activities. (24,27,31,32) Furthermore, the CRA upholds certain portions of the Labor Act that are not in compliance with international child labor standards. This includes Section 59, which sets the minimum age for employment at age 12 in contradiction to the CRA, which only permits children under age 18 to engage in light work for family members. (23,24) The minimum age for work is lower than the compulsory education age, which may encourage children to leave school before the completion of compulsory education. (23,24,29)

Although the Labor Act forbids the employment of youth under age 18 in work that is dangerous to their health, safety, or morals, it does not establish the types of hazardous activity that are prohibited to children under age 18. (23,33) The National Steering Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor developed a report in 2013 that identified hazardous child labor in Nigeria; however, the government has yet to determine by law or regulation the types of hazardous work prohibited for children. (4,33) The Labor Act also permits children of any age to do light work in agriculture and domestic work if they are working with a family member, which does not meet international standards. Furthermore, the minimum age protections in the Labor Act do not apply to children who are self-employed or working in the informal economy. (23,33) Lastly, children are not excluded from the Terrorism Prevention Act's penalty of life imprisonment for assisting in acts of terrorism. (34)

III. ENFORCEMENT OF LAWS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established institutional mechanisms for the enforcement of laws and regulations on child labor (Table 5). However, gaps exist within the operations of enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate enforcement of their child labor laws.

Table 5. Agencies Responsible for Child Labor Law Enforcement

Organization/Agency	Role
Labor Inspectorate, Ministry of Labor and Employment (MLE)	Deploys labor inspectors across 36 state labor offices and the federal capital territory to enforce federal child labor laws. On April 15, 2021, the Ministry launched the commemoration for the International Year for the Elimination of Child Labor, which prioritized the elimination of child labor, forced labor, modern slavery, and human trafficking. (5,35-37)
National Agency for the Prohibition of Trafficking in Persons and Other Related Matters (NAPTIP)	Enforces laws against human trafficking and exploitative labor. Coordinates with the Ministry of Women's Affairs and Social Development and state governments to provide child labor survivors with social services and reunite trafficked children with their families. (5,11,35) Operates hotlines for survivors in Abuja and each zonal command center. (14)
Nigeria Police	Enforce all laws prohibiting forced child labor and commercial sexual exploitation. Collaborate with NAPTIP on human trafficking enforcement. (5)
Nigeria Immigration Service	Collaborates with NAPTIP to enforce laws against child trafficking. (5)
Edo State Task Force Against Human Trafficking	Enforces the Edo State Trafficking in Persons Prohibition Law and other laws prohibiting trafficking in persons and investigates all cases of child trafficking and forced child labor. Includes an Investigation and Security Unit tasked with the prevention and detection of human trafficking cases. (17,38)

Labor Law Enforcement

In 2021, labor law enforcement agencies in Nigeria took action to address child labor (Table 6). However, gaps exist within the operations of the Ministry of Labor and Employment (MLE) that may hinder adequate labor law enforcement, including insufficient human resource allocation.

Table 6. Labor Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Labor Law Enforcement	2020	2021

Unannounced Inspections Conducted	Yes (8)	No (1)
Complaint Mechanism Exists	Yes (8)	Yes (1)
Reciprocal Referral Mechanism Exists Between Labor Authorities and Social Services	Yes (8)	Yes (1)

While the government is permitted to conduct unannounced inspections, it did not do so during the reporting period due to security concerns. (1)

Enforcement of child labor laws remained an issue due to a lack of resources for inspections, including office facilities, transportation, fuel, and other necessities to carry out the number of inspections deemed necessary. In addition, research did not find mechanisms to enforce existing protections for children in the informal sector. (1,8,40,41)

The total number of labor inspectors is insufficient for the size of Nigeria's workforce, which includes approximately 60 million workers. According to the ILO's technical advice of a ratio approaching 1 inspector for every 15,000 workers in industrializing economies, Nigeria would need to employ about 4,005 labor inspectors. (42,43)

Criminal Law Enforcement

In 2021, criminal law enforcement agencies in Nigeria took actions to address child labor (Table 7). However, gaps exist within the operations of criminal enforcement agencies that may hinder adequate criminal law enforcement, including the allocation of resources.

Table 7. Criminal Law Enforcement Efforts Related to Child Labor

Overview of Criminal Law Enforcement	2020	2021

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

During the reporting period, 1,193 children were rescued and removed from child labor situations in 2021. Of those, 120 received social services. (1)

In an official memo dated November 2020 from the Ministry of Defense, the government stated that there were no children in military detention, and since the signing of the memo, children who have been rescued from Boko Haram camps pass through a de-radicalization process that is open to international observers and other interested parties. These efforts were taken in response to past reports of abuse and exploitation within the military's detention system that had occurred in previous years. (12,35,41,44,45)

IV. COORDINATION OF GOVERNMENT EFFORTS ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established mechanisms to coordinate its efforts to address child labor (Table 8). However, gaps exist that hinder the effective coordination of efforts to address child labor, including inefficacy in accomplishing mandates.

Table 8. Key Mechanisms to Coordinate Government Efforts on Child Labor

Coordinating Body	Role & Description
National Steering Committee for the Elimination of the Worst Forms of Child Labor	Coordinates efforts to address child labor. Led by MLE and comprises representatives from seven governmental agencies, faith-based organizations, NGOs, ILO, and UNICEF. (5,8) Members are charged with leveraging resources for project implementation from their institutions and identifying synergies with other existing programs. (5,8) During the reporting period, this committee reviewed and validated the National Policy on Child Labor and the National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor 2021–2025 to conform to the Regional Action Plan on Child Labor. In addition, the committee trained 37 Child Labor Desk Officers across the country on the application of the National Policy on Child Labor and the National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor. (1)
State Steering Committees on the Elimination of Child Labor	Operates in the 36 Nigerian States and executes the provisions of the National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor at sub-national levels. During the reporting period, the State Steering Committee trained media practitioners from the public and private sector on the contents and implementation of the National Social Behavioral Change Communication Strategy. (8) Also, the State Steering Committee held meetings across the country to develop and align local plans with the National Action Plan. (1)
Interministerial Task Force on Trafficking in Persons	Coordinates child labor issues related to human trafficking. Chaired by NAPTIP, the task force is responsible for developing national policies on human trafficking. (5) Research was unable to determine whether the Interministerial Task Force on Trafficking in Persons was active during the reporting period.

V. GOVERNMENT POLICIES ON CHILD LABOR

The government has established policies related to child labor (Table 9). However, policy gaps exist that hinder efforts to address child labor, including a lack of implementation.

Table 9. Key Policies Related to Child Labor

Policy	Description
NAPTIP 2019 Plan of Action	Provides a framework for mobilizing NAPTIP and all stakeholders involved in addressing human trafficking, with an emphasis on enforcement, prosecution, and provision of services to survivors. During the reporting period, NAPTIP continued to support the work of civil society organizations to increase capacity, coordination, and services provision for countering trafficking in persons. (1,8,46)
National Social Behavioral Change Communication Strategy for Elimination of Child Labor in Nigeria (2020–2023)	Addresses child labor at the household and community levels through awareness-raising activities. (8) Research was unable to determine whether any actions were undertaken to implement this policy during the reporting period.
National Action Plan for Preventing and Countering Violent Extremism	Designed to end the recruitment and use of children by the Civilian Joint Task Force (CJTF). Aims to promote the protection of children's rights, ensures that suspects under age 18 are treated in accordance with international law, and provides for disarmament, demobilization, and reintegration for children previously associated with CJTF. (47–49) The UN and CJTF, with the support of the government, continued to reintegrate children during the reporting period. (30)

‡ The government had other policies that may have included the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor. (8)

Since the signing of the National Action Plan for Preventing and Countering Violent Extremism, the UN has reported nearly no use of children by the Civilian Joint Task Force (CJTF). In addition, the UN delisted the CJTF as an armed group using child soldiers, a long-time goal in previous anti-trafficking action plans. (8,30)

During the reporting period, a National Policy of Child Labor and a National Action Plan on the Elimination of Child Labor were validated by the government, with the goal of having a standardized policy and plan of action on child labor throughout the country. The document, which is awaiting adoption, incorporated elimination of forced labor and modern slavery. (8,37)

VI. SOCIAL PROGRAMS TO ADDRESS CHILD LABOR

In 2021, the government funded and participated in programs that include the goal of eliminating or preventing child labor (Table 10). However, gaps exist in these social programs, including the inadequacy of efforts to address the problem in all sectors.

Table 10. Key Social Programs to Address Child Labor

Program	Description
NAPTIP Shelters for Human Trafficking Victims†	Government-funded program that operates 10 shelters in Nigeria, capable of housing up to 315 trafficking survivors. Shelters provide legal, medical, and psychological services, as well as vocational training and business management skills, along with referring survivors to NGOs for additional care. (11,12,16) Shelters continued to operate during the reporting period. (11,12,16)
Safe Schools Initiative	Donor-funded program implemented by the government and international organizations that aims to improve access to education in northeastern Nigeria. (50) Research was unable to determine whether this project was active during the reporting period.
Accelerating Action for the Elimination of Child Labor in Supply Chains in Africa (2018–2022)	ILO-sponsored regional project aimed at eliminating child labor in supply chains, with particular focus on those involved in the production of cocoa, coffee, cotton, gold, and tea. Collaborates with global supply chain actors working in Africa on public policy, good governance, empowerment, representation, partnership, and knowledge sharing. (6) Research was unable to determine whether this project was active during the reporting period.
USDOL-Funded Projects	USDOL-funded projects that aim to eliminate child labor. These projects include: Measurement, Awareness-Raising, and Policy Engagement Project on Child Labor and Forced Labor; a project implemented by ILO to conduct research and develop new survey methodologies, improve awareness, strengthen policies and government capacity, and promote partnerships to address child labor and forced labor; and the ILO Global Accelerator Project, a $10 million project implemented by ILO. (51) Additional information is available on the USDOL website.
World Bank-Funded Programs	Projects aim to improve access to education. Include: National Social Safety Nets Project (2016–2022), a $50 million project that aims to provide primary school lunches and offers conditional cash transfers based on children's enrollment; and the Better Education Service Delivery for All (2017–2022), a $611 million project that aims to increase access to education for out-of-school youth and improve literacy. (52–54) In 2021, the National Social Safety Nets Project continued working to enroll participants in 33 states across the country; 17 focus states have adopted one or more forms of intensive literacy program across 21,035 formal basic education schools. (55) Since its inception, the Better Education Service Delivery for All project has helped reduce the number of out-of-school children by 924,590, of which 633,772 were girls. (54,55)

† Program is funded by the Government of Nigeria.

MLE's new program, Elimination of Child Labor in Child Labor-Endemic Areas, provides recipient households (from the participating states of Adamawa, Ebonyi, and Nasarawa) $240 (N100,000.00) to establish any business of their choice. The program began in November of 2021 and is expected to end in December 2025. (1)

USAID also issued a 5-year award entitled "Strengthening Civic Advocacy and Local Engagement (SCALE)." Working with the National Agency for the Prohibition of Trafficking in Persons and Other Related Matters (NAPTIP), this program will focus on countering trafficking in persons by supporting the work of civil society organizations to increase capacity, coordination, and services provision for countering trafficking in persons. (8)

There are increasing concerns regarding the conditions in shelters housing human trafficking survivors. These conditions include poor housing facilities, a lack of food, and insufficient stipends, along with reports of survivors being held against their will for extended periods at shelters run by the NAPTIP. (41,56)

MODERATE ADVANCEMENT

In addition, research found no evidence of programs to address all relevant worst forms of child labor, including the use of children in armed conflict, quarrying granite, artisanal mining, and commercial sexual exploitation. (8)

VII. SUGGESTED GOVERNMENT ACTIONS TO ELIMINATE CHILD LABOR

Based on the reporting above, suggested actions are identified that would advance the elimination of child labor in Nigeria (Table 11).
